Fierce Battle Being Waged For Kontum

Situation Reported As 'Grim'

SAIGON (UPI) — Tank-led North Vietnamese troops fought through South Vietnamese defense lines today and occupied the northern section of the Central Highlands provincial capital of Kontum. Other Communist forces were reported close to the airfield of the beleagured city, 260 miles north of Saigon.

In the air war, the U.S. command reported American warplanes flew 270 strikes over North Vietnam Friday and one wave of Air Force Phantoms destroyed a 1,500-foot railway bridge only 20 miles from the Chinese border with electronically-guided 2,000-pound "smart bombs."

Field reports said heavy fighting raged through the day inside Kontum and at least one major government military camp. UPI reporter Matt Franjola reported that the situation "looks pretty grim."

Spokesmen said U. S. helicopters firing wire-guided TOW missiles, gunships and ground troops knocked out eight more Communist tanks for a two day "kill" total of 18 of the Soviet-made T54s.

Franjola said 19 waves of B52 bombers scores of tactical air strikes and heavy groundfire were costing the Communists dearly. But he said Communist soldiers also were taking a heavy toll of Kontum's defenders with smallarms, rockets, mortars and artillery.

Government spokesman said South Vietnamese troops killed at least 393 Communists in fighting around Kontum Friday and Saturday they reported government casualties at 32 dead and 84 wounded.

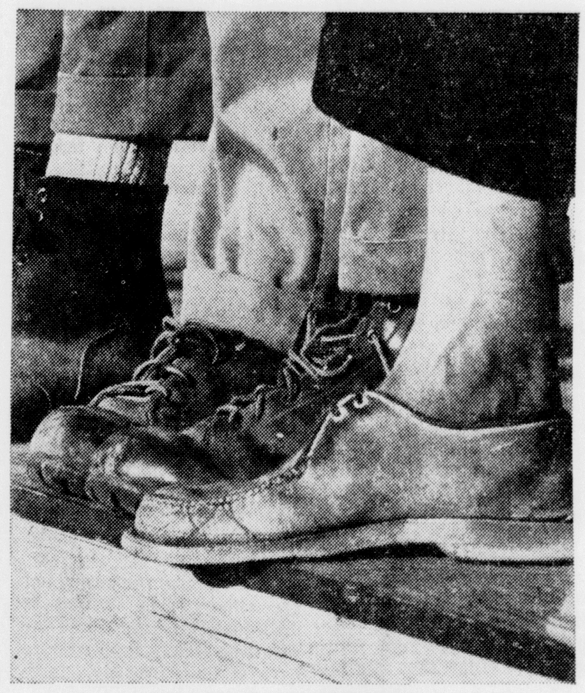

The government has the 44th, 45th and 53rd Regiments committed to the defense of Kontum. Field reports said the North Vietnamese breached the 53rd's defenses and occupied a military area which had been abandoned earlier by the South Vietnamese.

About two regiments of North Vietnamese troops—about 6,000 men were believed involved in the assaults against Kontum.

Field reports said an unknown sized force of Communists was near the airfield, possibly the next objective of the North Vietnamese. The Communists already have cut all land links and defenders depend on U.S. helicopters for ammunition, food and other supplies.

The Communists, who earlier

Soviet Chiefs Ignore Bait On Viet Issue

By STEWART HENSLEY

MOSCOW (UPI) —President Nixon's lengthy discussions of the Vietnam issue with Soviet leaders produced only one thing from the Russians —their advice to send U.S. negotiators back to the bargaining table in Paris.

Russian and American sources agree on this. Visible evidence of Nixon's failure to secure Russian diplomatic intervention came yesterday with disclosure that the two countries were unable to reach any long-term trade agreement.

A broad and comprehensive five-year trade pact, including liberal credit terms and "most-favored nation" treatment, was the bait Nixon dangled before Communist General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev and his colleagues in an effort to enlist the Kremlin's aid for a U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam on honorable terms.

When Soviet and American leaders finally announced only the establishment of a joint commercial mission to work on a trade agreement, it was a signal that Brezhnev was unwilling to intervene diplomatically on Washington's behalf.

It is possible the United States and Russia will announce a "one shot" deal for sale of $150 million worth of American feed grain to Russia during the next 12 months. Soviet and American negotiators in Washington have reached virtual agreement on the amount Russia should pay to settle its World War II lend-lease debt. But the big and broad trade agreement is on ice for the time being.

The Soviet Union, in the view of U.S. officials, could take either of two choices of diplomatic action that might prove effective in bringing the Viet-nam war to an end.

—It could urge Hanoi to give serious consideration to Nixon's offer May 8 to withdraw all American forces from Vietnam within four months after release of U.S. prisoners and establishment of an internationally supervised ceasefire.

—It could accept Britain's suggestion that Moscow join London in proposing a revival of the 1954 Geneva Conference formula to bring together all nations most directly concerned to work out an agreement for neutralization of all Southeast Asia after establishment of a ceasefire throughout the area and withdrawal of American troops.

The Kremlin apparently feels that either course would damage its position in its contest with China for leadership of international Communism, thus, the Chinese attitude has much to do with Moscow's inability to move with any great freedom on the diplomatic front.

The Chinese, however, rate some credit for making a suc-

AFTER HISTORIC SUMMIT

Nixon Relaxing In Leningrad

LENINGRAD (UPI)—President Nixon, buoyed by the historic nuclear arms freeze agreement climaxing his five days at the Moscow summit, flew to this showplace Soviet city today for sightseeing and relaxation.

The President and his wife Pat arrived from Moscow to a warm welcome from the people of Leningrad—a place steeped both in Czarist history and more recent memories of one of the nation's finest hours in holding off German forces during World War II.

From the airport the Nixons were taken by motorcade to the shrine of the dead of that long battle. Nixon, in a light-colored raincoat, joined Soviet President Nikolai V. Podgorny in laying wreaths at a monument to the dead.

The President then inscribed in the guest book the words: "Richard Nixon to Tanya and all the heroes of Leningrad." He referred to the diary of a young Leningrad girl, written as she and her family slowly starved to death.

Nixon, with the first lady standing just to one side, turned to others in the party and said: "We hope it is never repeated in all the world."

A misty rain fell during the solemn ceremony.

The Nixons were driven from the cemetery to their guest house, an ultra-modern building with spacious, well-trimmed grounds, to rest and freshen up before having lunch as guests of city officials. Nixon also called in staff members.

As he left the Kremlin for the round-trip to Leningrad, Nixon put his hand on Podgorny's shoulder and said: "That was a great day yesterday."

From the guest house, the Nixons went to Leningrad's Mariinsky Palace, once a czarist showplace but today the Communist Party headquarters, for a fish-and-fowl luncheon in the old Russian style.

The menu began with caviar and proceeded through course after course of delicacies that included sterlet in jelly, smelt with pickles, turkey with fruit, cabbage soup, trout, hazet hen in cream, fresh strawberries in cream and pineapple.

Soviet security agents imposed an impassable barrier of security that left broad St. Isaacs square in front of Mariinsky Palace totally empty.

During the flight, the party celebrated the 49th birthday of Nixon's national security affairs adviser, Henry A. Kissinger. Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin presented him with a bottle of 50-year-old brandy, saying he was unable to find a bottle exactly Kissinger's age.

At the Leningrad airport, rows of Soviet soldiers in rust-brown rain capes were on hand for security as the President's party arrived in a Soviet jet with a Soviet crew. A delegation from the city council greeted him and presented Mrs. Nixon with a bouquet of red roses.

Nixon flew the 300 miles from Moscow following five long days of summit sessions which produced six major agreements, including the long-awaited one to put the brakes on the East-West arms race.

Nixon and Leonid I. Brezhnev, secretary general of the Soviet Communist Party, reached final agreement on the landmark nuclear arms paet at a 2-hour, 25-minute meeting at the Kremlin. Later they signed the accords—a treaty freezing defensive weapons development and a long-term agreement to limit offensive weaponry.
mit offensive weaponry.

It was Nixon's eighth meeting at the summit since his arrival in Moscow Monday—sessions that produced five other treaties in addition to the strategic weapons limitation.

Earlier agreements were on a joint space mission some time in 1975; a halt to "gmaes of chicken at sea" by the navies of both nations; cooperation in fighting environmental pollution, and in improving health and medical techniques; and on

Little King Dispute To Marin Court

The Tiscornia interests yesterday added another chapter to the legal jumble surrounding the grading of 360,000 cubic yards of fill off the top of Little King Mountain in Larkspur.

Alice B. Copeland Vincilione, on behalf of tha massive estate of Adolph A. Tiscornia, filed a petition in Marin Superior Court asking the court to order the city to issue a grading permit.

The city, on the other hand, has filed for nuisance abatement because the Vinciliones allegedly went ahead with grading without a permit.

Judge Henry J. Broderick temporarily barred any more work on the peak pending a hearing on the nuisance issue.

The Vinciliones claim the city planning commission and city council had no ground to turn down the permit because no evidence presented showed the digging would be harmful to the community.

But, if the grading isn't allowed, the estate either will

SAUSALITO SHOW

Bustle, Hustle As May Festival Opens

By LAURA DEVENDORF
I-J art critic

It felt less like spring than winter. Heavy fog floated above the 40-foot Maypole and a chill wind whipped its streamers as around 200 artists and craftsmen prepared today for the opening of Sausalito's first May Festival at the Central School playground.

Few made it. As the first eager souls straggled in at the 10 a.m. opening hour, the persistent racket of hammering and power saws still filled the air. Cook pots for things to chomp on from hot dogs to emtanades (Middle-Eastern sandwiches) were just cranking up.

And exhibitors were still streaming in, lugging display equipment and all manner of colorful paintings, textiles, sculpture, jewelry, cermics and glass.

Only the sound system being tested hinted of the long list of planned festival entertainment. During the weekend, this will include the street musicians of San Francisco, the Berkeley Free Orchestra, the Kiriaki Greek Dancers, Bert Balladine's belly dancers and flamenco dancers Robin and Mark Levin.

Marin County poets will read their works and puppeteer Mary Will Winn will also perform.

Parking for the festival is available off Bridgeway near the school ground which is located at Caledonia and B streets, and also with connecting bus service, from a lot behind the Big G supermarket on Bridgeway. There will be buses from the Sausalito ferry.

The event, sponsored by the Sausalito Arts Association and Art Center, is open today until 6 p.m. and tomorrow and Monday from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m.

BLACK EDUCATION

Results Of Conference Hailed

By JEFF GREER

A first-ever nationwide conference of black educators wound up in San Rafael yesterday with participants heralding its achievements and possible long-range effect.

Patricia Hill, a lay teacher in a Boston alternative school for minority children, said, "The comparison of experiences was invaluable."

Like Miss Hill, many of the 300 participants said they had felt isolated within their own school systems, out of touch with others struggling with problems of minority education.

They debated and compared ieas in a series of 30 workshops during the three-day gathering on "Emerging Trends in the Education of Black Children" at the Holiday Inn in San Rafael. The conference was the first of its kind in the United States, the educators said.

Many of them praised their Marin County hosts for the caliber of the program. The conference was sponsored by "Operation Breakthrough" of the Tamalpais High School District, headed by Lanny Berry; the Marin County Schools Office; Marin County Human Rights Commission and Black Scholar magazine, published in Sausalito.

Cherrie Gaines, a law professor at the University of San Francisco, declared the conference will produce "a ripple effect" throughout United States education.

Robert Hollis, grievance counselor in the county human rights office, praised the parley for bringing many experts together to "rap," rather than merely listen to a few high-powered speakers. "The men in the audience were as heavy as the cat behind the microphone," Hollis declared.

Bette Wallace, a Tamalpais High School District trustee, was one of the few nonblack participants in the conference. A veteran of many educational conferences, she said she saw a "positive force... vitality and tremendous strength" in the ideas of the black educators.

Emory Davis, a University of Illinois professor, said, "I'll be telling other people that I saw here the beginning of black scholars, irrespective of their field, digging up facts that had been hidden aspects of the black-white problem."

Carole Ellis, a social studies teacher at Miller Creek School in Terra Linda, said she had persuaded the Dixie School District to let her bring nine pupils to the conference. "They got to see the blacks doing business" in a way they never could otherwise in Marin County, she explained.

The final workshops yesterday reflected the diversity of ideas that had permeated the conference. While Professor Gaines was before one microphone telling black teachers to "get off your backsides" and teach logic, basic math and basic English to give youngsters "more ways to express themselves" than merely "street language," two college students were urging black parents to sacrifice financially to set up community schools to teach their own youngsters outside of public schools.

Walter Turner, University of California student, branded most professional black educators "lofty" and said they failed to help their own people. A community school should be guided by the parents, in contrast to a public school guided by educators, he argued.

Copanelist James Bullock of the College of Marin agreed that professional black "brothers who know the system manipulate it for their success rather than for the good of the black community."

He also condemned both black and white teachers who are "paternalistic and make all the excuses in the world why the children don't learn."

Mrs. Gaines, on the other hand, attacked educational separatism. "The educated person has many alternatives" to cope with any problem — "your way, their way, any other way...." Minority students must not be taught merely to be "blacks or yellow or purple —

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Zoo Terrorism

DETROIT (UPI) — Young school children were terrorized by a gang of older youths at the Detroit Zoo yesterday.

"Some of the children were roughed up," said Dr. Robert F. Willson, director of the zoo. "Some of their little faces were tear-stained and they were scared to death."

No serious injuries were reported.

Some 4,500 youngsters visited the zoo yesterday on class outings from schools in Detroit and area communities. Willson blamed the trouble on a gang of about 25 "young toughs" who were not part of the school groups.

Top Attraction

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The two giant pandas from China have emerged as one of the hottest tourist attractions in town during their first months stay at the National Zoo.

Since the pandas arrived April 20 1.1 million people have visited the zoo.

Meanwhile the Smithsonian Institution's Photographic Services Division reports it is selling photos and color slides of the pandas at the rate of between 200 and 250 during the last three weeks.

The Cool Look

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — The Miami Beach Chamber of Commerce wants the crowds coming here for the two political conventions this summer to be comfortable, so it's spreading the word to forget about neckties and coats.

"All the most dignified men we have been able to contact have agreed ties and coats in Miami Beach in the summertime are nonsense," said Larry Aberman, vice president of the chamber.

Voice Pledged

LUXEMBOURG (UPI) — Sicco L. Mansholt, president of the European Common Market Commission, said today his commission will have a voice in the planning of the Market's stance toward a European Security conference. "This is an important step — the 10 countries of the enlarged market will act together within a community framework," Mansholt said after meeting with Foreign Ministers of the 10 nations here.

The ministers met to prepare the political part of the agenda for the European Summit conference in Paris in October and to discuss preparations for the security conference, which is expected for next year.

Duke Is Improved

PARIS (UPI) — The ailing Duke of Windsor's personal physician has flown from New York to see him but a spokesman said the former king of England appeared slightly improved today.

John Utter, secrelary to the duke, said the duke's personal physician, Dr. Arthur Antonucci, of Roosevelt Hospital in New York, had arrived to see him.

But he said there was nothing significant in this despite reports of the duke's failing health. "He often comes over to see the duke and thought it a good ides to come over and see him now," Utter said.

Utter declined to disclose the nature of the duke's illness, and again denied published reports he was suffering from throat cancer.

Cal Study Urges Bay 'Umbrella'

BERKELEY (UPI) —A study by the University of California says the San Francisco Bay Area needs a regional government because present limited-purpose agencies are "counter productive."

Some regional responsibilities are either being ignored or inadequately handled, said the report by Stanley Scott and Ora Huth of the university's Institute of Governmental Studies.

The report called for an "umbrella government" that could plan and oversee the existing agencies. The new agency would have authority to appoint all or part of the membership of the subordinate groups and approve or veto any of their activities.

The researchers said if the present Association of Bay Area Governments is to be retained it must be given the direct power to require other agencies to comply with its regional plans.

The association, and other regional groups such as the Bay Conservation and Development Commission, are not "sufficiently representative" for regional government, the authors said.

The study contended the agencies have, with few exceptions, no black or Chicano members. It also said that ABAG's executive committee was only 39 per cent Democratic in an area that is 60 per cent Democrat.

Communist Reaction To The Treaty

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Reaction from the Communist bloc to the U.S.-U.S.S.R. strategic arms limitation treaty ranged today from front-page headlines in Hungary to a brief mention buried in the foreign news columns of Romanian newspapers.

Japan's conservative government welcomed the signing of the treaty in Moscow Friday by President Nixon and Coomunist Party chairman Leonid I. Brezhnev. The government spokesman in Tokyo said Japan hoped China and France now "will earnestly join the talks o nuclear disarmament."

Japanese newspapers also hailed the treaty as a major step toward easing East-West tensions.

There was no official reaction from the Soviet Union's Warsaw pact allies. But government and other official newspapers voiced approval.

A FEW CRITICS

Majority Of Senate Likes Pact

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The strategic arms treaty which President Nixon has negotiated with the Soviet Union won largely favorable comment in the Senate, to which the pact will go for ratification. (See another story, Page 1).

There were some exceptions, however.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., was among the more critical lawmakers, saying the treaty raises questions "that go to the heart of the security of the United States and the stability of the strategic arms balance."

"We would all like to see stabilizing agreements to curb the arms race," the inactive candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination said. "But far from curbing the arms race, the present agreements are likely to lead to an accelerated technological arms race with great uncertainties, profound instabilities and considerable costs."

He added that the agreements "do not encourage a reduction in strategic spending and may well encourage an increase."

Another presidential hopeful, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, reflecting Jackson's concern over the lack of qualitative controls, said it was a great disappointment that the treaty limited only numbers of missiles — not improvements that can be made on existing ones.

On the whole, however, Muskie praised the agreement as "symbolic of the ability of man to construct a world which will be safe for ourselves and future generations."

Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said that while the limitations "may not be ideal...they are an important beginning; and it is time we made some kind of a beginning. I hope that Congress will be able to support such a first step toward limitations."

Sen. John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky., a member of the Foreign Relations Committee who has fought with past presidents over strategic policy, praised the agreement and predicted that opponents of the pact would be able to put together no more than 25 votes in any effort to defeat it. Refusal to ratify would require at least 33 negative votes.

Stennis did not give his outright endorsemnt but said the goal of the treaty was "worthy of our strongest efforts." He added that the Senate would need assurances "that our unquestioned ability to protect ourselves will continue. We must also have the assurance that we can safely and accurately verify that the agreement is being kept."

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., called the treaty "clearly the most effective and worthwhile step taken in this administration and it deserves the commendation and support of all Americans."

Sen. Peter Dominick, R-Colo., another member of the Armed Services panel, said he was "delighted over the President's uuccess." And Rep. Craig Hosmer, R-Calif., the ranking member of his party on tte Joint Atomic Energy Committee, said he saw few problems with the treaty.

Wallace Leaves Bed; Travels Of Bremer Being Put Together

SILVER SPRING, Md. (UPI) —Gov. George C. Wallace, gaining strength daily, left his hospital bed and sat in a chair yesterday for the first time since he was shot and partially paralyzed 12 days ago.

Doctors attending Wallace authorized the increased activity after determining the governor was showing "a marked overall improvement."

Meanwhile, an estimated 200 FBI and Secret Service agents are attempting to piece together the complicated travels of Arthur H. Bremer during the six weeks prior to the shooting of Wallace following a campaign speech at a Laurel, Md. shopping center.

Investigators have determined that Bremer, charged with the Wallace assssination attempt, was in the vicinity of President Nixon during his state visit to Canada April 13-15.

He also has been linked to other campaign appearances by Wallace and Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey in Wisconsin, Michigan and Maryland. Bremer pleaded innocent to state and federal charges at his arraignment Thursday in Baltimore.

Federal agents have rounded up several witnesses who claim to have seen Bremer during his alleged journeyings. The highlights of the investigation have revealed:

Bremer attended a Humphrey campaign rally at a Milwaukee shopping center April 3. One of his former coworkers at the Milwaukee Athletic Club claimed to have talked with him there.

Bremer registered at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York City, the same hotel where Humphrey was scheduled to spend the night of April 7. Humphrey cancelled his plans at the last minute.

He registered at an Ottawa hotel located three blocks from Parliament Hill where Nixon visited April 13 and14. A photo purportedly showed Bremer in a Parliament Hill crowd at a time when Nixon was slated to make a public appearance.

Bremer was seen attending a Wallace rally in Cadillac, Mich., May 10.

A Kalamazoo, Minh., policeman questioned Bremer May 13 after seeing him sitting in his car near the site of a Wallace rally.

Search Is Made For Navy Plane

MONTEREY, Calif. (UPI)— Military aircraft searched over the rugged Big Sur area and the Pacific Ocean today for a Navy patrol plane missing with eight crewmen aboard.

The P3 Orion, equipped with sophisticated electronic gear used in tracking submarines, disappeared Friday on a routine training flight out of the Moffett Field Naval Air Station in Mountain View, Calif.

The four-engine turboprop was last heard from when it arrived in a patrol area just off Big Sur, a coastal mountain range.

Humphrey Says Money Is Short

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey faces financial problems so serious they could undermine his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Unless the money starts rolling in, Humphrey could be outspent better than two-to-one by Sen. George S. McGovern in the crucial California primary.

"I don't have the dough or the money we need," Humphrey publicly admits, and the shortage of funds has forced him to race around California to big and small fund-raising dinners.

Undaunted, Humphrey celebrated his 61st birthday today with a typical campaign day—an appearance at the Strawberry Festival Parade, two television interviews and a birthday party at the home of one of his top aides, former chief of protocol Lloyd Hand.

McGovern limited his schedule to the dedication of the Helen Keller swimming pool.

Both candidates in the California primary were expected to go into seclusion for part of the day to begin intensive briefings for the first of their three nationally-televised debates Sunday.

They both campaigned in the northern part of the state Friday—once coming within half a block of each other in San Francisco without meeting —in their bids for the state's 271 delegate votes for the Democratic presidential nomination.

But Humphrey was running into serious financial problems, only slightly alleviated by an influx of money during the middle of the week. An aide said the pledges of money were in hand but the cash was not.

San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto revealed that Humphrey has spent $300,000 on the California primary since April 7. An aide to McGovern said the South Dakota senator has already put out $950,000.

Humphrey's aides are sure of being able to spend at least $600,000 before June 6, hope for $750,000, and would consider $1 million an optimum amount. Humphrey himself has said that $750,000 in California is a "survival" budget.

In contrast, estimates for the McGovern campaign run as high as $2 million as the South Dakota senator stakes everything on winning the California primary.

Humphrey hopes to spend between $250,000 and $350,000 on media—all important in a state so large no candidate can personally visit every part—but McGovern will almost surely reach the agreed-on limit of $463,000. McGovern aides denied that their candidate would exceed the allotted amount for media spending.

As McGovern and Humphrey battled up and down the state in what is considered the crucial primary of the election year, Los Angeles mayor Sam Yorty bid for the Wallace vote. Wallace is not on the Democratic ballot and California voting laws make write-in campaigns difficult.

"I hope these people will vote for me," Yorty told a Los Angeles news conferenhb. "Not on the basis of my agreeing with Wallace, but on the fact that we do need some changes in Washington."

Rep. John M. Ashbrook, opposing President Nixon in the Republican primary, told a San Diego brunch that the SALT agreement with the Soviet Union would "absolutely lock the United States of America into an inferior position with Russia and doom the United States to a decade of danger."

Indictment To Be Asked In Slaying

OROVILLE, Calif. (UPI)— Butte County District Attorney Kenneth Leach says he will seek a grand jury indictment against a postal worker arrested in a courtroom shooting that killed an attorney and left a judge and a woman wounded.

Minyward Owen Rutherford, 57, was arrested after the shooting Thursday in the Butte County Superior Court for investigation of murder and two counts of attempted murder.

Attorney Perry Farmer, 46, was shot in the back of the head with a .38-caliber revolver held six inches away. He died on the way to a hospital.

Rutherford was seated behind Farmer and allegedly fired the shot.

Superior Court Judge Jean Morony was slightly wounded in the right arm when he tried to bar the courtroom door as the assailant fled.

Mrs. Karolyn Garrick, who was represented by Farmer in a suit against Rutherford, also was wounded in the arm, which was broken by the bullet that lodged in her chest. She was in satisfactory condition.

When the shooting occurred, Farmer was presenting his side in a civil case over a longstanding feud between Rutherford's family and the family of Mrs. Garrick.

Only two days before the shooting Farmer, father of two children, had remarked to a sheriff's deputy, "The way things are going (in the nation) today, an attorney can be shot at any time."

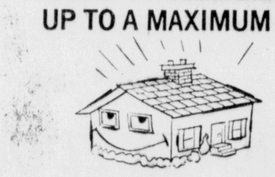

Slaying Linked To Four Others

OAKLAND (UPI) —A woman has become the fifth victim in a series of slayings in the East Bay during the past week and some suspects in the killings have been taken into custody, police reported today.

However, Oakland officers refused to give any details on the victim who died Friday night nor on those arrested until homicide Lt. Wilford Fuglar was ready to hold a news conference later today.

Police sources reported that the woman's death was connected with four shooting deaths last Sunday in Oakland and San Leandro.

NOVATO SANITARY DISTRICT

Three Vye For Seats

Two veteran members of the Novato Sanitary District board and a challenger will be vying for two seats in the June 6 primary election.

The election comes as the district, and other sanitary districts in Marin, face tighter restrictions by the Bay Area Regional Water Quality Control Board and increasing public concern about water pollution.

The candidates are Edwin V. Grundstrom, 45, an attorney, who has been on the board since he was appointed in 1961; Carlos B. Rivamonte, 52, traffic manager, Military Sea Lift Command, appointed to the board in 1955; and challenger Leroy J. Syrop, 36, president of Polynitro Inc., manufacturer and distributor of industrial cleaning compounds, and a newcomer to Novato.

In the past four years, the district overcame a "cease and desist" order by the regional board, survived an election to combine it with the North Marin County Water District, achieved passage of a $5.5 million bond measure and started an improvement of facilities.

Syrop has raised the issues of environmental protection and growth in his challenge.

"I feel the present board is going the wrong way," he said. The board is planning on the basis of a population of 354,000 by the year 2000 and "I oppose this," he said.

"On pollution . . . I feel the present sewer system is a disgrace," he said. "It was cited by the state more than three years ago and still is not in compliance. I think three years is an unconscionable length of time."

Grundstrom and Rivamonte believe that the district has been doing a good job trying to meet state requirements, and both cited the fact that the district has been chosen as administrating agency for a subregional sewer study as evidence of its standing among districts in the area.

Rivamonte said the district has been "aggressive" and one of its "main concerns has been pollution." With improvments to treatment plants and construction of a new outfall line, "we are moving in the right direction," he said.

Grundstrom said the district has been planning ahead, and attempting to meet the requirements of the regional board, but the requirements are being raised higher and higher.

Under its master plan, the state is seeking to ban all discharge of waste water into San Francisco Bay by 1985.

Syrop charged that installing facilities to accommodate an eventual population of 354,000 in the area, which extends beyond the current city boundaries, results in a "self-fulfilling prophecy."

If the facilities are in, it encourages development, he said. "I feel somebody has got to take steps against these type of plans.

"I'm not interested in living in a community with half the population of San Francisco," he said. "Some argue it's not the board's duty to attempt to control development, but I feel its every citizen's duty."

As a board member, he would have the right to exercise power over sewer hookups by opposing them or setting higher hookup rates higher for large developments, Syrop said.

Grundstrom said, "It's not our business to determine what the growth will be," adding that the district must plan facilities in terms of the city's general plan.

"Regardless of the desire to control growth, the facilities will have to be built for no other reason than to clean the bay," he said.

Rivamonte said: "We don't control population growth . . . the city fathers have more say. All we do is serve people who are here. We don't build plants if they're not here."

A bigger outfall line to the bay isn't the answer to the pollution problem, and new technology and reclamation of water must be considered, Syrop said: He charged the board was "totally lacking in imagination," and "not attuned to what's happening."

Grundstrom said the district "is sitting in a good position" with the new projects "about 70 to 80 per cent complete, and the subregional plan nearing completion."

"The next requirement will be trying to find some practical means of financing to meet state requirements," he said.

KNOW THE LAW

California Highway Patrol

Code Defines Motor Vehicles

The California Vehicle Code defines a motor vehicle as "a vehicle which is self-propelled", and a motor-driven cycle as "any motorcycle, including every motor scooter, with a motor which produces less than 15 gross brake horsepower, and every bicycle with motor attached." (Go-carts are also classified as motor vehilces.)

Since the mini bike and the other motor-driven cycles described above are classified by law as motor vehilces, they must meet all requirements of the California Vehicle Code before they may be operated on public roads. Persons who wish to drive these little vehicles on public streets must be sure to register them with the California Department of Motor Vehicles. The driver must possess a valid California driver's license, and the vehicle must have equipment such as headlamps, tail and brake lamps, horn, mirrors, and brakes on both the front and rear wheels are required on the vehicle prior to its use on public streets.

It is also unlawful to operate any motor vehicle on state, county, or municipal areas without authorization, or in school yards, on posted hiking or riding trails, or sidewalks.

The number of mini bikes appearing on the roads is increasing daily. Because of the reduced size of the vehicle and the inexprience of almost all the operators, the fatal and injury accidents involving mini bikes, etc., are on the increase. Parents beware: you are liable if you let an unlicensed minor operate a motor vehicle on public property.

Anyone driving a motor vehicle which does not meet the California Vehicle Code's requirements should do so only: on private property (with owner's written permission); with a permit and/or license from the Department of Motor Vehicles; under mature supervision and control when on private property with property owner's permission; and while wearing protective headgear and clothing.

Finally, what is the procedure when a juvenile is cited for a mini bike or other motor-driven cycle violations?

If a juvenile receives a traffic citation for unlawful operation of a motor vehicle, he must appear before the judge of the juvenile court or a traffic hearing officer appointed by the judge and must be accompanied by his parent or legal guardian or person having legal custody. If it is found that he has, in fact, committed a violation, he may: receive a warning; have his driving privilege restricted, suspended, or revoked; be ordered to pay a penalty up to $50 for each violation; be ordered to attend traffic school; be placed under the supervision of the probation officer; be ordered to receive a combination of these penalties.

In addition, parents may be cited under Section 14607 of the California Vehicle Code if they knowingly allow their or any unlicensed child to operate a motor vehicle on the public streets. Penalties could be a fine of $500 or six months in the county jail or both. Parents can also be held responsible for any damage or injury resulting from an accident which involves the operation of a mini bike by the unlicensed minor child.

Mail-Order Firm Hit Over Pills

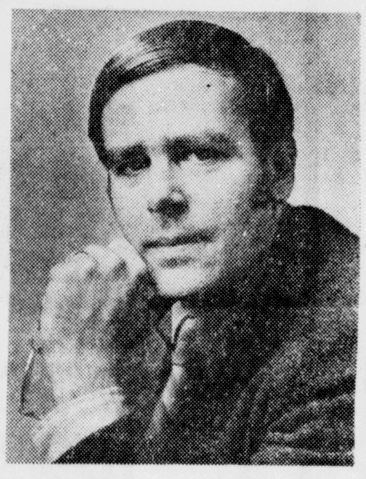

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI)—A mail-order firm that claims its nationally advertised "SkiniMini" diet pills will help users lose 10 pounds in two weeks has been charged with false representation.

In a complaint filed in U.S. District Court, the U.S. attorney's office said the "SkiniMinis" will not perform as advertised, and stated that the "consensus of informed medical opinion" is that they are "not an effective means to control appetite."

Which Comes First — The People or the Water?

BOB ANDERSON, Jr., Candidate for Division 5 Director, Marin Municipal Water District, believes the people come first — then the water to meet their needs. Bob's opponent, Dr. Zonewithwater, wants it the other way around: limit the water and control the people . . . make MMWD a planning body. This is no way to run a water district, says Bob, who believes MMWD should be a service agency - not usurp planning functions from the people through their duly constituted bodies.

Which is more valuable — Experience or Guesswork?

We'll leave it to you. In Bob Anderson, a lifelong resident of District 5, you have a lifetime of close exposure through family ties to MMWD's work — plus a period as a MMWD engineering aid, surveying properties of the District. Bob has a comprehensive understanding of the Water District, its obligations, operations, and personnel. Dr. Zonewithwater is a newcomer to both the County and the subject.

Which do you prefer as your Water District Director — a doctor who would cure with water — or a man who would keep MMWD a service agency, responsive to (not directing) public need?

Bob Anderson believes the people of Marin should determine their County's growth—or lack of it—then let MMWD supply the water the people have ordained. Using a natural resource as an instrument for zoning, Bob believes, is unhealthy, unnatural, and undemocratic.

BOB ANDERSON FURTHER BELIEVES:

- Your District's water delivery system must be strengthed and rehabilitated in order to give consumers maximum service at minimum cost.
- All necessary facilities (pipelines, pump houses, etc.) must be painstakingly landscaped.
- MMWD should never be tax-supported.
- Mt. Tam and other watershed lands should remain under local control and maintained as wilderness areas under permanent trust for present and future generations.

Who is Bob Anderson, Jr.? He is a lifetime resident of Sausalito, an industrial arts instructor, a volunteer fireman, a homeowner, a member of the Sierra Club, and partner to a charming wife. He is someone who wants to do a topnotch job for you on your Water Board - and is qualified to do it.

High-Level 'Rap' On Education

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —State schools chief Wilson Riles, Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke, legislators and many of California's county school superintendents conducted an all-day strategy session yesterday to plan a mammoth program to involve ordinary citizens in setting community goals for education.

The concept, fostered by the legislature, is to decentralize decision-making in education, turning over to local communities the responsibilities of determining priorities for education that have been carried out at the state level.

"This is a beautiful way of saying to the people what do you expect us (school administrators) to do with the schools," Riles told the educators.

But he warned of pitfalls that could be encountered with a grandiose plan for community participation.

"To face people on the local level to ask them what they want from education is either naive or dishonest," he said. Riles said such a rosey approach would build up false hopes among citizens that could never be met.

Instead, he said, educators and legislators must set up "perameters" within which communities could select what types of action they deemed most important. For example, he said, it would be unrealistic for a community to choose an exotic education program that the state could not afford or permit under existing laws.

Reinecke told the educators, "It is pretty clear that of all the questions in the minds of the public today that basic education is No. 1."

But he said he hoped the superintendents would "not get caught up in the political swirl" and rather create a "sterling goal" for education and let the legislature "worry about how to get there later."

Ronald Ward, a San Francisco superintendent, said that if politics were ignored completely that the desires of the communities would be "diluted and abrogated" as they have often been in the past.

The "rap session" by educators was considered a big step toward implementing the community involvement plan by 1974. Between now and mid-1973 education groups around the state will conduct scores of sessions to iron out details of the plan.

The concept of giving power back to the communities was first adopted by the legislature in 1968.

Placement Of Jobless

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — About 44 per cent of the unemployed aerospace and defense workers enrolled in a special state employment program were placed in jobs in the past year, it was disclosed yesterday.

Norman Blacher, deputy director of the jobs division of the state Department of Human Resources Development, said 6,177 engineers, scientists and technicians out of the 14,110 registered in the program since last May got new jobs.

Blacher said 1,869 enrollees were placed directly into jobs through the program while 4,308 became employed as a result of various types of program assistance.

The Technology Mobilization and Reemployment Program was started by HRD to help relieve the high level of unemployment among aerospace and defense workers due to cutbacks in those industries.

Hearing Scheduled On Morals Charges

A preliminary hearing for Curtis Phillip Walls, 63, of Novato, on sex perversion and lewd and lascivious behavior charges has been set for June 13 in Marin Municipal Court.

Wall was arrested in January on a warrant charging him with molesting four children from 5 to 8 years old last September and December.

Reagan's Coastline Guidelines

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—Gov. Ronald Reagan yesterday issued a series of guidelines designed to be used as a basis for his program for managing California's coastal resources.

The guidelines were contained in a three-year study prepared at the request of the governor and the Legislature by the State Department of Navigation and Ocean Development.

"In the past 30 years California's population has tripled to 20 million, and most of this growth has been concentrated along our coastline," Reagan said. "This concentration in a relatively limited area has caused a number of problems that have serious implications for the present and future."

The plan recommends that state policies be adopted to provide for the "orderly, efficient and balanced development use" of marine and coastal resources.

It said California's coastal area is suffering from a deteriorating environment, inadequate recreation facilities, poorly regulated development and loss of "unique open space land."

Among the guidelines were those urging that:

A coastal resources board be established to coordinate coastal management efforts by state, federal and local governments.

Highly productive wildlife habitats or spawning area which contained rare or endangered species be protected from environmental degradation.

Water quality standards be adopted to protect aquatic life from the effects of waste discharges and environmentally harmful substances such as pesticides.

The state should obtain and preserve selected coastal land and water areas as educational and scientific reserves.

All onshore and offshore petroleum drilling facilities be operated to minimize their impact upon the aesthetics and environment of the coastal area.

Pipelines serving offshore drilling operations and ship loading facilities be designed to minimize the possibility of leaks and ruptures.

No public or private coastal development should "unreasonably" deny public access from roads to the shoreline.

Extension Of Street Will Be Considered

Plans to extend Liberty Street will be reviewed at a study session of the Petaluma City Council at 4 p.m. Tuesday.

Lastmonth Liberty Street residents submitted a petition opposing plans to extend the street to Magnolia Avenue.

continued collaboration in science and technology.

Nixon and Soviet leaders had hoped also for an accord on mutual trade, but this became stuck on the issue of how much the Soviet Union still owes the United States on its World War II debt. The two sides agreed to set up a joint commission for further work on this problem, with a first meeting scheduled in Moscow in July.

At a dinner prior to the signing of the arms pact, Nixon said tte accord was "enormously important" and hopefully an "indication of what can happen in the future as we work toward peace in the world."

Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin said in replying to Nixon's toast that the United States and the Soviet Union were "making serious steps" toward peace, but that "everything possible should be done to eliminate the hotbeds of war in Vietam and in the Middle East."

It was the first time either side had specifically mentioned the Vietnam issue, although it appeared certain that the war came up for discussion during the summit sessions.

Guilty Plea To Destroying Course Greens

A Lakeport man, who did his driving on the greens of the Marin Golf and Country Club in Novato, pleaded guilty yesterday in Marin Municipal Court to drunken driving and sentencing was set for June 23.

Gregory Velez, 21, admitted to a wild ride at the golf course Monday morning during which he drove his car up the steps of the clubhouse, ran over a putting green several times and drove down the first fairway and across another green, hitting club equipment along the way.

Deputy Dist. Atty. John D. Posey said damage was $2,000.

Nurse Is Slain During Argument

OAKLAND (UPI) — A 29-year- old nurse was killed and her father critically wounded today when both were shot by a man they had been arguing with in an Oakland cafe.

Police said Frances Hunt, Oakland, a nurse at Kaiser hospital, died from a gunshot wound in the chest. Her father, Moses Armstrong, Oakland, was reported in critical condition at Highland Hospital with a head wound.

Witnesses said the pair got into an argument with another customer at Geegee's Cafe in West Oakland early today and that the man suddenly pulled out a gun and fired two shots. He then fled.

Hilliard Case May Be Booted

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A federal judge says perjury charges will be dismissed against Black Panther chief of staff David Hilliard if the government does not disclose certain wiretaps.

U.S. District Judge Alfonso J. Zirpoli said Friday he would formally dismiss the charges Tuesday unless the government agrees to produce the voluminous electronic eavesdropping operation it made involving Hilliard.

Youth Is Cleared In Shoot-Out

An 18-year-old Tamalpais High School student has been cleared of a final charge against him stemming from a shoot-out in front of the school two months ago.

Judge David Menary Jr. of Marin Municipal Court found David Spaulding of Sausalito innocent of an amended charge of carrying a loaded weapon during the gunplay March 25 during which two youths shot at each other across Miller Avenue.

At a preliminary hearing last month, Judge Peter Allen Smith ruled Spaulding had fired in self defense and dismissed a felony charge of assault with a deadly weapon. The amended misdemeanor charge then was filed.

The other youth allegedly involved was referred to juvenile court since he was only 17. His name was withheld by order of Judge Joseph G. Wilson of Marin Superior Court.

No one was injured in the battle, which police said stemmed from damage done to Spaulding's car.

Plea Made To Armed Robbery

Patricia Betty Knox, 37, of San Rafael, pleaded innocent yesterday in Marin Superior Court to two charges of armed robbery stemming from the holdup of two men in a Homestead Valley home in February.

A preliminary hearing was set for June 20.

During the robbery, Richard Christenson and Gilbert P. Elliott were threatened with a knife and tied up while the residence at 206 Evergreen Avenue was ransacked.

The robbers took a figurine, trading stamps, cigarette coupons, three coats and a brief case, according to the district attorney's office.

Ads For 'Root' Under Attack

NEW YORK (UPI)—In a nationwide mailing advertising its "Chinese Ginseng root," the manufacturer called it a "secret passion plant from the Orient prized by royalists in Oriental harems in virile-making powers," says the state attorney general's office.

Actually, a spokesman for the state agency said Friday, the only beneficial use of the root was to reduce cholesterol, and there were cheaper products on the market which did that.

The office announced it had obtained a court order against Mul Ching Importers Inc., to prevent the company from selling or advertising the root. It had offered the pill via mail order at $6.95 for a four-week supply of 30 tablets and $41 for a year.

Time Can Be Taken For Casting Ballots

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Employes have a right to time off from work to vote, but they must notify their employer in advance, the state Department of Industrial Relations said today.

William C. Hern, director of the department, urged employers and employes to "mutually agree" on a workable arrangement for voting time.

WAR

in the week infiltrated a battalion-size commando force into the southern edge of Kontum, blew up an ammunition dump and occupied a military area of the city just before noon.

UPI reporter Matt Franjola said the Communists made the assault under a 500-round barrage of mortars and heavy fighting continued into the afternoon. He said at least three South Vietnamese regiments—nearly 9,000 men— were cut off from each other when Communist forces occupied territory to the west of Kontum, 260 miles north of Saigon.

The intense fighting flared on the 2,516th birthday of Buddha and it was the first time in four years both sides in the Vietnam War have not observed a truce because of the religious holiday.

Precise casualty figures were not available immediately but Franjola reported that losses on both sides appeared to be heavy. The South Vietnamese command in Saigon said 76 Communists were killed in fighting north of Kontum today and said government casualties were 12 dead and 23 wounded.

U.S. helicopters equipped with electronic wire-guided missiles destroyed at least four North Vietnamese T54 tanks today in trying to turn back the attack. Nearly a score of tanks have been knocked out by the choppers in three consecutive days of bitter fighting around Kontum.

Nearly 60 U.S. B52s striking in 19 waves in the 24 hours ending at noon dropped more than 1,510 tons of bombs against suspected Communist positions around Kontum. The B52s have struck at least 523 times in the Kontum area since the start of the Communist offensive now in its 59th day.

South Vietnamese forces meanwhile today stopped four attacks on government positions at the far northern front, military spokesmen said. The actions took place west of Highway 1 and south and southwest of My Chanh in the sector shielding the old imperial capital of Hue 400 miles north of Saigon.

At least 153 North Vietnamese soldiers were slain and four of their tanks destroyed in the battles. They listed South Vietnamese losses as four dead and 12 wounded.

U.S. command spokesmen said four-engined AC 130 "Stinger" gunships striking "a known enemy location" on route 548 west of Hue in the A Shua Valley caused 76 secondary explosions Friday, an indication large amounts of fuel and ammunition had been hit.

Communist forces had attacked Kontum Friday but were beaten back with the aid of U. S. helicopters.

Hearing Set In Slaying Case

A June 8 preliminary hearing has been set in Marin Municipal Court for a man charged with slaying a Bolinas artist last month.

Judge David R. Baty set the hearing on whether Edward Davies Pardington, a 36-year-old drifter, should be held on the charge, although Pardington has not yet decided whichway to plead. He is now scheduled to plead Friday.

Pardington was arrested in Berkeley May 15, two days after Joseph Anthony Costello, 33, was found on a Bolinas beach with his throat slashed.

Sheriff's deputies said Costello had evicted Pardington from his home after taking him in.

Back Pay Suit Filed

A maintenance man for the City of San Rafael, suspended because of felony morals charges against him, filed suit yesterday in Marin Superior Court asking immediate reinstatement and back pay.

The San Rafael City Council indefinitely suspended Larry Amato Petretti, 48, on April 13, two days after he was indicted by the Marin County Grand Jury, then on May 15 voted to reinstate him after 30 days pass without back pay.

The city board of review had recommended immediate reinstatement on May 1, according to the suit.

The suit argues that the city cannot suspend an employee for more than 30 days and if it decides to reinstate an employee, it must pay wages for the lost time.

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner ordered the city to reinstate him immediately with back pay or show cause in court on June 14 why it shouldn't.

Petretti's suspension came after the Grand Jury indicted him on five counts of molesting children in the apartment building he manages.

have to pay an additional $360,000 to buy fill or leave a flat low area directly across Magnolia Avenue from the disputed peak undeveloped and worthless, according to the suit.

The suit, which claims Little King is a "misnomer because said Little King is neither regal nor more than a knoll," cites quotes from the city engineer, who is being sued with the city and the planning commission, city staff and the city planning consultant, Mocine and Williams of San Francisco.

All said the grading could be done without much damage, according to the suit.

The planning commission turned down the grading Feb. 15, and after an exhaustive public hearing on the strongly opposed work, the city council followed suit May 1.

However, it had offered to reconsider until it learned of the unauthorized grading. The original vote of 3-2 became 5-0 on May 15.

Mrs. Vincilione, executrix of the 310-acre estate which runs south from Corte Madera Creek, seeks the permit to prepare the top of Little King for housing.

Innocent Plea To Auto Theft

Glenn Anthony Denham, 26, of no known address, pleaded innocent yesterday to a misdemeanor car theft count after a Marin Municipal Court judge refused to accept a plea bargain in the case.

Judge David R. Baty set a jury trial for June 12 on the charge, which had been reduced from a feony.

Denham was arrested in Sausalito May 17 while driving a car reportedly stolen.

Journalist Booted

SAIGON (UPI) — A freelance journalist who took dramatic photographs of the fall of Quang Tri province to the North Vietnamese was ordered expelled from South Vietnam after a police search of his house turned up a souvenir Viet Cong flag and an AK47 rifle, it was reported today.

but capable of solving a problem any way."

The argument over the desirability of separate schools for minority children arose again and again.

"Why is segregation only favored by some blacks in terms of education?" one educator complained. "You don't hear any talk about only sitting in the backs of the buses again, or segregated restaurant or movie theaters."

Others insisted that only when minority families control their children's education will the youngster grow up with desirable ethnic pride.

The three days of debate produced no attempts to draft any formal declarations by the conference even on such nationwide controversies as busing pupils.

The issue was ignored almost completely by the black educators, who said they were much more concerned about what went on in the classroom than in how the youngster got there.

In oblique references to the idea of mixed student bodies, one panelist argued that "the poor black child can't learn anything from the poor white child or the poor Chicano sitting next to him." Another delcared that "the midle class black is in the middle of nothing but the same despair as the rest of the (black) community."

Hitchhiker's Hearing Set

A 27-year-old Sonoma County man, who came to the attention of Sausalito police because he was hitchhiking in the street, not on the curb, is scheduled for a preliminary hearing in Marin Municipal Court June 5.

Daniel Lewis Hurst of El Verano was charged with felony possession of hashish after a baggie believed to contain the substance was found in his pocket Tuesday.

Police said they stopped to warn Hurst and a companion about illegal hitchhiking and discovered he had outstanding traffic warrants from San Francisco. The hashish was found during the arrest search, police said.

Historic 707 Jet Is Retired

NEW YORK (UPI)—The historic Boeing 707, prototype of American jetliners, made its last flight Friday.

A spokesman for Boeing said the only aspect that remained of the original plane was its shape. It has had four engine changes and every inch of fuselage has been replaced since the plane first got its certificate of air worthiness May 21, 1954 for "the purpose of research and development."

The plane made its first passenger flight July 15, 1954, and was the forerunner of the 727 and today's giant 747s.

cess out of the Soviet-American summit conference.

The consensus here is that the Soviet Union would have at least postponed and possibly cancelled the conference after Nixon ordered the mining of Haiphong and other North Vietnamese ports had it not been for the Russians' grave concern about their eastern border, where they have one million troops and 1,000 aircraft tied down because of the continuing ideological and geographical dispute with Peking.

Nixon's failure to win diplomatic support from Moscow on Vietnam was somewhat expected. And it was obscured by the major achievement here — agreement on measures to limit the numbers and further deployment of strategic nuclear offensive and defensive weapons.

The Vietnam war has been costly and traumatic for Americans, but the possibility of Soviet-U.S. collaboration in ending the nuclear arms race and establishing a realistic basis for peaceful cooperation has implications for all mankind which transcend anything that has happened or is likely to happen in Southeast Asia.

Hearing Set In Cycle Case

A preliminary hearing on a charge of stealing a motorcycle has been set for June 5 in Marin Municipal Court for Shannon Rory Doyle, 18, of Forest Knolls.

Doyle, who has denied the theft, was arrested Monday on Montezuma Avenue after sheriff's deputies stopped the motorcycle he was riding because it bore no license plate.

Checking the vehicle number; deputies said, they found the motorcycle had been stolen from a military policeman at the Presidio of San Francisco.

OBITUARIES

Amelia L. Smith Succumbs

Amelia L. Smith, mother of Judge Peter Allen Smith of Marin Municipal Court and herself elected six times as Sausalito city clerk, died early today in a San Rafael retirement home after a brief illness.

Mrs. Smith moved to Sausalito in the 1930s, and for years commuted to work in San Francisco. In 1944, she once recalled, she went to Sausalito City Hall to pay her taxes, learned that the then City Clerk Zelda Smith did not intend to seek reelection, and filed for the office, because she though it would be "a nice, quiet place to work."

AMELIA L. SMITH
Former city clerk

She won by a 2-to-1 margin over former City Councilman John Thompson. She later survived a ballot measure to make her post appointive rather than elective, and retired in 1961 after serving one year of her final term.

Born in Mobile, Ala., she always retained traces of a Southern accent. She was the granddaughter of Confederate Gen. William W. Allen.

After graduating magna cum laude from St. Mary's College in Indiana, she toured Europe, then returned to the United States to meet and marry S. Burke Smith, a young naval officer who died as a commander during World War II. Mrs. Smith herself served as a yeomanette during World War I.

She was former president of the Bay Area branch of the St. Mary's Alumni Association, and for many years was active on committees for the Star of the Sea Catholic Church in Sausalito. She also was a member of the Third order of St. Francis and of the Young Ladies Institute.

Mrs. Smith was recalled by former associates as an official who treated the public with Southern courtesy, but who could be obdurate on matters she believed in. In 1961, she stalked out of a city council meeting after accusing City Atty. John B. Ehlen of talking "bunk" and "galoop" in advising the council concerning a hearing over two of her aides who sued after their pay was cut by the council.

In addition to Judge Smtih, she is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Arthur P. Campbell of Belvedere; another son, Burke Smith; 16 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Mass of the Resurrection will be celebrated at 10 a.m. Monday in Nazareth House, 245 Nova Albion Way, San Rafael. Rosary will be recited at 7 p.m. tomorrow in Nazareth House. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

The family prefers contributions to Nazareth House.

The family requests memorial gifts to Hanna Boys Center, Sonoma.

A Hike In Cost Of First Ferry Fleet

The cost of the Golden Gate Bridge District's initial ferry fleet took another leap yesterday with a new estimate that each vessel will cost $2,865,000, up $295,000 from the estimate only four months ago.

The new estimate by the district's naval architect, Philip F. Spaulding of Seattle, contrasted with his original estimate of $2.1 million in August 1970. The total cost of the initial fleet of three new ferries thus has gone up by $2,295,000, or by an amount greater than the original estimate for each ferry.

Spaulding, in a letter to the district's ferry transit manager, Stanley M. Kowleski, said the new estimate reflected "the recent material increase cost." Kowleski noted that the new estimate did not reflect new shipyard union contracts still being negotiated.

Kowleski has predicted that these new contracts will see costs "take another large jump." Spaulding's letter was released to newsmen, but not discussed at the regular meeting of district directors.

Kowleski estimated previously that shipbuilding costs throughout the nation are increasing up to 1.5 per cent each month.

Bids to construct the three 165-foot, 25-knot ferries were to be opened on June 7, but district directors postponed the opening to June 21 at the request of three shipyards. Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring said the delay may encourage additional bids, give the shipyards more time to assemble costs, "and might have a favorable effect upon prices."

Spaulding's letter said the cost per vessel would be $2,590,000 if three were ordered as planned, and $2,865,000 if only one were ordered initially. Kowleski, however, told newsmen that the cost per vessel probably would be at least at the higher figure even if three were ordered at one time.

Kowleski said that the cost of the propulsion system was escalating faster than shipyard construction costs. He said the unique system, with three water jets powered by gas turbines, will run to one-third of each vessel's total cost.

Conviction In Burglary Case Is Delivered

Laurence Alexander Lishey, 30, of Los Angeles, was convicted yesterday of a burglary for which a partner was sentenced to state prison last week.

A jury before Judge Henry J. Broderick of Marin Superior Court found Lishey guilty of burglarizing a Strawberry clothing store last December. The panel deliberated less than two hours.

The judge set sentencing for June 15.

Lishey and Willie James Hill, a 31-year-old ex-convict, were arrested in a van with50 to 100 men's suits after a chase from the C. Partan Clothing Store in the Town and Country Village to Richmond.

The van was peppered with bullets and had one flat tire when it rolled to a stop at a roadblock setup by Richmond police on Dec. 16.

A jury convicted Hill March 30, but deadlocked on Lishey, who was the passenger.

Famed Ship Is Sold For Scrap

VALLEJO, Cal f. (UPI)—The Navy says the USS O'Bannon, awarded 20 battle stars in World War II and the Korean conflict, has been sold for scrap.

The O'Bannon, which the Navy labeled "the fightingist ship,' of World War II, has been sold to Union Metals Co., according to Capt. Walter M. Ousey, in charge of the mothball fleet here.

Her selling price to the East Coast scrap firm was $87,212.54, he said.

Likes Jail Better Than His Home

A 31-year-old prospective soldier, who found he couldn't enlist until he clears his record, pleaded guilt in Marin Superior Court yesterday to a felony battery charge from 1969.

Burt Hamilton Walker turned himself in on the charge a week ago, two and a half years after he failed to appear for sentencing.

Judge Henry J. Broderick considered releasing him without bail, but Walker declined. "I'd just as soon stay locked up because where I am living is worse than jail," he said.

The long-haired, bearded Walker said he had tried to join the Army but they found out about the unsettled case. He said he planned to make the service "a life's ambition."

Through an oversight, Walker might never have been sentenced if he hadn't tried to enlist. No warrant ever was issued in his case.

He is charged with battery on a Sauslaito policeman on March 14, 1969.

Sentencing is scheduled for July 10.

Mine Orders

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Interior Secretary Rogers C.B. Morton has ordered federal inspectors to shut down any mine posing imminent danger to workers and said he would hire more inspectors to make sure each underground mine gets more than the required one inspection each year.

Inmates In Trouble: False Income Claims

DALLAS (UPI)—Two Dallas County jail inmates—both serving life sentences—have been sentenced to an additional 18 months in prison for filing a false income tax return while in jail.

Federal Judge Joe E. Estes Friday sentenced James Ernest Lucas and Ray Otis Strader. He said both filed the incorrect forms in 1970.

All 'Sip The Milk' Of Paris Fashion

By MARGARET DE MIRAVAL
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

PARIS — "Ready-to-wear has become the milk of Paris fashion, and everyone's here to have a sip," said Albert Lempereur, retired president of the French Syndicate of Women's Clothing and an early pioneer in European mass production.

Business was certainly booming out at the Porte de Versailles for the recent fall and winter showings, with more than 50,000 professionals from five continents. Thousands of Japanese, Germans, Scandinavians and Italians plus 800 Americans were on hand, though in the final analysis West Germany remains France's biggest client, accounting for more than one-quarter of the foreign exports.

Overall sales during January and February this year chalked up the unprecedented increase of 55 per cent over the same period in 1971. Bruno de Roselle, secretary general for the ready-to-wear syndicate, believes exports will exceed a thousand million francs in 1972, compared to 850 million last year.

COUTURE HAS jumped right on the express train, and for the first time the Chambre Syndicale organized the calendar for the individual couture ready-to-wear presentations. Leaders, such as Lanvin, Laroche, Balmain and Courreges showed at the Porte de Versailles in a bid to attract more buyers —final proof that super-high fashion no longer is an impregnable fortress to be penetrated only by the fabled 4,000 international private clients.

Pierre Cardin and Nina Ricci presented couture and ready-to-wear simultaneously, and the most critical eye could hardly tell the difference. Cardin announced that he is putting his long-standing idea of presenting just one major collection each year into practice, though it seems doubtful that anyone as talented as Cardin can stay completely out of the limelight for 11 months at a stretch.

Yves Saint Laurent also is in top form, basking in the glow of tremendous profits from the Rive Gauche collections, and along with JAP and Sonia Rykiel, has really put the seater girl back on the map. Yves has effaced all traces of the 1940 syndrome and played up hisnew approach to the classic by scissoring off his own shoulder-length locks, discarding his polka-dot bow tie, and rhinestone star pins.

Even the low-priced ready-to-wear houses showing at the Porte de Versailles interpret the new directions in their own individual manner, often as personalized as the couture signatures.

ALMOST HALF the Miss Dior collection is based on pants, and trousers emerge stronger than ever in almsot every collection in every price range. New wider-cut pants such as Saint Laurent's measure up to 24 inches around the uncuffed hem. Phillippe Guibourge of Dior likes the smock look teamed to pants. Flared smocks widening beneath the taut yoke and capped sleeves are teamed with a contrasting long-sleeved sweater.

Cardin and Courreges continue the knit body suit as a basic kind of "canvas" on which to "paint" their pictures; separates include Cardin's fanciful tabards, ponchos, chasubles, and jumpers and Courreges's ice skater's skirts and jackets in vinyls and teddy-bear plush over Norwegian ski sweater patterns on the knitted tights and tops.

One of the great ways to update is with a shorter coat. Novel sleeves turn up everywhat you will —ranging from wrist to midthigh length, is featured in smock styles, "riding" and swingback tents, and the super-casual kimono wrap or Judo coat with deep-cut sleeves.

wnovel sleeves turn up everywhere: coats with kimono sleeves sawed off above the elbow, a dolman-sleeved pullover, sleeves in contrasting colors and fabrics, and Cardin's fanciful effects for formal wear.

OTHER LEITMOTIFS for winter will be the profusion of fake furs, and the "June in January" colors.

Givenchy set out to prove just how fabulous man-made furs can look with a special collection of coats designed in Borg fabrics —copying everything from spotted furs to short-haired seal and long-haired fox.

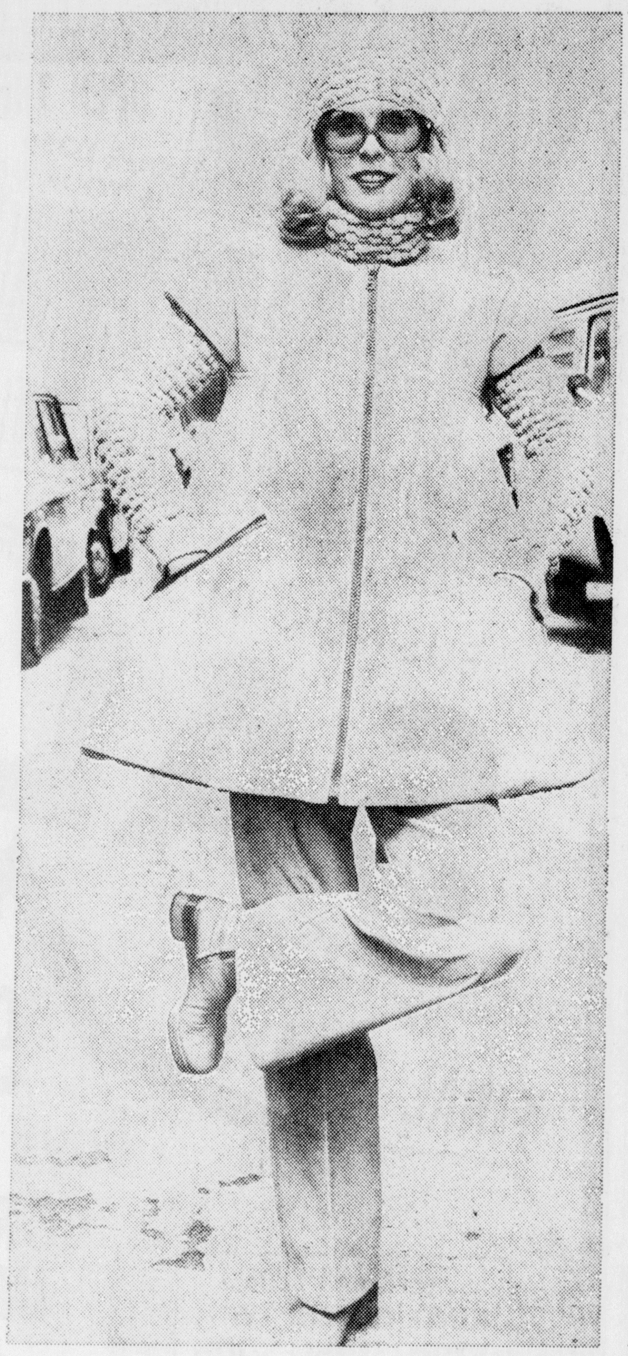

The Porte de Versailles was like a Sunday promenade through the zoo: teddy bear, shaggy dog and monkey fakes for entire garments as well as for trimmings and linings.

The color spectrum is almost as bright as the outlook for the ready-to-wear industry: rainbow-hued stripes, strong pastels, sky blue, and sunset pinks, plus all the neon primaries that will turn the winter street scene into a carnival of color.

Food Poisoning And Its Causes

The most common cause of food poisoning is staphylococcic bacteria, likely to be found in starchy foods and sweets like potatoes, cream pies and custards.

Salmonella, another bacteria that can cause food poisoning, may be present in poultry, eggs, meat, potato salads and other foods when they are not properly refrigerated.

Staph poisoning can hit in as short a time as two hours, and salmonella poisoning develops between seven and 72 hours, according to the California Medical Association.

Letter From 'King Bert' Elicits Some Strong Reader Reactions

DEAR READERS:

Which correspondents rated highest on our response meter this spring? "King" Bert G. and his 17-year-old daughter Janet, who applauded him for taking her out of high school and "protecting her from the evils of society."

Hundreds of writers protested Bert's "kingship," and praised our somewhat sharp replies to him and Janet. Only one took his side.

Read on:

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

Mr. Bert G. and his daughter Janet are perfect examples of citizens of "1984" or "Brave New World." Janet has been so well indoctrinated with her father's protection mania that she actually believes if he loses control she would become corrupt. As with Orwell's and Huxley's people, she has been conditioned to obey, not think. He'll have her around for quite some time as a free maid. — M.T.C.

DEAR RAP:

I'm almost 45 and have a ball being a wife, mother, and mostly me. After reading the letters written by Bert G. and his daughter, I still wonder what the girl is being protected from.

My daughters had a marvelous time with other girls and boys. Kids are just young people, and people need people. If one gets a bit off-center, the others help straighten him or her out. Children brought up with love and guidance have no trouble avoiding "the evils of society."

I'm weary of men who seem to feel all women are inferior weaklings, threatened on all sides by depravity. It's criminal to deny a girl dates, friendships — and school — and it's no way to build maturity. — MRS. J.D.

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

His Excellency Bert G.'s reasoning is absolutely nuts. The longer he brainwashes his daughter, the more she'll be a scared rabbit. When she does finally face society, it may be like someone who never got into the sunlight before. She could get awfully burned. — JEN

DEAR RAP:

When I read Bert G.'s and Janet's letters, I realized how lucky I am. My parents' wisdom and trust have made me mature enough to handle almost any situation. I'm also 17, have a great boy friend whose ideals are as high as mine. I've been going to boy-girl parties since I was 13 and have many friends of both sexes. I feel confident of myself and my goals, have always made the honor roll and haven't been in any major trouble. I don't drink or smoke though many of my friends do. I'm capable of making intelligent decisions as my folks have gradually given me the freedom to do so — though they still have a big say in what goes on.

Mr. G: By pretending this is the 18th Century, you may be ruining Janet's chances for future happiness — as well as her present life (even though she considers you so frighteninly right). — J.

DEAR RAP:

Janet's letter made me think of a "blushing peach" from the old Kentucky days who thought holding hands was attempted rape.

I had a father almost like that. Thank goodness, I broke away. — HAPPY YOUNG WIFE

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

My 15-year-old daughter and I feel you were both most unkind, disrespectful and unconstructive in your replies to Bert G. and his daughter. We would be delighted to know such a family. How I wish my father had been more like Bert. — P.G.

The Bachelor Party Of Yore

That well-known contemporary ritual associated with a pending marriage, the bachelor party for the bridegroom, has its antecedent in history.

An early account notes that at a given hour the bridegroom, accompanied by his male friends, would start for the bride's home. Halfway on the journey the noisy party would be met by the male friends of the bride. Each group of men would then appoint a champion. This game, an ancient wedding sport known among the Scots as "running for the bride-door," saw the two champions running, or riding horseback on a daredevil race over dangerous roads to the bride's house!

There the winner would seize a ribboned bottle of whisky provided by the bride's father for the contest. The contestants would then return to the groom's group to drink to the bride's health in what usually turned out to be a long session of "passing the bottle."

Try A Sheet For Next Tablecloth

By EUNICE FARMER
(Register and Tribune Syndicate)

DEAR EUNICE,

I just read with interest, your column about making round tablecloths. I have been making them for years and find that the large sheets, even as large as king size, come in beautiful prints and can usually make almost any size tablecloth without piecing the fabric. If they aren't quite long enough, you can add a ruffle of the same fabric or fringe that is purchased by the yard. The corners of the sheet leave ample fabric for any number of matching napkins.

In the end, I think you can save money, since these sheets are often available at bargain prices if they are one of a kind or have a slight imperfection which never seems to show.

Mrs. W.D.

MRS. CECIL Knight, Salina, Kan., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her sewing suggestion:

"Here's a suggestion for anyone who is confused about how to make and wear the 'super-skirt.' Make the first one for a doll. Not only will there be a very pleased child, but also your own super-skirt will be a cinch to construct."

Thanks to Mrs. Knight, this could be a great suggestion for other patterns as well — in other words, a "dry run," so the second time around works without problems.

For those of you who haven't sent for my "Super-Skirt" instructions, they are still available. Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents to cover cost of handling to me in care of the Independent-Journal.

In these days of trying to limit a wardrobe for traveling, and at the same time get the most mileage from your clothes, I can't rave too much about the virtues of jumpers.

Jumpers can be the mainstay of any wardrobe. They can double as a sleeveless dress, which is important if you live in a climate that is variable. They can be changed instantly by the addition of many types of shirts, blouses and sweaters.

A jumper is definitely more slenderizing for the "not so thins," because your eye is focused on the entire length of the garment without a break or color change at the waistline. Pictured are three of the many styles that can be found in every pattern book.

Wear them belted or unbelted, short or long, but wear them and enjoy them.

SUMMER ISN'T even here, and I'm getting letters from you about the disasters of working with cotton knits. I have warned you several times about pre-shrinking cotton knits, but I guess I must do so once more. Cotton knits shrink an incredible amount. It's better to be safe than sorry. Always consider this factor when purchasing the fabric. Add about one fourth of a yard extra, possibly more if you are making a cotton knit suit.

A helpful hint for pre-shrinking is to machine baste or hand baste the selvage edges together before washing. The piece of fabric will retain its shape, and you'll save time in trying to keep the selvages nice and even after washing and drying. Wet the fabric in the same temperature of water you will use later. Also put through the dryer in the same manner.

A few extra minutes of your time to prevent disaster will make the cotton knits you make yourself superior to the ones you buy, which invariably shrink out of shape after a few washings.

Keep Foods In Airtight Containers

Food for camping weekends should be kept in airtight containers both en route and in camp to protect them against insects and moisture as well as to keep from attracting hungry animals.

Foods needing particular protection are flour, pancake mix, sugar, noodles, rice, ready-to-eat foods, cereals, bread, crackers and cookies.

San Rafael Church Is Rite Scene

Jeffrey Charles Caldwell and Janet Ann Fraser, both of San Rafael, were married May 20 at St. Isabella's Catholic Church in San Rafael.

A reception followed at Deer Park Villa restaurant.

Maid of honor was the bridegroom's sister, Kimberlee Costa, and the bride's brother, Barry S. Fraser, was best man. John Cardoza and Mark Hangar ushered. All are residents of San Rafael.

Following a wedding trip to Yosemite Valley, the couple will live in San Rafael.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold H. Fraser of San Rafael. She was graduated from Terra Linda High School and attended College of Marin. Janet is employed by Hibernia Bank in San Francisco.

Jeffrey is the son of Dolores Costa and Charles Caldwell, both of San Rafael. He is a graduate of San Rafael High School and is self employed at J and J Motors in Greenbrae. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. William Powell of San Francisco, and Mr. and Mrs. James Ramsay, also of San Francisco, are his great-grandparents.

Weddings And Glass-Smashing

A practice that is today reserved for male reunions — that of smashing glasses following a toast — has had its part to play in weddings as well.

An early 19th Century Russian account tells of a typical ceremony where the priest drinks to the couple's health from a gilt cup or glass. Following three sips from the cup, the bridegroom throws the vessel on the ground and treads upon the broken pieces, chanting, "Let them be so trampled who maliciously endeavor to create ill-will between us."

The breaking of the glass has carried other symbolic meaning in weddings. Early Hebrew marriages, for example, saw the rabbi holding a glass of wine in his hand before the nuptial couple, and, pretending to deliver the vessel to the bride, lets it drop and break. This was to symbolize the frailty of man's nature, and that the newlyweds should expect disasters and sadness amid happiness and enjoyment. This gesture is still included in Jewish weddings.

Mrs. Richardson Is Society President

ON BEING BLACK

Black Women's Groups Emerge

By SANDRA HAGGERTY
Los Angeles Times Syndicate

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the final installment of a four-part series by black columnist Sandra Haggerty.)

Veronica J. Delores Randall, Lisa Railsback, the Panther Women and the Sisters of Motivation are but a few of the women actively participating in today's black sisterhood. To these ranks of quietly heralded women should be added the Black Muslim women (who are reassessing their commitments and techniques for teaching black children), nurses (especially public health), social workers and conscientious black mothers.

Along with the older, established black women's organizations, such as the National Association of Negro Businesswomen, there are emerging several contemporary organizations where black women are joining forces to make contributions. Among such new groups are the Black Women for Social Justice, the Neo-Black Women, the Sisters for Service and the Big Sisters of the Black Butterflies (an organization for young girls similar to the Bluebirds and Brownies).

THERE IS much controversy within the ranks of black women about the relevancy of women's liberation to black women. Many black women feel that all their energies should be directed toward the liberation of all black people, male and female.

Some black women feel that participation in women's liberation would facilitate the Man's "divide and conquer" (between black men and black women) tactic that has been directed against the black society. They feel that black women must not participate in any ideology which might create and nurture a schism between black men and black women.

Other black women have indicated that an alliance with the women's liberation forces would make us allies with women interested in "ripping off" our black male population. "Why should we help the enemy?" these anti-women's libbers ask.

PERSONALLY, I take an unpopular (among blacks) position on women's liberation. I am 98 per cent in favor of their stated goals. I do not believe their purpose is to alienate and/or put down the male population. Black women should have every right and opportunity to develop themselves as individuals to their greatest possible potential.

Many black women are heads of households and should be able to make a decent salary to support their families. Equal pay for equal work is imperative.

Discussions by blacks concerning women's liberation and competition between men and women invariably bring up a tired cliche. "The black woman must stand behind her man." I disagree. The black woman should stand with her man. I cannot accept the premise that the black man can only be something at the expense of (or in comparison to) his woman being nothing.

As for the alleged hostility and jealousy between black women and white women who prefer black men, women's liberation will neither alleviate nor aggravate the situation. To put it in the vernacular, "white chicks ain't our problem." The fact of the matter is, the black woman will find she is more attractive to her man when she has developed herself as an individual, when she has had access to the discovery of the many miracles and the magic that reside within (and without) herself. It's a matter of individual liberation.

May the sisterhood touch all our souls.

Martinelli Ranch Plans Under Attack

Marin conservationists threw a temporary monkey wrench yesterday into plans for development of the Martinelli Ranch north of Point Reyes Station.

Judge Henry J. Broderick of Marin Superior court ordered the Marin County Board of Supervisors to either turn down a tentative map for the project when it considers it Tuesday or appear in court June 5 to explain why it shouldn't.

The action was filed by the 2,000-member Marin Conservation League, the Environmental Law Fund of Novato and Christopher Burdick, who lives near the 260 acres owned by Elmer Martinelli.

In addition to the supervisors, the action is against the county planning commission which approved the tentative map May 8.

The action argues that the state business and professions code requires a tentative map to conform to a general plan, but none exists that covers the area.

According to the suit, the supervisors repealed the West Marin General Plan Aug. 10, then on Sept. 7 passed an ordinance allowing development by use permit only on projects compatible with the preliminary Marin countywide plan.

That plan places the disputed area in a "coastal recreation corridor," according to the plaintiffs.

Furthermore, the public resources code requires an environmental element to the general plan and an environmental impact study of the proposal. Neither has been done, the conservationists argued.

They are asking the court to forbid issuance of a use permit, order an impact report and declare that no final subdivision map can be approved until a general plan is adopted.

A community of 51 small "ranchettes" is planned for the Martinelli property.

Antidrug Education Day At Base

The drug abuse control staff and base library at Hamilton Air Force Base will conduct an antidrug education day next Thursday.

A 12-hour schedule will start at 9 a.m. with activities scheduled in the library and drug education office.

Representatives from Vacaville State Hospital, Marin Open House, Synanon, Catholic Social Services of Marin and the Marin Institute will participate in discussions about alcohol, drugs and lifestyles.

"Our primary aim is to attract those people who are into drugs and show them alternatives to drugs," base librarian Barbara Coleman said. "But we are also hoping to attract the so-called "straights' who are so often the prime sources of frustration to the users."

The day "is not intended to be a day of mass psychotherapy but a happening, an attempt to avoid the usual intellectual level of discussion and get to the guts of the problem. Drugs are just symptoms of other things."

Capt. Donald Combs of the drug abuse control staff said: "This is open to everyone on base. We've invited students from local junior and senior high schools and in the evening Marin Open House will have a program for families."

Five Acres Of Fill To Be Studied

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Plans for five acres of fill in upper Richardson Bay will be considered by the Bay Conservation and Development Commission at 2 p.m. Thursday in Room 1194 of the State Building, 455 Golden Gate Avenue.

The application by Abe Blumenfeld, David G. Cohn, Edward Goodman and Richard Harris is to fill most of a triangular eight-acre marsh in Mill Valley west of Highway 101 and south of the Goodman Lumber Co. The marsh has no bay frontage, but is subject to tidal action through a culvert under Sycamore Avenue.

The applicants plan a parking lot on about one acre, with uses for the rest of the fill undetermined.

The applicants, however, disputed the commission's jurisdiction saying the marsh was exempt because filling there began before BCDC was created in 1965.

Also on the agenda is a plan by Richard A. Malott to build three apartment buildings containing 32 units within the 100-foot shoreline band at McKenzie and Main streets in San Quentin Village. No fill is proposed.

The commission is scheduled to vote on an application by Raymond G. Handley to build a two-family residence on pilings over the bay at 2308 Mar East Street, Tiburon.

SALES

IF YOU ARE A HIGH CALIBER PERSON WE'D LIKE TO MEET YOU PERSONALLY

We provide a high weekly drawing account, an excellent commission structure, and extend the fringe benefits of hospitalization and life insurance, profit sharing, and stock benefits for your family's protection.

We are presently engaged in seeking the successful individual who would enjoy working in the Industrial/Institutional atmosphere and be able to take advantage of our growth situation to further his own. There is also an excellent opportunity for sales management for those who so desire. No sales or technical background necessary for the right person.

We are a division of a New York Stock Exchange listed corporation whose sales volume has grown over 700% in the last nine years (with black and white figures in our Annual Report to prove it). Our salesmen — who have made this ALL possible — have grown financially and personally in the same remarkable way. Their average income is excellent the first year and grows substantially by the second, and third years.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Restless Legs Syndrome Has Been Unsolved For 300 Years

The restless legs syndrome was described back in 1685 by Thomas Willis. He wrote that when some people go to bed, their arms and legs start leaping and contracting with so much restlessness and tossing, that the victim is unable to sleep and their bed is a "place of the greatest torture." Many people still are bothered by the condition and in the past 300 years little progress has been made in finding the cause or a treatment.

THE RESTLESSNESS (leg jitters) usually begins after going to bed, but occasionally occurs when sitting in a chair. Many of the victims develop an intolerable creeping, internal itching sensation in both calves and lower legs. The sensation is so unpleasant that the individual is compelled to keep moving his limbs, mainly because movement brings temporary relief.

The phenomenon has been described in various ways. "As soon as I lie down a knotted feeling begins in my calf muscles" or "a pull in the back of the leg," "a creepy feeling," "bag of worms," and "legs keep jerking." One sufferer said "it feels sore, like dead, like prickling, like crawling."

We have no specific remedy, although in some victims, diazepam (Valium) has proved beneficial. Aspirin also helps. Temporary relief also has been obtained from walking, bathing the feet in cold water, walking on cold tiles, rubbing, or massaging. One man puts his feet into his refrigerator. Sedatives, anticonvulsants, and drugs that improve the circulation have also been used.

DESPITE all of this, we do not know why some people develop restless legs. There have been reports that there is a greater incidence of the condition among victims of certain diseases or following gastric surgery. According to one article, the first bout of restless legs occurred after surgery for peptic ulcer. The symptom was also noted in diabetics and persons with uremia.

In another article, the victims had a chronic respiratory disorder, such as emphysema. The relationship was not clear. Still others blame anxiety which may have existed first or following the frustration of many sleepless nights.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

PERSONALITY CHANGE

S. C. writes: A 6-year-old child — gay, intelligent, sociable, and good natured — has changed since starting school. She gets spells where she cries a lot, complains that she doesn't want God watching her all the time, and wants to be alone. Do you think this is the effect of school or a mental disorder?

REPLY

Youngsters may develop psychiatric disorders that resemble those found in adults. This problem should be discussed with your physician, even though it could stem from the teacher or from the cruel words of certain classmates.

WEAK RING

R. H. J. writes: What is meant by relaxation of the inguinal ring?

REPLY

The inguinal ring is an oval area through which an existing hernia protrudes in the groin. In some individuals, this area is weakened or relaxed, but still strong enough to prevent the bowel from protruding. This is not hernia.

'LONG' EYEBALLS

M. K. writes: Is nearsightedness due to low metabolism?

REPLY

No. Nearsightedness, or myopia, is hereditary. The individual is born with eyeballs that are too long.

ENDOMETRIOSIS AND SURGERY

Mrs. M. D. S. writes: Does endometriosis call for an operation?

REPLY

Not necessarily. The answer depends upon the age of the woman, the location of these wandering uterine (endometrial) cells, and the amount of distress the plaques are causing. Birth control pills may give effective relief. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on endometriosis.

OLD BUGLE NOSE

D. R. writes: Why do some men sound like trumpet players when they blow their nose?

REPLY

Perhaps they have a nose that resembles a trumpet or are old bugle players.

Satellite Will Work For Farmers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government scientists will soon put an unmanned satellite to work for farmers, the Agriculture Department said today.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration plans to launch the first experimental Earth Resources Technology Satellite (ERTS) from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., in July. Its scientific program will include experiments requested by the Agricultural Research Service—tests intended to develop better technology in managing plant, soil, and water resources.

ERTS will orbit about 550 miles above Earth, carrying remote sensing equipment that will record invisible and visible light waves reflected from objects on Earth.

Department spokesmen said the information provided by the satellite could help identify crops, estimate crop yields, detect insect, disease, and weed infestations, observe soil nutrient and moisture conditions, and monitor pollution patterns.

The satellite will spin around the world for a year or more, sending black and white photographs to ground-based computers. It will retrace its path every 18 days, monitoring crops all through the growing season, and doing it more quickly than would be possible by using aircraft or ground observations.

ERTS' study of insect infestations on a variety of crop plants may make it possible eventually to replace or supplement many of the laborious, time consuming and expensive searches on the ground. Farmers could spray only the limited areas shown in the pictures, and reduce contamination from pesticides.

Agricultural research scientists will study the density of pests, their seasonal distribution patterns, and the effectiveness of control measures.

Another investigation will be made of wind erosion problem areas, with ERTS photographs showing the effectiveness of controls being used.

Watershed hydrology also will be investigated. Agricultural engineers expect data from the satellite may show potential water supplies, and identify areas prone to erosion. Remote sensing from aircraft already is used to detect infestations of some bugs, a service the department hopes will be done more efficiently and cheaply by satellite.

Plea Of Guilty To Drug Sale

A Fairfax man, who sometimes uses the name Humble Hipp Harv, has pleaded guilty to a felony charge of selling LSD as part of a plea bargain.

If the bargain is followed when the probation report is presented July 10, Judge Samual W. Gardiner will sentence William Dennis Rule, 21, to no more than four months in jail and place him on five years of probation. At the end of that time, the charge would be reduced to a misdemeanor if Rule stays out of trouble.

He was arrested Jan. 1 on a warrant charging he had sold the hallucinatory drug to an undercover agent in Novato last August.

No Charges In Death Of Five

MACEDONIA, Ohio (UPI)— Police said they would not file charges against the driver of the truck which struck a car crowded with high school students Friday, killing five of the six teen-age occupants.

The decision followed a lengthy investigation of the 2 p.m. accident and a two-hour grilling of the truck driver.

The driver, David Pafford, 22, told police the car carrying the teen-agers made a sudden left turn in front of his dual axle gravel truck.

Police determined from the skid marks that the truck was driving at 50 miles per hour, under the speed limit.

THE WATER BOARD

Five Seeking Two Seats

Five candidates, including the son and the aunt of current directors, will compete for two seats on the Marin Municipal Water District board in the June 6 election.

The terms of Robert G. Anderson, a 24-year veteran of the board, and John M. MacPhail Jr. will expire this year. Anderson, who will retire as a director next month, represents Division Five — Sausalito, Marin City, Tamalpais Valley, Tiburon, Belvedere and East Corte Madera and MacPhail, who intends to seek reelection, represents Division Two, which includes San Rafael.

Seeking the Division Five posts are Sausalitans Robert G. Anderson Jr., a high school teacher and the present director's son; Dr. Ronald T. Stafford, a physician, and Willard A. Hall, a retired sales and consulting engineer.

Contenders in the District Two race are incumbent MacPhail, treasurer and vice president of McPhail's Inc., a Marin hardware and building materials firm, and his aunt by marriage, Vera McPhail, a retired executive secretary.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. for 16,200 registered voters in Division Two and 16,000 voters in Division Five.

Perhaps the chief issue in the campaign is the question of whether the water district board should prevent further development in Marin by limiting the county's water supply to present levels and not seeking additional sources of water.

Mrs. McPhail is the only candidate who believes the district board should take any action it can — including a ban on additional water hookups — to curb development.

MacPhail and the younger Anderson say emphatically that the water board has no legal authority to concern itself with population or development control, believing those functions rest with such agencies as the county planning department and commission and cities in Marin.

"The trouble is that before you answer the question, 'How much water should Marin have?' you must first ask, 'What kind of county should Marin Be?'" Anderson said. "And that is not a question the water district is administratively, legally, financially or politically equipped to answer."

Both Anderson and Stafford are convinced the board should not present bond issues for increased water supply that would provide for more growth than the countywide general plan calls for — a yearly increase of approximately 3,300 persons.

Stafford also believes "The water district does not have a right to create a water shortage by giving water to new developers at the expense of its present customers; its first obligation is to them."

If the district determines more water is needed, Anderson and Stafford said, district voters should be given the opportunity to vote on new water supply projects. "Residents of the district should not be coerced into voting favorably on new projects because of an impending shortage," Stafford said. Anderson thinks the district also must be concerned with cost and environmental impact in considering any new project.

In the second division race, the two candidates clearly disagree on the role of the water district.

John MacPhail rejects the idea that the district has the authority and obligation to block developments by withholding new water hookups.

"My preference is that control of population questions remain where it belongs: with the county's and cities' professional people," he said. "I'd like to see the role of the district change to a neutral body; away from its current role of encouraging development."

"MacPhail, 40, lives with his wife, Carolyn, and their two children at 16 Manderly Road in San Rafael. He is a lifelong resident of Marin County and graduated from University of California at Berkeley.

He was appointed to the water board in 1970.

His opponent, Mrs. McPhail is equally adamant in her opposition to what she considers a "pro-development" policy by the current board.

"I don't think we should open up our doors (in Marin) and let anyone who wants to come in, simply come in," she said. "I would vote against any requests for new hookups and stop those horrible developments."

She also expressed mistrust of the present board. "One week they'll tell us we're on a water shortage and the next week they'll tell us everything is fine. They're just not truthful."

Mrs. McPhail is married to Graham H. McPhail, chairman of the board of McPhail's Inc., and lives at 40 Peacock Drive in San Rafael.

She was educated at University of California and Columbia University. She formerly worked as executive secretary for the Bechtel Corp. and the Clift Hotel in San Francisco.

Stafford, 28, is employed in the emergency room at Marin General Hospital and plans to specialize in anesthesiology at the University of California Medical Center in San Francisco this fall. He is a member of the Sierra Club, vice chairman of the Marin Medical Society's environmental health commission and a member of the environmental advisory committee to Improvement District A and the Sausalito Citizens Council.

A native of Atlanta, Ga., he has lived in Marin two years. Last year he played a part in the successful campaign to defeat the Water district's Sonoma-Marin Aqueduct project.

Stafford said he would prefer no new construction permitted in Marin. "There is a 15 per cent population turnover in Marin annually and houses would be available for new residents," he said. He believes the district board must work with other agencies in planning for the county and provide only enough water for "reasonable growth."

The candidate criticized the water district board "for repeatedly warning that water rationing loomed for this summer because of one dry year despite previous statements that it would take a three-year dry cycle to produce a water shortage.

"If the claims of a shortage are true, the district should limit new water connections to protect present users," he said. Stafford added that, if elected, he would "insist on a full disclosure of what our water resources actually are."

The physician said the district should begin requiring environmental impact reports before approving water hookups or pipeline extensions for new developments. He believes the district should preserve its watershed as permanent open space by special legislation, hold down district costs, hold town meetings and conduct public opinion surveys on future plans and terminate its membership in the controversial Eel River council. (He said the district currently pays $3,600 in annual dues to the organization).

The 28-year-old Anderson is a lifelong resident of Marin County and teaches industrial arts and social sceience at George Washington High School in San Francisco.

He is a member of the Sierra Club, a volunteer fireman for the Sausalito Fire Department and a former coach in the Southern Marin Police Athletic League.

The candidate said his qualifications for the board post include "a great familiarity" with the district's organizations and functions. During school vacations he worked for the district as a land surveyor and engineering aide.

He and his wife, Marilyn, a nurse, reside at 416 Marin Street.

If elected, Anderson said he would work to retain the district's extensive land holdings as undeveloped wilderness areas. "As one of the largest — if not the largest property owner in Marin — the district has a most valuable asset which should be preserved for future generations," he said.

Saying present consumers of water must be assured of an adequate supply of pure water, Anderson favored a proposed intertie with the North Marin County Water District which would bring approximately 4,000 acre feet of water a year into the Marin Municipal district.

"We are now using more water than we can safely afford to use and must have at least a small supplemental supply of water," he said, adding that he voted against the Sonoma-Marin aqueduct because it was "too large."

He would like to see the district undertake water reclamation as soon as such reuse is practical from public health standards. "Reclamation will have an impact on the size of any future water supply the district will need and that is why it is difficult to determine what will be needed in the way of additional supply at this time," he said.

Anderson believes the district must continue to improve its delivery system, design and landscape tanks, pumps and pipelines so they are least damaging to the environment and continue to solicit public opinion on any major plans for expansion or changes in district operation.

If he becomes a member of the water board, the candidate would try to change the board's afternoon meetings to evening sessions "so more people could attend and speak their minds on issues that concern them."

Hall, 66, the third candidate for the Division Five seat, is in Europe, unavailable for comment.

San Rafael air quality yesterday:

Osidant, clean air.
Nitrogen dioxide, clean air.
Carbon monoxide, clean air.
Smoke particles, clean air.
Other Areas:
San Francisco, clean air.
San Jose, light air pollution.

Colorless oxidants, broanish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbon monoxide causes dizziness, headaches, and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources, while the other three come primarily from motor vehicles.

Five Marin residents have been elected to membership in Phi Kappa Phi, national scholastic honor society, at the University of California, Davis.

They are, from Novato, Robert A. Anderson, senior; Marcy A. Eisenhauer, junior and James W. Henderson, Jr., senior, and from San Rafael, John A. Amberg and Patrice M. Gaffney, both seniors.

Bombs, Bullets Add To Toll In Belfast

BELFAST (UPI) — Bullets and bombs added to the casualty toll in Northern Ireland today while thousands of Protestants marched throagh the streets of Belfast demanding the elimination of Irish Republican Army (IRA) strongholds.

A man was shot and killed and nine more wounded in Belfast. Seven were injured in bombings here and elsewhere.

The injured included William Christie, a Protestant businessman and Lord Mayor-designate of Belfast, who was cut by flying glass.

Between 15,000 and 20,000 Protestants took part in the march, including several hundred members of the paramilitary Ulster Defense Association (UDA), dressed in army field jackets and jungle hats and wearing halloween masks and handkerchiefs to prevent security forces from identifying them.

British troops mounted special patrols during the march but no violence was reported. Marchers carried placards demanding an all-out British military offensive against the so-called "no go" IRA strongholds in Catholic districts. "Smash the IRA!" and "Protestants united, Protestants strong," read some of the banners.

Police said bombs planted in parked cars damaged two movie theaters in Belfast. Both theaters were empty but police said Christie and two policemen were injured in the explosion outside the theater in the Crumlin Road district. There were no injuries in the other blast in the Old Park Road area.

A military spokesman said a bomb inside a car parked on the street in Forkhill, a town near the border with the Irish Republic, exploded as an army patrol passed nearby. Four soldiers suffered minor injuries, he said.

Case Sent To Superior Court

A 25-year-old man, now serving time in the California Rehabilitation Center, has been bound over to Marin Superior Court on a charge of grand theft at the home of a man who loaned him a car last year.

William Scott Kehoe is to appear on arraignment Thursday on the charge, which stemmed from the burglary of the Inverness home of Martin Schweitzer last July 17.

Schweitzer told sheriff's deputies he loaned his car to Kehoe and the key chain also bore a key to his home. When the car was returned, property taken from the house was found inside the vehicle and stereo and camera equipment was missing from the residence, according to deputies.

A warrant was issued and served earlier this month at the rehabilitation center, according to the district attorney's office, which was unsure why he is in the institution.

Salesian, Ygnacio Valley Nines Vie In Redwood Finals

By LEW CODDINGTON

Salesian High School of Richmond received a free pass into the finals, while Ygnacio Valley crashed its way in, but both teams will be there tonight to play for the championship of the Redwood High Baseball Tournament of Champions.

The title game will take place at 8 o'clock at Albert Park in San Rafael.

In action yesterday:

Salesian defeated Mt. Eden of Hayward, 4-1, as the losers made five errors;

Ygnacio Valley bombarded Skyline of Oakland, 9-3, as Tony Garcia homered and Ron Thompson belted three extra-base hits;

Redwood defeated Rancho Cotate of Rohnert Park, 5-0, behind Mark Ruggles' shutout pitching and two-run singles by Bob Brown and Jim Caito; and El Cerrito beat Washington of Fremont, 4-2, with a four-run rally in the third inning.

Other games scheduled today had Rancho Cotate meeting Washington at 1 p.m., Redwood facing El Cerrito at 3 p.m. for the consolation title, and Mt. Eden confronting Skyline at 5 p.m. for third place.

Salesian, normally a hard-hitting team, managed only two safeties off Mt. Eden in a game called after five innings due to the two-hour time limit.

The Chiefs scored twice without benefit of a hit in the third, as Mt. Eden right fielder Mark Sill missed a diving catch for an error with the bases loaded.

Salesian got two more in the fourth on a bases-loaded single by James Thomas, who had been given a life after his easy pop fly behind first base was lost in the lights and fell untouched.

Salesian center fielder Steve Wright made two fine running catches, one to his left and one to his right, to prevent two extra-base hits and strand five runners on base.

Ygnacio Valley belted nine hits off Skyline pitching for its impressive triumph. Thompson, who pitched a one-hitter Thursday night, played third last night and starred at the plate with two doubles and a triple.

Garcia's homer was a three-run shot over the left field fence which put the game out of reach in the sixth inning. Lynn Reinhard hit a solo homer to left in the fifth for Skyline.

Redwood's Ruggles cut down Rancho Cotate during the game and coach Al Endriss cut down the Marin County Athletic League all-star selection committee afterwards.

"Another shutout for the guy who couldn't make all-league," said Endriss, whose hurler led the MCAL with six victories but was named to the sacond team.

Ruggles walked five but allowed only three hits, and permitted only one runner to reach third. He worked with brisk efficiency and the game was over in an hour and 12 minutes.

He was locked in a tense duel with Rancho's Jerry Wachowiak until Redwood scored five runs in the sixth. Ruggles led off the frame with a single to center, his first hit of the year, but was erased as Daryl Edralin hit into a fielder's choice trying to sacrifice.

Scott Barrie lifted a pop foul between third and home which Rancho third-sacker Frank Garrett failed to catch. "It was a little windblown," said Cougar coach Jim Dougherty later. "Those catches are not automatic by any means."

Given a reprieve, Barrie doubled into the open spaces along the right field line, and Phil Bacigalupi was intentionally walked to load the bases.

Mike Connor hit a sinking liner to left field which Tim Peterson muffed trying for a shoestring catch, and Edralin scored. Brown then lined a two-run single to center.

Jeff Vogel followed with a single, loading the bases again,

ALLEN STOPPED

A's Scheme In Victory

OAKLAND (UPI) —Sometimes the best laid plans of mice and men work.

They certainly did for the Oakland A's Friday night as they pulled out all the stops to beat the Chicago White Sox, 4-2.

The victory moved the A's, and the Minnesota Twins, to within a half game of the pace-setting White Sox in the American League West.

Inasmuch as it was the first game of a big weekend series, it got the A's off on the right foot while snapping the White Sox' winning streak at six games.

SUCCESS

The big "game plan" for the A's was not to let Dick Allen hurt them. In that regard, they were successful.

With the A's in front by a run in the third on Reggie Jackson's eighth homer of the year, Ken Holtzman gave Allen nothing to swing at and then walked him.

In the fifth, Walt Williams doubled and Mike Andrews sacrificed him to third. That brought Allen up again and this time Holtzman walked him intentionally. The fact Bill Melton followed with a sacrifice fly to score Williams for a 2-1 lead, made little difference.

"We don't mean to be disrespectful of Melton" said A's skipper Dick Williams. "It's just a case of not letting Allen beat us in that kind of situation. He's a super player and you simply have to pitch around him with runners on."

HOLTZMAN

Holtzman, who outpitched knucklerballer Wilbur Wood for his seventh victory in nine decisions, agreed all the way with his manager.

"Allen killed me when we were both in the other (National) League," said Holtzman.

A walk to Rick Reichardt, a forceout and a double by Ed Herrmann gave the White Sox their first run in the second to tie it and after they went ahead in the fifth, Holtzman settled down and didn't give up another hit the rest of the way. He walked four and struck out four and gave up six hits in all.

SEVENTH

The A's won it in the seventh on a leadoff walk to Dave Duncan, a passed ball by Herrmann, a double by Mike Epstein, which sent Duncan only to third, and a single up the middle by Larry Brown. Brown's Smash scored both for a 3-2 edge and gave him four RBIs on the season. He had driven in only two runs in 74 previous at-bats.

"I was lucky on the hit," said Brown. "I got a good pitch to hit. It was right where I was swinging."

Wood left after Jackson and Sal Bando put together back to back singles starting the eighth and Duncan later hit a sacrifice fly to score Jackson with an insurance tally. The loss was Wood's third compared to 10 victories. He gave up a season game high nine hits.

IT'S A BIRD — No, it was Atlanta Brave left fielder Ralph Garr (48) scrambling into third base last night in Atlanta during the first inning while San Francisco Giant Dave Kingman (26) waited for the ball. Garr had stolen second and advanced to third on a throwing error by Giant catcher Dave Rader. The Braves won, 9-4. (UPI Telephoto)

BRAVES WIN, 9-4

Juan Loses 8th Straight

ATLANTA (UPI)—Juan Marichal's season just about reflects that of the entire San Francisco Giants.

The high-kicking righthander absorbed his eighth straight loss of the season 9-4 Friday night in Atlanta. The defeat mired the Giants deeper in the cellar of the National League West with the poorest record in the majors.

Marichal, now 1-8, was the victim of Hank Aaron's 646th homer in the fourth inning and two suicide squeeze bunts in the second frame.

The Giants also committed six errors in continuing an almost direct reversal of last season when timely hitting, sharp defense and adequate pitching carried them to the NL West title.

POOREST GAME

Pitching probably his poorest game of the season, Marichal surrendered eight runs and eight hits over the first 3 2-3 innings. Charlie Williams, the righthanded reliever obtained from the New York Mets for Willie Mays, hurled the next 3 1-3 innings, allowing one run and three hits.

The Giants usually give Marichal strong support afield. But no more. They committed five miscues in the first four innings.

SQUEEZE PLAY

Atlanta's two squeeze plays came with winning pitcher Ron Reed, 2-6, at bat. Dusty Baker was on third and Marty Perez on second with one out.

With Baker charging from third, Reed tried to bunt a Marichal pitch but it was far outside and bounced off catcher Dave Rader's mitt. Baker came home and Perez went to third.

PERFECT BUNT

On the next pitch, Perez took off for the plate and Reed bunted perfectly down the first base line. By the time Marichal fielded the ball, Perez was nearly in the dugout after crossing home.

Rookie Garry Maddox hit a solo homer for San Francisco in the third. It was his first round-tripper in the big leagues.

In tonight's game, lefty Sam McDowell (6-1) of the Giants duels Phil Niekro (6-4) of the Braves.

DELAYED TELECAST SET

Fastest Indianapolis Field Off And 'Winging'

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Putting behind them the memory of two crashes which killed one driver and injured another in practice, the fastest field in history takes its "wings" and other speed devices onto the Indianapolis Speedway today for the annual 500-mile duel with danger.

Today's race will be delayed telecast by ABC, from 8:30 to 10:30 p.m.

Every one of the 33 cars in the 56th running of the "Indy" classic led by pole-sitter Bobby Unser at 195.940 miles per hour, qualified for the race faster than the fastest qualifier of last year. And so, despite the forecast of a sunny day, in the high 80s, that would put extra pressure on the finely tuned machines, the 500-mile record of 157.735 mph set by last year's winner, Bobby Unser's brother Al, was very much in jeopardy after the start.

But the always dangerous battle on the 2.5 mile course had extra overtones of peril this time, as a result of the death of driver Jim Malloy, last year's fourth place finisher, and the injury of driver Art Pollard in accidents here earlier this month.

Until the race was run, it remained to be seen how perilous the trip would be for this field which qualified at an average speed of 183.6 mph — 12 mph faster than the average last year, truly a giant jump in speed.

New designs were the chief reasons for the new speed, including almost airplane-type wings on some cars, treadless tires on some cars, and a shifting of the radiator out of the nose on some others.

How these things would work under race conditions, instead of the 10-mile qualifying spins, and how the 33 daredevil drivers would handle almost certain record speeds on an oval originally built for 75 mph competition, awaited an answer under the broiling sun.

There were many personal dramas waiting to be played out, too.

Al Unser, winner in both '70 and '71, was bidding to become the first driver in history to win

Seagren In Modesto Pole Vault

MODESTO, (UPI) — Kjell Isaksson isn't here so Bob Seagren had to try for another world pole vault record all by himself today in the usually star-studded California Relays.

Seagren, who won the pole vault gold medal at the 1968 Olympics and has his heart set on winning it again in this year's games at Munich, said after his record-tieing leap that "19 feet is not out of the realm of possibility."

A number of American stars are entered, among them sprinters Eddie Hart, Mel Pender, Lennox Miller and Bobby Turner, Lee Evans and Fred Newhouse in the 400 meters dash, Mark Wenzenreid, Art Sandison and Juris Luzins in the 880, hurdlers Rod Milburn, Willie Davenport, Tom Hill, Paul Gibson and Leon Coleman, and miler Tom Von Ruden.

Elder In Record Shot Put Effort

Darrell Elder of Redwood High School, who apparently thinks "Super Soph" is part of his name, won the Class B shot put with a meet record heave of 57 feet, 5 inches yesterday in the North Coast Section track and field meet at California State University, Hayward.

The "B" field event finals were held yesterday, as were qualifying heats in many track events. All remaining finals were to begin today at 1 p.m.

Elder also finished third in the discus with a toss of 153-11½.

Mike Johnson of Petaluma High School finished fifth in the shot at 52-10 and Ron Shields of Petaluma was fifth in the high jump at 5-10.

Terra Linda High School performed well in "B" qualifying heats. Steve Johnson won his heat of the 100-yard dash in 10.3 and also qualified in the 220. Dave Janbaz made the finals in the 220 and Augie Venezia did so in the 880. The Trojan 440 relay team also qualified.

Jose Martinez of Petaluma won his heat in the "B" 440 with 51.3. Fred Adams of Tamalpais qualified in the low hurdles.

In varsity qualifying, Greg Biber of Tamalpais made the finals in the low hurdles.

Nicklaus' 64 Ties Mark, Leads Atlanta Golf By 1

ATLANTA (UPI)—It looks like Jack Nicklaus' time table is back on schedule as he prepares for the U.S. Open and the second leg of pro golf's first "grand slam."

Nicklaus, who won the Masters last month, came to the Atlanta Golf Classic with one purpose in mind: to tune up his game for the Open which will be played at Pebble Beach, Calif., three weeks from now.

He had also planned to play last week at Memphis but when that was prevented by flu, he said his showing here this week would dictate any possible changes in his pre-Open plan.

When Nicklaus shot a 70 in Thursday's opening Classic round, he said he still wasn't sure how he'd spend the next two weeks. But when he shot a record-tying 8-under-par 64 Friday he indicated he would stick to his former timetable— which means he'll skip the next two your stops at Charlotte and Philadelphia.

"I played about as well today (Friday) as I could expect to," said Nicklaus. "I can't think of but two shots I didn't hit like I wanted. I would have liked to have teed off at Pebble Beach this morning."

Nicklaus, at 10-under-par 134, went into today's third round of the $130,000 Atlanta Classic with a one stroke lead over Bob Lunn (68-135) and two ahead of Gary Player (65-136) who just returned after seven week's absence from the United States to do his own preparing for the Open.

The next two, at 137, were Homero Blancas (68) and Lou Graham (69) who played in Nicklaus' threesome Friday.

Dave Stockton, the man Nicklaus took the Professional Golfers Association title away from last year, also tied the course record of 64 Friday but since he was 13 strokes higher than that the previous day, his 141 total had him back in a five-way tie for 12th place at the midway point of the tournament.

Nicklaus felt the hilly Atlanta Country Club course actually played tougher Friday, at least for him, than it did the day before. "There was a lot more wind out there. However, the greens were better in the morning so I guess you could call it a tossup.

"The real difference was that I just played considerably better," he continued. "I was putting the ball three and four feet from the pin while I was leaving it 20 feet away on Thursday."

Nicklaus didn't really get going until the 11th hole but said he thought "it turned out to be a super round. I like it the way it was. There's no way I can complain about a 64."

Nicklaus started Friday's second round four strokes back

Suburban Triumphs On Martin's 'Slam'

Suburban Auto Repair of San Rafael can thank Mike Martin and Lady Luck for its 5-1 victory over Grayview last night in the Santa Rosa softball tournament at Howarth Park.

Martin hit a grand slam home run in the fifth inning to erase a 1-0 Grayview lead. He got his chance only because the losers' first baseman muffed a throw which would have been the third out on a grounder by Dennis Staub.

Reliever Lee In 4th Win

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Terra Linda's Bill Lee might prefer to be in the Boston Red Sox starting rotation, but the relief pitcher is performing well when called out of the bullpen.

Lee has voiced preference for a starting spot, but manager Eddie Kasko has made the Marinite the team's number one left-handed reliever. And the move has apparently paid off.

The Red Sox reliever increased his record to 4-1 yesterday by blanking the Milwaukee Brewers over the final inning and one-third, enabling host Boston to win, 5-4. Lee gave up two walks and a base hit in an American League game which saw Boston blow a 4-0 lead. Carlton Fisk drove home the winning run in the eighth inning with a single.

The Baltimore Orioles may have found their missing ingredient in a 35-year-old arm.

The Orioles, defending American League champions, are off to a mediocre start this season and one of the reasons has been the ineffectiveness of 35-year-old southpaw Mike Cuellar, a 20-game winner in each of the past three seasons.

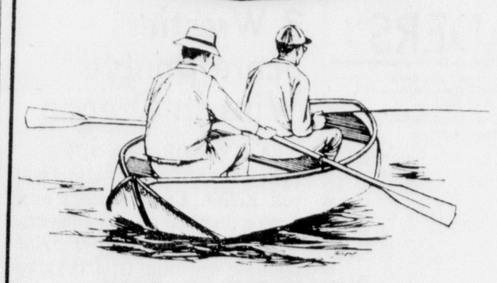

In the first month of the season Cuellar showed only one victory and one complete game in six starts as compared to six victories and six complete games at the same stage last season. Comparatively, the Orioles, who are only 17-15 this season, were 24-16 on May 26th of last year.

But the Orioles' and Cuellar's

N. L. ROUNDUP

Pressure Felt By Contenders

By U.P.INTERNATIONAL

"The Long Hot Summer" already has begun to take its toll on three National League managers —Harry Walker, Walter Alston and Frank Lucchesi—and it's still only May.

Alston and Walker, whose Los Angeles Dodgers and Houston Astros respectively are battling for the NL West pennant, both were ejected Friday night when their clubs met head to head, the Astros emerging with a 5-3 victory.

LUCCHESI

Lucchesi, meanwhile, watched his Philadelphia Phillies suffer through their 10th consecutive loss (6-4 to Pittsburgh) and the cellar of the NL East is only two games away.

In other National League games, Chicago topped Montreal 5-3, St. Louis tripped New York 6-2, Atlanta pounded San Francisco 9-4 and Cincinnati blanked San Diego 4-0.

A FEELING

"I had a feeling he (umpire Dick Stello) had taken a couple of pitches away from my guy (Al Downing)," Alston said explaining his ejection in the sixth inning. "When he called the 3-2 pitch to (Jack) Hiatt a ball to load the bases, I guess the whole thing had built up too much for me."

Walker, who was laughing at Alston from the Houston dugout, encouraging him to continue baiting Stello, found himself out one inning later when he protested a call by third base umpire Andy Olsen, who ruled a fly ball by Frank Robinson in left-center a hit after Hoston outfielders Bob Watson and Jimmy Wynn collided. Watson claiming to have made the catch.

'EVERY PLAY'

"Every play gets to be nerve-wracking when your team's in the race," Walker said. "My club has never beaten the top clubs—this is the first time for us and so now every play like that I jump."

Doug Rader drove in the leading run in the game with a single in the seventh which scored Wynn, who had opened with an infield hit and stole second twice—the first time being nullified when plate umpire Stello ruled interference on the part of the batter Watson.

The Astros got an insurance run in the eighth on a double by Hiatt, winning pitcher Dave Roberts' second sacrifice of the game and a bunt single by Roger Metzger.

'FIRST TIME'

"This is the first time we've ever played pennant baseball here," Walker said. "But it's hard to get a streak going in this league since it's so well balanced. Look at the Phillies."

Look at the Phillies. The only streak they've been able to get going is a losing one. Gene Alley's seventh inning single drove in the winning run to give the Pirates the victory after the Phils had rallied from a 4-0 deficit.

"We're eventually going to come out of this," a dejected Lucchesi said. "Even though the experts had us 100-to-1 and picked us last, I don't think we'll play patsy for anyone."

Thirty-year old rookie Carmen Fanzone, still filling in for the injured Ron Santo, drove in three runs to give the Cubs their victory over Montreal. For the Expos, it was the 12th straight loss on the road.

SEAVER

Tom Seaver continued to have his control troubles as the Cardinals, led by homers by Joe Torre and Ted Simmons, pounced on the Mets' ace pitcher with three runs in the first inning. The loss ended Seaver's mastery over the Cards which had extended since 1970.

Joe Morgan, clouted his sixth homer and Johnny Bench added a bases-loaded single as the Reds blanked San Diego behind Gary Nolan's five-hit pitching.

Morgan connected in the first inning off loser Fred Norman, who had entered the game with four consecutive triumphs.

of first round leader Richard Karl, who went from a 66 to a 74-140. He was still two strokes back after 10 holes but caught up at the par five 11th when he placed his second shot just 13 feet from the cup and sank his eagle putt.

He then had four birdies in the last seven holes for a back-nine 30—and the lead.

If that lead holds up these next two days and he wins the $26,000 firze prize here, Nicklaus will go over the $180,000 mark. That's only $64,000 less than he won all last year when he set an all-time money record.

But Jack Nicklaus is more interested in that "Grand Slam"—the Masters, the U.S. and British Opens and the PGA—than the money itself. Although he insisted he was looking forward only to the final two rounds of the Atlanta Classic, the conversation kept turning back to Pebble Beach and the Open.

"I was a bit concerned about not playing at Memphis," said Nicklaus. "But if I continue like I am now, I may not have missed too much."

but Matt Gondak hit into a fielder's choice, forcing Connor at the plate. Caito then delivered a pinch single, scoring Brown and Vogel, but Gondak was cut down trying for third, ending the inning.

El Cerrito's four-run rally was highlighted by a two-run single by Bill Lowe and one-run hits by Oscar Blackwell and Nick Iacobitti.

Mike Reeves started things with a single, took second on a fielder's choice and reached third as Ron Ward singled. Blackwell's base hit drove home Reeves, and then Ken Rawls walked to load the bases.

Iacobitti followed with his single, and after Blackwell was forced at the plate, Lowe hit a bases-loaded single for two more.

fortunes may be changing for the better. The Cuban-born lefty turned in his strongest performance since the world series last October Friday night when he blanked the Cleveland Indians 2-0 on four hits.

In other AL action, Oakland downed Chicago 4-2, Minnesota blanked Texas 7-0, Detroit downed New York 8-2, and California topped Kansas City 10-5.

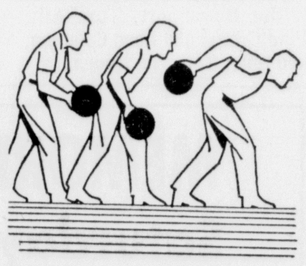

Bert Blyleven pitched a five-hitter and Rod Carew drove in three runs to pace Minnesota's triumph. Carew singled home runs in the second and fifth innings and drove home another in the sixth with a fielder's choice.

Al Kaline and Tom Haller each stroked two-run singles to spark Detroit's victory over the Yankees. Tom Timmerman and Fred Scherman combined on a seven-hitter as the Tigers pinned the loss on Mike Kekich.

California built up an 8-0 lead and then had to hold off the Royals' late rally. Ken Berry, Andy Kosco and Bob Oliver each drove in two runs for California while Kansas City stranded 17 base runners, leaving the bases loaded three times in the first five innings.

BOWLING TIPS

By DON CARTER

Barely lifting your feet as you move forward — a sort of shuffling step — will make your delivery smoother. It is a habit I adopted early in my career and I think there is an advantage to it. Work on it sometime in practice and you may find you like the easy, graceful feeling it gives you.

3 Wrestlers Score Double Wins In Oregon

The trials continue through Sunday.

Keller, former NCAA champion from Ohio State, won two in the 136 1-2 weight while Owings, Pacific Eight star from Washington, dominated the 149 1-2 pound class and Johnson of Portland State pinned two foes in the 163 1-2 pound division.

Frazier's Wife Dislikes Boxing

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — Florence Frazier, wife of heavyweight champ Joe Frazier, said Friday she didn't much care for either of her husband's professions — boxing or nightclub singing.

Frazier successfully defended his heavyweight title crown Thursday night here by defeating Ron Stander of Council Bluffs, Iowa, by a technical knockout.

"I don't like him as any of the two," Mrs. Frazier said of her husband's work.

However, she said she did not interfere with his decisions.

"Most men don't discuss their office business with their wives. It's strictly up to them" she said.

Mrs. Frazier, termed a "darling" by newsmen at the first news conference in her life, said she had urged her husband to quit the ring, "but he's a determined guy."

She said she was sympathetic with Mrs. Stander "after looking at his (Stander's) face last night."

Seventeen stitches were needed to close the four cuts to the head of the challenger. Stander also suffered a broken nose.

Mrs. Frazier, said her husband had beaten George Chuvalo more severely in their match.

She did not attend Thursday night's contest, although she was in the city. She said she did not normally visit cities where her husband was fighting, "but Joe raved about Omaha, and asked me to come here and buy some cloths with his winnings."

Asked why she didn't attend the fight, she replied, "I get too upset, too nervous.

"I took a nap. I don't go to sleep, I'll just pace the floor," she added.

Other comments:

— Will your husband have a rematch with Muhammad Ali? "It's up to him. He's the boss of the family."

— What do you think of womens' lib? "I don't want to discuss that."

— Have you ever lost a fight with the champ? "Sometimes."

the "Indy" three straight times. Three other double winners tried and failed. Mauri Rose and Wilbur Shaw, both of whom lost, and Bill Vukovich Sr., who was killed while leading.

Bobby Unser, the 1968 winner, was expected to set a hot pace right from the beginning in his Dan Gurney-built Eagle powered by an Offenhauser that shredded the qualifying record by more than 17 mph in winning the pole position.

Two other former winners were in the field — Mario Andretti, the 1969 winner, and A.J. Foyt, the 1961, 1964 and 1967 winner who was seeking to become the first four-time winner.

At stake for the third straight year was more than $1 million in prizes, including about $275,000 for the winner.

And there are three rule changes whose effects remained to be seen:

. . . Every car must make at least four pit stops for fuel, one more than previously, which makes rapid work by pit crews more critical than ever.

. . . An 80 mph speed limit during yellow caution light periods, which several drivers consider much too slow.

. . . The green flag to resume full speed after a yellow flag will be given as soon as the track is clear, rather than waiting for the leader to reach the starting line.

Twenty-two cars have turbocharged four-cylinder "offy" engines, including the first 10 starters. Eleven have turbocharged eight-cylinders which have won the last three races.

The Indy now is the first of the "triple crown" 500 in autoracing, followed by similar big car classics at Pocono, Pa., and Ontario.

USC NINE TO DEFEND THE CROWN

SANTA BARBARA (UPI) — The University of Southern California Trojans opened their defense of the National Collegiate Athletic Association baseball championship today against the University of California at Santa Barbara.

USC got into the Distrit 8 playoffs by defeating Washington State University twice last weekend to win the Pacific-8 Crown while U. C. Santa Barbara advanced by winning a pair from Santa Clara.

Trojan ace Greg Widman, 13-2, was scheduled to face Mark French, 5-2, in today's opening game of a best-of-three series.

POOR TRACK

Olympic Bobsled In Danger

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (UPI)—Organizers of the 1976 Winter Olympic Games in Denver, Colo. asked Saturday that the four-man bobsled event be dropped from the program because of the lack of a suitable track.

The request was made in a 279-page report to the Executive Board of the International Olympic Committee, which began a five-day meeting at its headquarters Saturday.

The report, from the Denver organizing Committee, said the world's first refrigerated course will be built for the two-man and luge events at a cost of $4 million.

It said it would cost another $4 million to build a four-man course and therefore suggested that Olympic rules be changed to drop that event.

Carl N. De Temple, head of the Denver committee, told newsmen after handing in the report to the IOC that only the full IOC Assembly in Munich this summer could change the rules in this way.

"But I hope that the Executive Board will adopt a favorable attitude towards our suggestion and in that way influence the summer Assembly," he said.

The International Bobsled Federation is opposed to dropping the four-man race, the most exciting of bobsled events. The Swiss town of Sion in the Valais Alpine region is prepared to take over the 1976 Winter Olympics if necessary.

Jacobs, who is expected to weight about 30 pounds less than Norton at 185, has won 28, lost 18 and drawn twice. Norton pas 22 knockouts in his 26 fights.

THIS DAY IN SPORTS

Indy Race Fans From All Over

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI)—They came from everywhere to this Woodstock on wheels.

From Florida, Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Iowa, Nebraska, you name it, all of them had their young representatives at Saturday's celebrated Indianapolis "500."

Call them race fans, groupies or just plain kids, which was what they really were, they began lining up outside the Speedway here before nightfall Friday, whiled away the hours sicging and talking about all those little things kids like to talk about, and then filed in when the gates opened at 6 a.m. (EDT) with their familiar foamed-lined, vacuum-packed beer and soda pop containers.

"I wouldn't miss this for anything," said one smiling, long-haired 18-year-old youth from Farmingham, Mass. "This is the fourth time I've been here. I don't actually care about auto racing that much, what I mean is I don't know too much about it, but my friends and I always have a ball here."

When the youngsters came into the Speedway, most of them picked out a spot near the first turn, or "The Snakepit" as a few label it, and pitched their blankets there, laying their assorted paraphernalia on top of it.

By the time the race was set to start, the whole thing looked like a scene out of the beach in Fort Lauderdale during Easter vacation.

Space being at a premium, the youngsters sat or reclined on the grass close to one another.

It was impossible to tell who really belonged to this group or that group.

The sweatshirts on some of the boys were the only means of identification and they didn't actually help much.

One of the shirts said: University of Notre Dame. Another said Property of University of Michigan Athletic Department. Still another carried the advice: "Try it, you'll like it."

Most of the boys in the snake pit, which is separated from the track itself by a wire fence, took their shirts off so they could soak up the sun the same time they were soaking up a little beer. The majority of the girls were wearing merely halters and mini skirts.

Eisheid Traded To Minnesota For Draft Pick

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI)—The Minnesota Vikings, who were hurt by a weak punting game in 1971, announced Thursday that they have acquired kicker Mike Eischeid from the Kansas City Chiefs for an undisclosed 1973 draft choice.

Eischeid, 30, a 6 foot, 190 pounder, originally signed with the Vikings in 1963 as a free agent and was on their taxi squad through 1964. From 1966 through 1970, he played for the Oakland Raiders, averaging 42.3 yards per punt on 352 attempts.

Eischeid also place-kicked for the Raiders in 1966, and scored 70 points on 37 conversions and 11 field goals.

Dancer's Image Case Continues

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

FRANKFORT, Ky. — The Kentucky Court of Appeals yesterday was asked to reconsider its ruling against 1948 Kentucky Derby winner Dancer's Image, disqualified because an illegal drug was found in the thoroughbred's system.

The motion for a rehearing was filed by attorney Stuart E. Lampe of Louisville, on behalf of Boston millionaire Peter Fuller, owner of Dancer's Image.

The motion asked the court to hold oral arguments on the case, so the justices could better understand the evidence.

Dancer's Image won the 1968 Kentucky Derby but was disqualified by the State Racing Commission after the pain-killing drug was found in the horse's urine following the race. First-place money of $122,600 was then awarded to second-place finisher Forward Pass, owned by Calumet Farm.

The Franklin Circuit Court overruled the Racing Commission, but the Court of Appeals last month reversed the court's ruling and upheld the disqualification of Dancer's Image.

Auto Racing

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Jim Paschal, a two-time World '600' winner, will start the 400-lap race in 25th position tomorrow although he had the fourth-best qualifying speed.

Paschal, who took the checkered flag in the World 600 in 1964 and 1967, entered late but drove his Chevrolet to a scorching 156.037 miles per hour qualifying speed yesterday.

It was the best lap in the third day of qualifying and only pole-sitter Bobby Allison, David Pearson and Bobby Isaac have bettered the speed during time trials. Allison took the honors with a lapof 158.162 m.p.h.

The final four drivers will be determined today to fill the 40-car field. A consolation race will follow for the cars which failed to qualify for the Grand National Event, which offers a total purse of $153,530.

North Carolina Motor Speedway officials said they were expecting the largest crowd ever to attend a sports event in the two Carolinas to show up for the race.

Basketball

SEATTLE — William M. O'Connor, an assistant coach at Providence College, has been named head basketball coach at Seattle University.

O'Connor, 30, will replace former head coach Buck Buckwalter, who resigned to become assistant coach of the Seattle SuperSonics of the National Basketball Association.

Golf

SOUTHERN PINES, N.C — Sandra Palmer, turning a new putter to advantage, matched par 71 yesterday for a one-stroke opening round lead in the newly revived Women's Titleholders Golf Tournament.

Tied at one-over 72 were Jane Blalock, the leading money winner of the women's tour, and veterans Marlene Hagge and Marilynn Smith, the 1963 and 1964 Titleholders champion.

Gymnastics

LONG BEACH — Cathy Rigby, 19-year-old Olympics veteran, held a slight lead going into today's final round of competition in the U. S. Women's Olympic Gymnastic Trials.

She had 113.10 points and Linda Metheny, 25, of Champaign, Ill., was second with 113.05.

Instructional Loop For Boys Baseball

The San Rafael Parks and Recreation Department again is offering a boys baseball instructional league for boys 7 through 15.

Boys 7-9 will be in Pee Wee League, 9-11 a.m. on weekdays and boys 10-12 in Junior League, weekdays 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Cost for each program is $5. Boys 13-15 will be in Senior League, 1-3 p.m. weekdays, and cost is $15.

BOWLING

Commuter Rolls 959 Keg Series

Concord bowler Larry Jones has two reasons for relishing his East Bay commute to San Rafael's Country Club Bowl:

FIRST, he rolled a hot 959 four-game series at Country Club Tuesday night to top Marin County bowling action this week. He had games of 210, 241, 268, and 240, while averaging 239 for his series effort.

SECOND, Jones joined Country Club Bowl keglers Rich Akers, Gary Newman, Orlando Conti, and Bill Henderson to win the 950 Classic tourney Thursday after two rolloffs in climaxing the 30-week event.

Jones, who has been bowling at Country Club for three years, is a Firestone tire branch manager in Pittsburg.

WHILE JONES was producing his top efforts to date, another Country Club Bowl kegler turned in a notable mark. San Rafael's Linda Graham, who owned a 143 average, collected a sizzling 243 in Blue Chip League play Wednesday.

MEANWHILE, at Greenbrae Lanes, the Ray family of San Anselmo proved there was no generation gap in bowling as Marion and his 21-year-old son, Keith, bowled together. Marion posted an 817 in four games, 10 pins better than his son.

BELLINGHAM, Wash. (UPI) —Oregon College of Education, the defending champ, took a hefty lead into today's competition in the Evergreen Conference Track Meet.

Only three events were completed but OCE had 34 to 22 for host Western Washington in second spot.

Larry Miller of Southern Oregon College won the 6-mile run in 30:14.1, Rick Fordney of OCE took the 3000-meter steeplechase in 9:21.2 and Doyle Kenady of OCE tossed the hammer 148-8.

'MY LIFE' — Sister Seraphina, one of eight nuns who run Nazareth House, a home for elderly people in San Rafael, speaks glowingly of her vocation. At an open house next weekend, she hopes other young women will come to the house to learn about the sisters' lives and work.

AT NAZARETH HOUSE

A Young Nun's Rosy Outlook

By MARY LEYDECKER

A young nun who believes that other young persons "want something that's not going to fall to pieces tomorrow" is going about trying to interest women in her order in the same purposeful manner she does her other chores.

Sister Seraphina, a round-faced clear-eyed young woman, said today's youth "can spot a phony a mile away" but she thinks the students she speaks to recognize that "this is my life."

Her life is the Nazareth House, a home for the elderly run by the Catholic order, the Sisters of Nazareth, on Nova Albion Way in San Rafael.

"We have more than 150 people on our waiting list," Sister Seraphina said. "We can't take any more until we have more sisters."

To this end, the young nun, who is head cook and dietician at the house has added "vocations" to her other duties. In addition to speaking as often as she can at schools, parochial and she hopes soon, public, Sister Seraphina has helped with the planning of a "Spiritual Sunday Social" at Nazareth House.

Aimed at giving young women a chance to learn of the work of the sisters and also what a religious life is like, the sisters have scheduled a special day's program for June 4.

The day will open with Mass at 11:30 a.m., followed by a luncheon and tours of the house. Benediction at 4:30 p.m. will close the day.

"Everyone that comes here feels the sisters' spirit," Sister Seraphina said, noting that most visitors speak of a contrast between the average home for the elderly and Nazareth House.

As soon as a visitor walks through the heavy carved wooden doors, he senses the calm and quiet of the house — a beautiful little church is at the heart of the buildings and attractive rooms open out onto gardens overflowing with roses, geraniums and other colorful flowers, shrubs and lawns.

There is more than quiet to Nazareth House, though, according to Sister Seraphina. The more than 100 "guests," as she called them provide "the fun of our house" in her words.

"Everyone is different," she said, "and we get a lot of fun from them."

The efficient Sister Seraphina pauses on a tour of the house to assure an old woman that she is, indeed, at the doorway of her own room and to tease an old man about his Irishness.

Her kitchen, equipped with gleaming modern equipment, is obviously her pride and joy. There she directs Spanish-speaking helpers — employees she found through a friend on the Economic Opportunity Council.

The tour next goes to the church, where Sister Serapina tells about the choir of the residents she directs.

"They do very well, too; we sing Mass twice a week and sometimes even High Mass," she said.

Unfortunately, however, she said in a cheerful voice, "My organist died last week and I need a new one."

Life and death seem to be taken with equal acceptance by the sisters at Nazareth House.

"They (the residents) don't want to be moved," Sister Seraphina said. "They want to die here," so residents are taken to hospitals only in case of dire emergency, she said. Otherwise, ill persons are cared for in the house's infirmary by the three nuns who are nurses.

For the healthy residents (by far the larger number), there are games, arts and crafts and often outside entertainments.

Helping with these activities are a woman's auxiliary and a group of teen-age girls, called the Nazarettes, who push people in wheelchairs, help serve meals and in general, "do things we don't have time for," Sister Seraphina said.

Nazareth House seems pretty idyllic now, but the sisters have more plans. "We want to build an auditorium" for big parties, general gatherings and arts and crafts activities. The building would also house a beauty shop, a big attraction for the women at Nazareth House, who now patronize one housed in a room intended for an employee.

"We're building it one brick at a time," Sister Seraphina said.

She herself has baked untold loaves of bread from a family recipe which have brought in $1:600 for the new building. Knitting and craft-work goes on all the time, too, with the sisters, residents and auxiliary members making articles for an annual boutique.

But most of all, Sister Seraphina and the other nuns want recruits "so we can take care of more old people"

An active order — "we go where we have to to get our work done," the Sisters of Nazareth have been slow to drop traditions.

Their habit is a traditional one — usually white trimmed with blue — but it's been modernized for comfort.

The sisters believe in the habit — as an outward mark of what they stand for, Sister Seraphina said. She believes that "in what we wear, we put forth what we stand for. After all, a hippie is what he wears," she smiled.

As for young people, Sister Seraphina believes "they want to give. "They are looking for the right thing" — even though they haven't (in the case of the Jesus freaks, she said) necessarily found it.

Her own decision, made right after graduation from a Wisconsin public high school to enter the order, has not been regretted by Sister Seraphina.

However, "we prefer people who know what the world is before they give it up," she said.

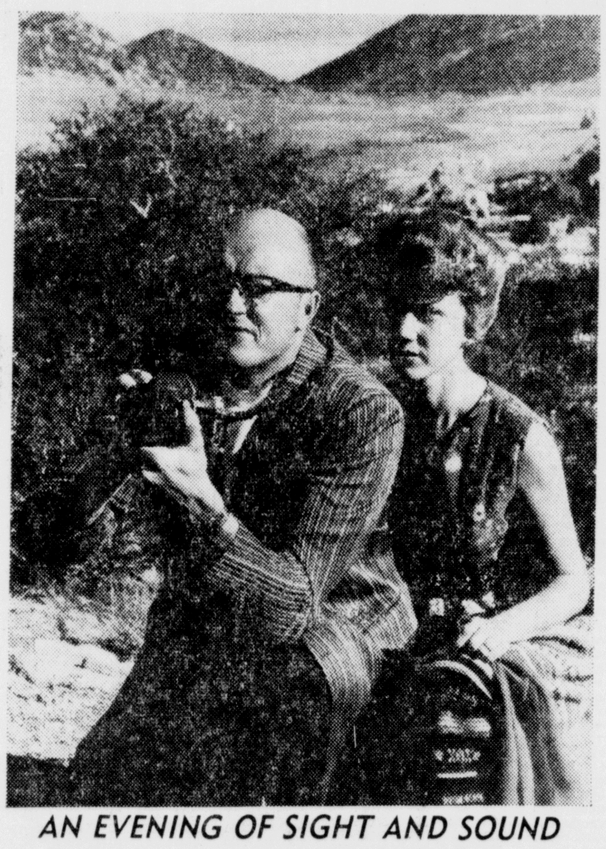

Reservations for the June 4 open house may be made by calling or writing Nazareth House at 245 Nova Albion Way.

CHEERFUL WORKERS — Sister Seraphina (right) helps kitchen workers Odeli Espinoza (left) and Irma Hilton with the chores in the large, gleaming kitchen at Nazareth House, a home for senior citizens. The young nun serves as chief cook and dietician, planning, shopping and helping prepare meals for about 140 people each day.

Three Golden Gate Faculty Members Named Top Educators

Three faculty members at Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary have been chosen Outstanding Educators of America for 1972.

Named for the honor on the basis of civic and professional achievements were Dr. Carlyle D. Bennett, professor of voice, conducting and music administration; Dr. Clayton K. Harrop, professor of New Testament interpretation, and Dr. Jack W. Manning, professor of church history. Their names and biographical sketches will appear in the 1972 national awards volume of "Outstanding Educators of America."

OEA is an annual awards program which honors distinguished men and women for exceptional service, achievements and leadership in the field of education. Nominations for the program are made by officials of colleges, universities and seminaries, including presidents, deans and department chairmen.

Guidelines for selection include the educator's talents in the classroom, contributions to research, administrative abilities, civic service and professional recognition.

Bennett, who has more than 35 years in Christian education and music, is currently Minister of music for First Baptist Church, Tiburon, in addition to his responsibilities as head of the music department at Golden Gate. He will work as a Southern Baptist missionary associate in Penang, Malaysia, for one year, following retirement from Golden Gate in July 1972. Bennett has been on the seminary faculty since 1953.

Harrop has been a Golden Gate faculty member since 1955. He is a 1949 graduate of William Jewell College, Liberty, Mo., where he received the bachelor of arts degree. In 1952, he received the bachelor of divinity degree and in 1956 earned the doctor of theology degree from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky.

In 1964-65, Harrop took a sabbatical leave and studied at the University of Chicago and at the University of Cambridge in England.

A former pastor in Indiana and Missouri, Harrop has served as interim pastor for several Northern California churches, in addition to his seminary duties.

The third faculty member to receive the current OEA honor at Golden Gate, Manning has been with the seminary since 1950. He retired from the U.S. Army Reserve Chaplaincy in 1970 and was awarded the Meritorious Service Medal in 1971.

Manning is a 1936 bachelor of arts graduate of Baylor University, Waco, Tex. He received the master of theology degree from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, Fort Worth, Tex. in 1939 and earned the doctor of theology degree from Central Baptist Theological Seminary, Kansas City, Kan. in 1951.

He pastored churches in Oklahoma and Texas from 1939-50. A former president of the Baptist Ministers Alliance, Oklahoma City, Manning has been active in Southern Baptist associational work and has been a trustee for California Baptist College in Riverside.

Assemblies Of God Announces Convention

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (UPI) — The 35th General Council of the Assemblies of God, biennial business convention of the denomination, will be held Aug. 16-21, 1973, at Miami Beach, Fla., says Rev. Thomas F. Zimmerman, general superintendent.

Special Rite Is Tomorrow

As a highlight of the Marin Grecian Festival, a Fourth Century Divine Liturgy of the Greek Orthodox Church will be celebrated at 10 a.m. tomorrow in the Marin Veterans Memorial Auditorium.

During the liturgy, written by Archbishop John Chrysostom of Constantinople, the Marin County Greek Orthodox Church Choir, under direction of Jerome Caran, will chant the traditional Byzantine music. Officiating will be Rev. James T. Adams, pastor of the Marin church.

The service is open to the public, Adams said.

Utah's Largest

PROVO, Utah (UPI)—Brigham Young University, owned by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, is the largest of Utah's 13 institutions of higher learning. Nearly 26,000 students attend classes on the BYI campus, which is a major Utah visitor attraction.

Tiburon Church Will Mark 15th Birthday

Westminster Presbyterian Church of Tiburon will mark its 15th anniversary June 4 with a celebration of evangelism, "Mission Possible."

Following a pancake breakfast at 9 a.m. served by the Youth Group of the church, members will participate in an old-fashion hymn sing and a service centered on outreach. Co-chairmen for the breakfast are Mrs. Robin Hobart and Mrs. Herbert Beckner.

Organized on June 2, 1957, with 95 charter members, Westminster services were first held in a rented loft over Herbert's Sherbert Shop on the Tiburon Boardwalk. Children went to Sunday school on a train, meeting each week in Northwestern Pacific Railway coaches.

The move to the present structure at 240 Tiburon Boulevard was made on Easter Sunday 1960, and marked the culmination of an ambitious building program.

Pastor of Westminster Presbyterian Church is Dr. William M. Perdue.

Special Service To Be Held Tomorrow

The Nordic Circle of the Singles and Doubles of Marin will hold a special church service at 8 a.m. tomorrow at the Alta Mira Hotel in Sausalito.

WHAT WILL YOU GIVE YOUR CHILD?
The best parent can't give his child all the answers. What he can give him is a foundation to grow on—a way to seek out those answers with confidence.
Every week in the Christian Science Sunday School, children discuss with each other, and with adults, exactly how God helps them each day to overcome problems and limitations. It's education of the most practical and lasting kind.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Don't Sit Still When Foe Appears With A Big Gun

What should you do when an enemy appears in your doorway with a gun in his hand? You might do one thing, and you might do another, but the important thing is not to sit still. I wouldn't give you advice of this kind unless I had a bridge hand to prove its soundness.

SOUTH CALM

West opened the king of hearts, and East overtook with the ace in order to return the singleton five of diamonds. This was the enemy on the doorstep with the gun in his hand, but South sat still.

Declarer led the ten of spades from dummy. East played low, and dummy's ten won. On the trump continuation, East stepped up with the ace of spades and returned a low heart.

West won with the queen of hearts and led a diamond, whereupon East ruffed to take the setting trick.

SHOULD SEE IT

South should have seen it all coming because the play of the ace of hearts at the first trick and the diamond return at the second trick could mean only one thing. South's only hope was to cut communications between the opponents. If West couldn't gain the lead with the queen of hearts he couldn't give his partner a diamond ruff.

After winning the diamond return at the second trick, declarer should cash dummy's ace of clubs and then lead the queen of clubs from dummy. East must cover with the king of clubs, and South discards the ten of hearts.

ODD PLAY

This odd play gives the defenders a club trick but robs them of a heart trick. West never gains the lead and therefore never gives his partner a diamond ruff. South makes his contract, losing only one spade, one heart and one club.

DAILY QUESTION

Dealer, at your right, opens with one club.

You hold:
♠- 10 9 8
♥- 7 4 2
♦- A Q 10
♣- A Q 7 3.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass.

You should not consider a defensive bid with this kind of hand regardless of which suits you hold and which suit is bid by the opponent. It is especially undesirable to bid when your best suit has been bid ahead of you.

Yesterday's Answer

NOW YOU SEE IT — Lisa Larrea, 5, of Novato, giggles as Dick the Magician uses her to perform a trick at Novato's Western Country Fair, which will end a Memorial Day weekend run tomorrow. The magic art is among a variety of events that have attracted up to 3,500 persons thus far.

Parade Loses Grand Marshall

By FRANK FARRARA

Organizers of the Novato Western Country Fair, lacking a grand marshall because of a mixup at San Francisco International Airport last night, planned to go ahead with a scheduled parade anyway today.

"It's too bad, really," said fair chairman Jack A. Whitcomb. "We've got an empty saddle and a vacant horse."

Television actor Guy Stockwell had planned to be the parade's grand marshall, and actually got as far as the airport in San Francisco before things went wrong.

Whitcomb said he wasn't sure exactly how the mistake occurred, but apparently Stockwell had gone to the SFO Helicopter terminal expecting to be flown to Novato. He was to have been picked up by Marin Aviation at another airport location, then taken to Gnoss Field.

Whitcomb said a delegation went to Gnoss Field last night and waited, but Stockwell didn't show up. When they began phoning to check later that night, they discovered that Stockwell had waited at the helicopter terminal for a while, then returned to Los Angeles.

The fair will end its four-day run tomorrow with a packed schedule of events at the fairgrounds at the east end of Rowland Boulevard.

Up to 3,500 persons thus far have attended the annual event, which began Thursday night.

The sounds of the fair were muted yesterday under a warm sun as young children and parents strolled beneath the modernistic towers of the scary rides that loom from the marshland.

Rags the Clown was mystifying tots seated in a semicircle on bales of hay who eagerly volunteered to get into the act when he asked for assistance.

"Chet, you wave the wand, and Mary, you hold the glass," he said. Lo and behold a colorful handkerchief escaped from a cloth bag and appeared in the glass. The youngsters left the stage still wondering what happended.

Down the midway, a man called to passersby, "get your souvenirs, hats, get some beautiful hats, monkeys, horns," and nearby workers whose rides were empty, rested in the shade.

"You're not afraid to go up on that thing are you?" One youth asked another as they passed the "toboggan tower."

At the dunk tank, a young girl in a bathing suit seated above the tank of water taunted a young man who had missed three throws at the target. "What a pitcher," she yelled.

A small group of parents watched their tots on the merry-go-round, while the organ pumped out a polka and the operator in his undershirt took another swig of a soft drink.

Local residents manned game booths and food concessions, calling out to acquaintances, and the children headed for the small rides, miniature planes, motorcycle and bumper cars.

An operator in blue denims urged on the young bumper drivers with running commentary, "hit that red car, he's going too fast; there, he's slowing down now."

Nearby freeway traffic zoomed by and planes from Hamilton Air Force Base soared overhead, ignored by fairgoers, absorbed in the sights and sounds of the fair.

One encouraging sight to those arriving was a young boy riding homeward on his bicycle, holding his prize, a red teddy bear.

TONIGHT

6:30 p.m. — Western special band.

7 to 10 p.m. — Thompson Brothers, western dance band.

TOMORROW

Noon to 10 p.m. — Carnival rides and booths open at fairgrounds.

12:30 p.m., — Tug of war between Novato Chamber of Commerce and Novato Jaycees.

1:30 p.m. — Water ball fight between Novato Volunteer Firemen and Kentfield Fire Department.

2 p.m. — Three-wheeler race and children's tricycle race.

2 p.m. — Horseshoe tournament.

2 p.m. — Rock band concert.

First Angela Case Funds From State

Marin County has received $100,000 from the state as its first reimbursement for costs of the Angela Davis case.

County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney reported yesterday the state agreed to begin payments of Marin's expenses in the case before all of the "numerous legal contingencies" are resolved.

The payment was made under legislation sponsored by Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, at the request of the Marin County Board of Supervisors. Maloney predicted that remaining portions of the claim would be settled and paid within a few weeks.

In a letter to the board of supervisors, he pointed out that Bagley's legislation also saved the county from a $700,000 bill from Santa Clara County for its expenses in the trial which has nearly concluded in San Jose. The state will pay those expenses directly, Maloney explained.

Bombs Rip Buildings At Columbia

NEW YORK (UPI)—Timebombs exploded before dawn today inside two Columbia University buildings which were targets last month of student protests over renewed bombing of North Vietnam.

No injuries were reported and damage was described as minor. Classes have ended for the year and there were few students on campus.

Meanwhile a search was made for a bomb at the Supreme Court building in Washington after an anonymous call was received in the early morning hours.

Police said one bomb went off at 1:45 a.m. EDT in a ninth floor seminar room of the new 15-story School of International Affairs (SIA) building. About 20 minutes later the second blew apart a sink closet in a ninth floor hallway of Pupin Hall, a 14-story building which houses the Physics Department.

Sgt. Ed Sullivan said a woman called Columbia security police at about the time of the SIA explosion, said two bombs had gone off and warned that three more had been planted at the Law School, Lowe Library and Philosophy Hall. The woman said "pig" and hung up, Sullivan said.

40,000 Young Pop Fans At Festival

LONDON (UPI)—Some 40,000 young pop music fans got a taste today of what the Beatles meant when they sang "It's been a hard day's night."

All had converged on a rural field in Lincolnshire last night for a mammoth open-air pop festival. Then, disaster struck. Wintry winds blew away their tents and they were drenched by blustering rains.

By mid-morning today, medical teams at the site 132 miles north of London said they had treated more than 300 young people for exposure.

The pop music fans led an onslaught of travelers taking off for Britain's spring banking holiday. Heavy traffic jams clogged roads and police said more than 4,000 cars were passing each hour on some major highways.

Serious congestion problems developed at the ports along the English Channel where high winds snarled ferry services to the continent.

The Hollywood-style Great Western Express festival led the nation's attractions for the three-day weekend. And, although the rain drove some spectators away, thousands of others were crowded into the 300-acre site.

Problems Concerning Santa Venetia Aired

About 60 persons and a nine-member panel discussed community problems at a meeting called by the Santa Venetia Improvement Association Thursday.

Gail L. Guillory, an association member, said general discussion included such areas as burglary, illegal number of residents in a single-home dwelling, reckless driving, police law violations, the teen center, drug and alcohol abuse, the sanitary district, and flood control outlets.

A movie on burglary prevention was shown. Bella H. Aaron, project director for Marin County police-community relations who coordinated the program outlined a homeowner burglary prevention program under which household items can be marked with a stenciling device.

Mrs. Guillory said law enforcement officials participating in the discussion noted that problems raised by the residents are widespread and not confined to the Santa Venetia area.

She said many people participating in the discussion believed there had been an improvement in the Santa Venetia area.

Sgt. Donald Myers of the California Highway Patrol explained that in complaints such as reckless driving and speeding the violations must be witnessed. He said it is not enough to have the license number of the alleged violator because he has to be caught in the act.

Racial Row Rumors At High School Dismissed

Rumors of a racial row at San Rafael High School on Thursday were dismissed yesterday by Dr. Peter Palches, high school principal, who said there were two separate fist fights.

He said both fights involved one black and one white student, but "it was not a racial incident in that the grievance between the boys was not racial."

Palches said two boys apparently had been questioning each others fighting ability for some time and decided to settle the argument after school on the athletic field.

He said a bloody nose and cut lip resulted from that fight. Palches said the fight attracted about 50 other students. After the fight, he said, two bystanders, also a black and a white, started the second fight and a broken nose resulted.

Palches said the student with the broken nose was taken to the hospital by his mother. He said all four students were told not to report to classes yesterday.

He would not identify the students because "we have four embarrassed kids right now and we don't want to make celebrities out of them."

Classes Set For Pre-Schoolers

The San Rafael Parks and Recreation Department has announced several classes for preschool age children beginning the week of June 26.

Offered are a tiny tot program for children 3 to 5 years old; story hour for children 3 to 5; acrobatics and tumbling, for children 3 to 6 years old; children's ballet, for children 4 and 5 years old, and children's creative dance for children 3 to 5 years old.

Registration will be June 5 to June 8 at the Community Recreation Center.

Victim Of Accident Said Satisfactory

Kathleen DeMartini, 43, of 122 Acacia Avenue, Larkspur, was reported in satisfactory condition at Marin General Hospital today after being injured in a Novato area traffic accident yesterday afternoon.

Hospital records indicated only that she suffered "multiple" injuries. Novato police said today that officers had not completed a report on the accident.

Non-Smokers Need New Pollution Law

In his report on the health hazards of cigarettes, the U.S. surgeon general estimated that about 70 million Americans regularly use tobacco.

Those 70 millions constitute just over one-third of our total population.

That means that nearly two-thirds of us do NOT use tobacco — voluntarily.

We non-users inhale a considerable amount of it involuntarily — after it is exhaled by the one-third who smoke.

Surely this is the most offensive of all pollution which our present-day society produces.

WE NON-SMOKERS do not want to trample on the rights of others to inhale smoke-laden air if they wish; but we do not agree that their rights include forcing the rest of us to breathe smoke-laden air, after they exhale it.

Nowhere is this conflict more in evidence than on airplanes.

No other form of public transportation, with the exception of subways at commute hour, crowd so many people into such restricted space as airlines.

The airlines claim that their ventilation systems are effective and adequate to provide fresh air for breathing despite the over-abundance of cigarette smoke.

However, most of us non-smokers would subscribe to the conviction of a regular Washington, D.C.-New York commuter who wrote recently: "Engineers just haven't devised a ventilating system that's capable of adequately cleansing cabin air fouled by cigarette smoke."

A COUPLE OF MONTHS ago the Christian Science Monitor surveyed the airline situation and found that 18 international air carriers were then offering non-smoking sections aboard their aircraft.

Most recently, some of the charter carriers which operate around the world from Oakland have introduced non-smoking sections.

Characteristically, the airline public relations and publicity departments are patting themselves on the back for having solved the problem.

However, letters to the Christian Science Monitor editor and the personal observations of the I-J's non-smoking editor lead to different conclusions.

AS ONE CSM reader wrote: "Allowing people to smoke in certain areas is not the answer. The plane is too small an area, eventually the smoke will reach the nonsmokers' area. Not only is the smoke objectionable in its original state, but the after-smell it leaves in the hair and clothing of the passengers and the interior of the plane is sickening."

Amen.

Another CSM reader wrote: "Our experience last fall was that (the airline) very graciously assigned us to the 'no-smoking' section of the plane, but nothing was done on the plane to enforce it. People smoked all around us — even cigars. And when one lady objected, the stewardess shrugged her shoulders and said the plane was filled to capacity and there was no place for smokers to sit other than in the nonsmoking section."

Amen.

MOST AIRLINES have a policy against cigar and pipe smoking at any time aboard aircraft.

However, the Christian Science Monitor confirmed what many of us have observed: that the policy is rarely enforced unless there is a complaint from a passenger.

If the smoker refuses to extinguish his cigar or pipe, the aircraft commander is supposed to have the authority to enforce company policies. But instances of nonenforcement are legion.

AIRPLANES ARE NOT, of course, the only place where second-hand smoke is stinkingly repulsive.

The same situation prevails in many places of public accommodation such as buses, waiting rooms, public halls and auditoriums, restaurants, and even in lines at bank tellers' windows.

It is not surprising to learn that an organization (Action on Smoking and Health) has been formed specifically to fight for the legal rights of non-smokers.

May its success be unbounded!

An organization called the American Association of Doctors' Nurses also has begun to speak out.

It seriously proposes federal subsidies to non-smokers and those who advocate and encourage others to stop smoking.

It also would impose certain sanctions against hospitals which profit from the sale of tobacco and/or allow smoking on the premises.

THESE APPROACHES seem unrealistic and not likely to be acceptable or workable.

If the AADN would use its influence to solve the smoking problem in the stuffy, cramped waiting rooms of doctors' offices, it presumably would be more likely to succeed.

Finally, we wish AADN members would pass the word to some of their own doctor-employers who are careless in blowing smoke.

We recall, for instance, one allergist M.D. who practices in Marin and who receives patients in a cramped, stuffy office filled with clouds of smoke from the smoldering ash tray on his desk.

If you don't have a respiratory irritation when you enter his office, you will have before you leave. It must be good for his business.

"SELFISH, unimaginative, unfeeling brutes" was the description applied to such smokers by the eminent health columnist, Dr. Peter J. Steincrohn.

We are beginning to have effective laws against the industrial pollution of our air. Now we need effective controls to protect non-smokers from the often much more concentrated pollution of tobacco smoke.

Student Disagrees On Board Meeting

A am a 14-year old student at the Lagunitas School and I am writing in response to a letter in your newspaper with the caption "Mixing Politics with Education" written by Mr. W. M. McNew.

I was at the Lagunitas School Board meeting on May 8, also. I seemed to have seen everything that happened totally differently from Mr. McNew. I felt that the board meeting was very educational and an experience I won't forget. It was a usual king of board meeting except that at the end Richard Sloan, a member of the board of trustees, said that he had a proposal he would like the board to consider. He talked about how he would like the school's flags to be lowered to half mast and to have a telegram sent to President Nixon in response to his plan to mine the harbors and increase the bombing. His proposal was the best thing I had heard in a long time. While Mr. Sloan was speaking, Mr. McNew was so rude as to laugh out loud . . .

The proposal was defeated by a 3 to 2 vote as some of the members felt it was not their place as a school board to take such an action. I do not understand that. This war is having all kinds of effects on my education; political, financial, etc. My entire future is at stake . . .

I wish more people would fight for what they believe in, but at the same time, listen to what others have to say not just make fun of and abuse anyone who does not agree with you. That is why I write this letter.

TRACI McMAIN

'World City' Author Urges Funds For U.N.

Last April, San Anselmo became the first "World City" in California when the city council adopted a statement of world citizenship responsibility, and called for the strengthening of the United Nations into a limited world government. This "mundialization" statement has been adopted by many religious, civic, ecology, municipal and other organizations within these past two years since the mundialization campaign began in the U.S.A. The latest California community to mundialize is none other than Los Angeles. . .

The House of Representatives rejected 202-156 a motion to restore U. N. funds cut by the appropriations committee. The accepted provision said that the U. S. share of U. N. operating expenses (for all agencies) shall not exceed 25 per cent, in contrast to the U.S.' fiscal 1972 share of 31.5 per cent. This would slash $13.2 million from the $60.1 million President Nixon has requested for the U. N. in fiscal 1973. . .

Any reduction of U.S.A. assessment for the U. N. budget must be negotiated in the U. N. — not cut unilaterally. Otherwise, it would be in violation of the U. N. Participation Act.

I sincerely urge all the readers of this newspaper to write immediately to our senators and demand that hearings be held to restore full funding by the U.S.A. to the United Nations. . .

Keep Our Button-Pushers With Their Feet On The Ground

WASHINGTON — A recent story in the newspaper has upset my friend Flaxmeyer no end. He read that according to Sen. William Proxmire, the Defense Department has asked for almost a half-billion dollars to buy three 747 Boeing jets that would be used as an Advance Airborne National Command Post for the President of the United States and his top advisers in case of a nuclear attack.

According to the story, the planes will give the President and top officials an opportunity to take off before the enemy missiles strike and fly around in safety, pushing whatever buttons have to be pushed. The argument for these flying command posts is that our communications would be protected, no matter what the enemy hit on the ground.

WHEN FLAXMEYER read the story he called me up immediately. "Don't get me wrong. I'm not against the Defense Department asking for a half-billion dollars for 747 jets. God knows it's a drop in the bucket compared to what we're spending now. But I do object to giving the President of the United States and his advisers a chance to take off into the sky at the first sign of a nuclear attack."

"But," I protested, "it seems reasonable to me that the President should be able to conduct World War III from the air."

"Listen, one of the most important safeguards we have now is that the leaders of the nuclear powers know if we go, they go, too. If they have any chance of thinking they could be spared, they might make some very stupid decisions."

"FLAXMEYER," I said, "do you think the President of the United States would be influenced in his decisions by whether he survives a nuclear holocaust or not?"

"Maybe not consciously," he said, "but subconsciously he may figure he has nothing to lose. Look, I'm not talking just about the President of the United States. If we build three 747s as command posts, the Russians will equip three command Illyushins for their leaders. I say it's absolutely essential that the men who make the decisions to destroy the world know they have no chance of surviving the mischief they have cooked up."

"What do you suggest?" I asked.

"The SALT agreement must have a clause written into it that neither side may build any airplanes that can be used as command posts for its leaders and top officials. Also, if the balloon goes up, the men who advised the leaders must be forbidden to leave Washington and Moscow. In fact, the language in the treaty must say that if war is declared, all U.S. advisers to the President must line up on Pennsylvania Avenue at attention, and all advisers to the Soviet leaders must line up in front of the Kremlin.

"The treaty should further state that the President and the Soviet leaders must remain in their respective offices until the last missile is fired."

"THAT'S STRONG language," I told Flaxmeyer. "Wouldn't you rather have the President of the United States flying around making sure the Soviets are paid back for their infamy?"

"No, sir! The only hope the little people have is that there will be no 747s and Illyushins to save the people who push the buttons."

"Let's forget World War III for the moment," I told Flaxmeyer. "If we ordered the planes, the half-billion dollars could do a lot for Boeing Aircraft in Seattle, Wash."

"I don't care. I say we scratch the order. I want to be sure if the mushroom cloud ever goes up, the President, his family and ALL his advisers are looking UP at it from the same angle as I am — and not DOWN on it from the friendly skies of United."

Moscow Meeting Represents Wholly New Kind Of Summitry

MOSCOW — That Richard Nixon has been a guest in the private quarters of the Kremlin is enough in itself to turn the world upside down. It is a great adventure, a remarkable beginning, and no matter what the end, nothing can ever be quite the same again.

The forthright decision of the President to seek agreements with the Soviet Union and the skill and negotiating sagacity of Henry Kissinger, his security adviser, brought this about. The man from Whittier, Calif., and the brilliant Jewish scholar, who at the age of 15 escaped with his family from Nazi Germany, make an extraordinary combination. That they should be working together in the Kremlin of the czars with the Communist dictators who abolished czardom is one of those fortuitous turns of history that no one could have foreseen.

THIS IS A KIND of summitry that, as the President has said, is different from any that has gone before. It is different because of the prolonged, painstaking preparation that laid the groundwork.

I am optimist enough to believe that a strategic Arms Limitation agreement will be signed here (it is not yet as I write this). The logic of the weapons annihilation is inevitable. Since they cannot be used without bringing an end to humanity, the time has come to put a period to the swelling volume of overkill that today means roughly the equivalent of 200 tons of TNT for every human being on earth.

Among the fabulous sights in the great walled enclosure of the Kremlin is the largest cannon ever built. Cast in the 16th Century, it weighs more than 100 tons. The cannonballs weigh one ton each. The cannon was never fired because it was feared that the necessary explosive charge would shatter the weapon itself.

There is symbolic meaning in this great bronze object that stands in front of the Cathedral of the Assumption in the Kremlin enclosure. It is a dinosaur of a weapon that like the nuclear missile could not be used without destroying its creator.

The strategic arms agreement, far and away the most important potential in this meeting, did not come out of the blue. The limited test-ban treaty put an end to nuclear testing in the atmosphere that in the early years sowed the upper air with deadly fallout. The nonproliferation treaty undertook to prevent the spread of nuclear weaponry beyond the five nations — the two giants, France, Britain and China — that now have it. These were small but encouraging steps on the route that brought the president to Moscow.

ALTHOUGH COOPERATION in space — an agreement on joint terms for space docking — is nothing like as important as strategic arms, it is in a sense allied to it. With a language of their own, scientists can transcend the barriers inhibiting the diplomats. Given a green light in a formal agreement, American and Russian scientists can cooperate in ways to bring the two sides closer together. And it can mean savings for both in the enormous cost of space exploration.

As the President said just before departing, this was not to be merely cosmetics as summits in the past have been. It was to be an attempt to tie down certain practical realities on which a firm future can be built. One of the wisest observers over many years of this curious closed society puts it this way:

"The Russians are thinking not of next year or of a next election — they don't have to think about that, but of 25 years from now and where they will be then and where the United States will be. Perhaps I should say 50 years. And it may well be that that long-range view is the most important difference between the two societies."

The waiting game has been difficult for America to follow. There is always another election around the corner. But this joining of the two, this joint diplomatic docking, should carry into the future beyond the vagaries of election campaigns.

New Beginning For Europe: Old Dream Finally Comes True

LONDON — It has become a cliche to say that the world is moving into a new era, but I for one had to do a refresher run through Western NATO Europe to realize fully just how much this is true and some of the things involved.

For example, we have all recognized for some time that this has already become a three-cornered instead of a two-sided world. And some have talked about the possible emergence of a fourth power center in Western Europe — if and when the Western Europeans can organize a political framework for themselves, in addition to the economic one which is coming into being right now.

But what needs to be realized particularly in North America is that suddenly the sense of a new Europe coming into being is the first interest and first preoccupation of the West Europeans.

THE PROCESS has been long in getting under way. Now it is coming with a rush. The overwhelming majority for the Common Market in the Irish referendum is a symptom. Ireland's leaders hoped to get a majority. They never dreamed it would be a massive mandate to get Ireland into Europe as fast as possible.

Why was the Irish government taken by surprise? Because it was not until this year that the economic merging of Western Europe came to be widely and generally accepted in Western Europe as being the shape of things to come.

It is only in this year of 1972 that British opinion has finally come around to favoring entry into Europe. And it is only in this year of 1972 that the French are really ready to welcome the British in and the Germans are ready to take the necessary step to become real Europeans. They had to give up their dream of a restored Bismarckian Reich before the others could accept them as being truly committed to Europe. By ratifying their treaties with Russia and Poland they are doing, in effect, what the French did in giving up Algeria, and the British in liquidating an impire.

The memories of old empires were barriers to a new Europe. All those backward glances had to go before the new could emerge.

But now they have gone. Who in Western Europe anymore dreams of reviving any of the old empires? They are in the attic. And so now one can talk most seriously about the new Europe.

IT IS HERE. It is real. It is palpable. The preoccupation in Western Europe is now with the details of putting it together. I myself came over here to attend a gathering of NATO groups to discuss the future of the trans-Atlantic relationship.

We never got to that subject. Through three days of brisk exchanges of ideas no one ever seriously examined what would be the new relationship between the new Europe and the United States — because all were too interested in the emerging new shape of Europe. The only feature of the trans-Atlantic relationship which continues to be much discussed is the question of American troops in Europe.

The new Europe still shelters under the American nuclear umbrella and still wants American troops in Europe as an insurance policy against any return of imperial atavism on Russia's part. But other than the American troops and the American nuclear umbrella, the old relationship belongs to the past.

Obviously a lot of serious thought should be given to the new trans-Atlantic relationship. It is going to be very different from the old. It will sometimes be troubled. But the truly important fact of today's Europe is that it is coming into being so fast that most people have hardly yet come to realize what is happening.

Historians will, I think, mark 1972 as the year when the Western Europeans finally got down to the business of joining each other in a new beginning.

League Of Women Voters Explains Ballot Propositions

(The League of Women Voters is a non-partisan organization founded on the principle that responsible representative government is the product of an active, informed electorate. The material on this page was prepared by the league for its primary "election extra," to acquaint voters with the propositions that will be on the June 6 ballot.)

IN THIS ELECTION THERE ARE 11 BALLOT MEASURES

Six ballot measures are constitutional amendments proposed by the Legislature.

Two bond acts (Propositions 1 and 2) are proposed by the Legislature. One measure (Proposition 8) is an amendment to a statute which was an act originally adopted by the people in an initiative ballot measure.

One measure (Proposition A) is a legislative statute and is on the ballot only in those counties that are affected.

One measure (Proposition 9) is an initiative statute proposed by citizens.

A SIMPLE MAJORITY VOTE IS NEEDED TO ADOPT ANY MEASURE . . . INCLUDING BOND MEASURES.

PROPOSITION 1 VETERANS BOND ACT OF 1971

THE PROPOSAL

Under this act, the state would issue $250 million in general obligation bonds to assist qualified California veterans in financing the purchase or improvement of homes or farms.

THE QUESTION

Should the State of California continue to help its veterans with low-interest loans for the purchase or improvement of homes or farms?

ARGUMENTS FOR

1. This program to help veterans is completely self-supporting. Taxpayers have never been asked to pay interest or principal on these bonds.

2. It is essential to provide the same benefits to the Vietnam veterans as has been provided for veterans of earlier conflicts.

3. A program enabling veterans to buy homes and farms is a more permanent assistance than cash bonuses such as other states give.

4. Interest rates on these bonds average 3.72 per cent. The interest which the veteran pays on his loan would be adjusted higher if the interest which the state had to pay on the bonds plus the operating costs of the program increased and were not covered by the loan interest.

5. All veterans are entitled to a federally guaranteed Veterans Administration loan. Most states offer an additional bonus —either cash or a loan similar to California's.

6. This program helps the general prosperity of the state through expanded home building and home ownership.

ARGUMENTS AGAINST

1. Although the general taxpayer has not been required to contribute directly to any costs connected with these bonds, the credit of the state is always pledged for their support and would have to be called upon if the veterans did not repay their loans.

PROPOSITION 2 STATE SCHOOL BUILDING AID BOND LAW OF 1972

THE PROPOSAL

Proposition 2 authorizes $350 million in state school bonds. This money continues existing programs and would be used as follows: $250 million would go to repair or replace unsafe school buildings, with priority to those damaged by earthquakes or subject to such damage. $100 million would provide funds for loans to rapidly growing, low-wealth school districts that are unable to provide for their own needed classrooms and facilities.

Districts applying for loans must have the approval of the voters of the district and meet specified standards of need.

THE QUESTION

Is the need for school reconstruction and repair and the need for new or expanded classroom facilities great enough to justify the issuance of $350 million in general obligation bonds?

ARGUMENTS FOR

1. Unsafe school buildings must be restored to protect the lives of our children.

2. Many school districts with unsafe buildings have neither the funds nor the means to get funds to replace or repair these buildngs by the required deadline of July 1, 1975.

3. The legislative analyst estimates that 90 per cent of the money borrowed for repair of earthquake damage and 46 per cent of the money borrowed for classroom facilities will be repaid.

4. Building costs continue to increase. Delay in replacing unsafe school buildings will lead to higher costs.

5. The state can sell its school bonds more easily and at a lower rate of interest than most school districts, thus reducing the load on the local taxpayer.

ARGUMENTS AGAINST

1. The emotional appeal of rebuilding earthquake-damaged schools should not be extended to the issuance of more bonds for other school purposes. Our high bonded indebtedness should not be increased.

The entire state shares in the costs of issuing the bonds, and in interest charges. Also the high interest charges on the bonds makes this an expensive way to handle the school construction problem.

3. Many school districts may be unable to repay the loans as they are now using so much of their taxing capacity to pay for local bonds.

4. The Legislature is already empowered to finance justified projects. It can continue to appropriate emergency funds for school repair without long-term financing at high rates of interest.

5. There are sufficient safe schools so that poorly-constructed or damaged schools couldbe closed. Also existing schools should be used to the fullest extent, including year-round operation.

PROPOSITION 3 RIGHT TO ASSISTANCE OF COUNSEL

THE PROPOSAL

This measure would amend the Constitution to remove the right of a defendant to act in his own behalf. It authorizes the Legislature to require the assistance of counsel in felony cases.

THE QUESTION

Shall the right of the accused to defend himself in court without counsel be removed from the Constitution?

ARGUMENTS FOR

1. The assistance of counsel provides the accused with a more fair trial.

2. A defendant acting for himself delays and disrupts trials either because of ignorance or intentionally. These delays are costly and add to court congestion.

3. An improper waiver of counsel adds to unnecessary, costly and time-consuming appeals.

4. On occasion, persons representing themselves have abused and insulted judges, witnesses and juries.

ARGUMENTS AGAINST

1. The right to represent oneself is a fundamental right which should not be sacrificed.

2. The amendment would force the services of lawyers on unwilling clients and unnecessarily increase the business of attorneys.

3. An increased burden would be placed on the public defender system, raising expenses to the taxpayer.

PROPOSITION 4 OPEN PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARY

THE PROPOSAL

This amendment would require the Legislature to provide for an open presidential primary election requiring the secretary of state to place all publicly recognized candidates for President on the primary ballot. It states that other candidates could qualify the petition (as already provided by law) and provides that a presumed candidate could have his name removed from the ballot by filing an affidavit with the secretary of state that he is not a candidate.

THE QUESTION

Should the Legislature provide for an open presidential primary for which the secretary of state would place all publicly recognized candidates for President on the primary ballot?

ARGUMENTS FOR

1. The present system often leaves the voter without a direct voice in choosing a presidential candidate since the "favorite son" device has often been used by political parties to prevent a contested primary.

2. The names of all recognized candidates would be placed on the ballot, and the result of the election would carry great weight at the convention.

ARGUMENTS AGAINST

1. This amendment would force a candidate to enter the California primary — compelling him to commit money and time better used elsewhere and making him risk his entire candidacy if he is defeated.

2. Under present law, there is nothing that prevents a candidate from entering the primary, but he should be free to decide which primaries he will enter.

PROPOSITION 5 APPOINTMENT OF REGENTS, UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA

THE PROPOSAL

This measure would amend the Constitution to require a majority of the Senate to ratify the governor's appointments to the board of regents of the University of California.

THE QUESTION

Should the governor's appointments to the board of regents of the University of California be subject to approval by a majority of the state Senate?

ARGUMENTS FOR

1. A review by more than one branch of government of such important and such long-term appointments is advisable.

2. The state Constitution at present provides for Senate confirmation of many boards and commissions of similar or even less importance.

3. This amendment would in no way prevent the governor from choosing an appointee; it would only allow the state Senate to ratify or reject his choice.

ARGUMENTS AGAINST

1. This proposition could inject more politics into appointment of the regents than now exists.

2. Vacancies of the board of regents could remain unfilled for a long time if approval of the governor's nominee became bogged down in partisan politics in the Senate.

3. Under the present system, men and women of high caliber have been selected to serve the university.

PROPOSITION 6 NATURALIZED CITIZENS — VOTER REGISTRATION

THE PROPOSAL

This proposition would amend the Constitution to eliminate the provision which makes a naturalized citizen ineligible to vote in an election unless he has been a citizen at least 90 days before the election.

THE QUESTION

Should the Constitution be amended to eliminate the provision which makes a naturalized citizen ineligible to vote unless he has been a citizen at least 90 days before the election?

ARGUMENTS FOR

1. This waiting period is unnecessary. The naturalized citizen has met residence requirements and has shown that he has knowledge of our history and government. He is well prepared to take part in elections.

2. The naturalized citizen will still be bound, as all other citizens, to register to vote a certain number of days before an election in order to vote in that election.

ARGUMENTS AGAINST

1. There is no need for this change. Such a restriction has prevented fraud and has worked well.

2. This is a very minor change and does not justify the expense and time of submitting the matter to the voter.

PROPOSITION 7 ASSESSMENT OF SINGLE-FAMILY PROPERTY

THE PROPOSAL

This measure would amend the Constitution to enable the Legislature to prohibit the evaluation of a single-family, owner-occupied property for purposes of property taxation at any value greater than that which would reflect the use of the property as a site for a single-family dwelling. This would mean that the assessor could no longer use the "potential use" valuation for a single-family property zoned for that use, and occupied by the owner.

THE QUESTION

Should the Legislature be authorized to prohibit the assessor from valuing owner-occupied single-family property zoned for that use at any value greater than that use?

ARGUMENTS FOR

1. This measure will prevent unfair assessments which could force people out of their homes because the taxes are too high.

2. Even if the number of homes which are over-assessed now is a small number, all people are protected against over-assessments in the future.

3. This amendment is not designed to be a substitute for a tax relief measure or a property tax reform program. It is desinged to cure an inequity and protect homeowners from the assessor.

4. A shift in taxes would occur only if the state did not provide for replacement revenues in the implementing legislation. This measure does not prohibit such replacement revenues.

ARGUMENTS AGAINST

1. This proposal will shift the taxes not paid by the few property owners it will benefit, to all other property owners.

2. More than 80 per cent of the owners of single-family properties would not benefit from this measure since their single-family properties are now classified for assessment purposes at that use.

3. This measure represents a departure from the California constitutional standard that all property shall be assessed uniformly according to the value which the property would bring in the open market if sold.

PROPOSITION 8 CHIROPRACTORS

THE PROPOSAL

Proposition 8 would require that appointees to the state Board of Chiropractic Examiners be U.S. citizens, licensed to practice chiropractic in California for at least five years prior to the appointment, and not to have been recently employed at a chiropractic college. The executive structure and certain details of administration of the state board are outlined in the measure. It provides that doctors of chiropractic from other states will be licensed in California only if they meet California's standards.

THE QUESTION

Should the Chiropractic Act be amended to add requirements relating to licensing of doctors of chiropractic, and to appointment to and structure of the state Board of Chiropractic Examiners?

ARGUMENTS FOR

1. Strict regulation over appointments to the state Board of Chiropractic Examiners will prevent conflicts of interest and give greater protection to the public.

2. The executive structure of this state board will conform to the structure of all other existing state boards of the healing arts.

3. It is to the public interest to grant licenses to doctors of chiropractic from other states only if their training comes up to California's standards.

ARGUMENTS AGAINST

There is no formal opposition. No negative arguments were filed with the secretary of state.

PROPOSITION 9 ENVIRONMENT INITIATIVE

THE PROPOSAL

This measure proposes to amend state laws in the various environmental fields:

AIR QUALITY: It would put into law certain requirements relating to the composition of motor fuel. These include the phasing out of the lead content of gasoline over four years, and a sharp cut in the sulfur content of diesel fuel.

Several sections of the proposal deal with violations of air pollution standards set for nonvehicular sources: Businesses would be limited to four variances within a five-year period (unless standby or other protective equipment is installed) and each variance could last no longer than three months. Whenever air quality standards are exceeded, or a first stage smog alert is declared, the district air pollution control officer must order the shutdown of facilities operating within the district under a variance. Violators of these shutdown provisions will be subject to a fine based on their gross annual income (.4 of one per cent of that income paid each day the violation continues). When the air pollution control officer is satisfied with the program developed to prevent recurrences, 75 per cent of the fine is rebated to the violator.

AGRICULTURE: No one could manufacture, sell, possess, buy or use any of the several specified pesticides, including DDT, unless a permit is issued by the director of the Department of Agriculture. The director could issue such permits only upon authorization by a four-fifths vote of both houses of the Legislature.

NUCLEAR ENERGY: This measure would ban, for five years, the construction of nuclear power plants in California.

OIL AND GAS: The state Lands Commission would be prohibited from granting new leases or revewing leases for extraction of oil and gas along the coast. The commission could also shut down "ultrahazardous" operations.

CONFLICT OF INTEREST: This measure also includes conflict of interest provisions covering air and water quality boards and Agriculture Department officers and staff. For example: Persons serving on the state Water Resources Control Board and regional boards must not have any financial interst in any discharger of wastes into California waters.

THE QUESTION

Should state laws be amended to put into effect (a) new pollution controls relating to air quality and pesticides; (b) a five-year ban on nuclear power plant construction; (c) restrictions on oil and gas extractions along the coast, and (d) broadened conflict of interest requirements for air, agriculture and water agencies?

ARGUMENTS FOR

1. Legislators and appointed officials have not done enough to protect the environment, so voters must take direct action at the ballot box.

2. This is a flexible law which can be changed by the people and strengthened the Legislature, but not weakened by it.

3. It will amend and reinforce existing state laws, and put teeth into them by asking for performance, conformance, and compliance; this is a responsible approach.

4. A five-year moratorium on the building of nuclear plants will enable us to find ways to lessen the hazards of nuclear accidents and re-evaluate our power needs; alternate power sources will only be developed when the public brings pressure on industry.

5. Under present law, representatives of industry serve on control boards. This is a fundamental conflict of interest; such people should be excluded from membership in these agencies.

6. A more wholesome environment can save large sums of money yearly in environmentally caused medical problems, consumer costs; and material damage.

ARGUMENTS AGAINST

1. Complex, arbitrary requirements, such as those relating to fuel composition, will be frozen into law which cannot be changed to meet technological advances without time-consuming court challenges or a vote of the people.

2. Conflict of interest provisions are excessively broad and would bar many able, qualified people from service on boards. Present laws provide a balance of public members and experts from various fields.

3. The ban on nuclear plants, the source of relatively clean energy, would force greater reliance on plants powered by fossil fuels which pollute the air.

4. This proposal fails to deal effectively with the most critical air pollution problem — the use of the automobile.

5. Stringent requirements for eliminating lead in gasoline and cutting down on other contaminants, all of which involve changes in refining, will result in substantial increases in consumer costs.

6. The diesel fuel provision will curtail the transportation and related industries, resulting in loss of jobs. It will take time and money to gear refineries to produce fuel with lowered sulfur content.

PROPOSITION 10 PARTIAL CONSTITUTIONAL REVISION

THE PROPOSAL

Proposition 10 would revise the Consitution by amending, repealing and transferring several miscellaneous provisions in five articles of the Constitution. It amends sections relating to penal institutions and water rates. It transfers a section containing fiscal matters of corporations and a section relating to boards of education. Repealed provisions relative to corporations cover matters which appear in statutes or are inherent powers of the Legislature. Sections listed in this proposal as added sections are merely repealed in one article and added to another. This is not new material. For example: The section relating to financial matters of corporations is transferred from Article XII to Article XIII which deals with fiscal matters. There is no change in the section. The section on boards of education is transferred unchanged from Article XXII to Article IX.

Provisions in Article XII regarding public utilities remain in the Constitution unchanged.

THE QUESTION

Should the Constitution be revised for consistency and clarity? Should obsolete provisions be deleted? Should provisions which are duplicated elsewhere be removed?

ARGUMENTS FOR

1. Proposition 10 is basically a housekeeping measure to eliminate obsolete and unnecessary words from the Constitution. No new material is added and there is no change in law or policy.

2. This measure incorporates the recommendations made by the California Constitution Revision Commission to the Legislature and continues the job of revision which the voters mandated several years ago.

3. Material deleted by Proposition 10 includes most of the corporation material which is either unnecessary due to inherent legislative power or is duplicated elsewhere. Provisions relating to the Public Utilities Commission are untouched.

4. Proposition 10 is a completely nonpartisan measure. It passed the Legislature with no dissenting votes.

ARGUMENTS AGAINST

There is no formal opposition. No negative arguments were filed with the secretary of state.

Bagley Due Credit For Trial Cost Refund

In a recent letter to your Reader's Column a writer misrepresented the truth as to who was responsible for the $750,000 reimbursement which Marin County will receive for pre-trial costs related to the Civic Center shootings involving Angela Davis.

The truth of the matter is simply this: Assemblyman Bill Bagley authored the legislation and, with considerable difficulty, persuaded members of the Legislature (and, incidentally, the governor's office) to support the refund for the benefit of the Marin County taxpayers.

Bus Service Will Benefit Park, Valley

A start will be made this summer on one of the main concerns voiced by conservatiocists at the Point Reyes National Seashore hearings — that transit both to and within the park be established in order to lessen the impact of automobiles.

Supervisor Peter Arrigoni placed a request for this service before directors of Marin Transit District, who unanimously approved starting a week-end service this summer. Marin Transit Systems buses (on subsidy from the transit district) will carry visitors from park headquarters to beaches and trailheads in the central portion of the park at half-hourly intervals.

Golden Gate Transit was asked to schedule increased bus service bringing visitors to park headquarters from eastern Marin and San Francisco. This plan is now undergoing scrutiny by the Golden Gate Bridge District and needs the support of interested citizens.

Supervisor Arrigoni merits thanks for his efforts — from the conservationists, who know that use of transit will help preserve the park for all of us, and from residents of the Ross Valley, who now suffer endless streams of cars going through our area to the Seashore.

Assessment Hike Nullifies Tax Break

After the great effort and final accomplishment of William Bagley, our assemblyman, to obtain a "tax break" for the home owning senior citizen, it seems the assessor is making every effort to prevent our receiving this much needed relief by increasing the assessed value of our homes!

I believe the only way to make our "tax break" of lasting value is to freeze the assessed valuation.

While some people complained that the tax break was not big enough, Bill Bagley at least "got his foot in the door" in behalf of the senior citizen, with the opportunity to increase our relief or otherwise improve his bill. I am sure most senior citizens are grateful for William Bagley's help in the past, and will continue to rely on his help. He has done more for the senior citizen than any other in the past!

My little one-bedroom, steep hillside home is assessed at $22,500, a valuation increase of $3,500!

Fair market value? Ridiculous! Newer, larger homes around me assessed less. This also leaves us behind in fire and other insurance value. No wonder we are so heavily taxed! To build more low-cost homes for the elderly!

Demands on our social security and pensions will cause increases for workers to pay, as our needs are met also.

Open Space Seizure Threat To All Property

Pat Angle deserves much commendation for her article in the "I.J. Reporter's Notebook" (May 4) concerning the acquiring of open space.

While no one can deny that open space is desirable, she seems to be the first to see that the methods proposed and being used for this purpose by some of our public officials and a handful of conservationists (not all), pose a threat to our basic rights as Americans.

Such things as reverse zoning, freezing development, delaying for years in the forming of master plans and ground rules —all these things take away a property owner's freedom of choice and the constitutional rights in the use of his land.

So far, these tactics have been employed mainly with large parcels of land; but what Miss Angle points out, and what few, to date, seem to have realized, is that if this can be done to a large parcel of land, it can also be done to a small one —to any property, in fact. It is not the size of the property that counts; it is the principle involved. A precedent is set, and that is the crucial thing.

If these tactics are allowed to go unchallenged and unchecked, then no one's property is safe. . .

Actor Disagrees With Play Review

As an actor, director and theater-goer, I must disagree with James E. Williams luke-warm review of College of Marin's production of Gorky's "The Lower Depths". This production is one of the finest in Marin County this season and deserves recognition as such. Extremely sensitive and subtle performances were turned in by Alan Kernan, Shelly Lipkin, and especially J. W. Harper. The acting of these three would be enough reason to see the show. However the rest of the cast is equally fine, particularly Reynold Acevedo, David Silverman, Kendell Jackson, and Elaine Womack. Perhaps the "forceful drive" which Mr. Williams felt was missing is actually the declamation and bombast which often infects Marin County theater. This is exciting and honest theater and no one should be discouraged from attending by Mr. Williams' lack of enthusiasm. Director H. J. Susser has added another to his string of theatrical gems.

Different Version Of Explosion Mishap

Don't you think you ought to print the truth when writing an article? Since that's what newspapers are obligated to do!

Referring to the recent coverage of the Scout-O-Rama you captioned a picture "Bomb Scene" and in the article mentioned how Rob Jackson put "magnesium" on "hot coals" to produce "green smoke."

The truth of the matter is, it was not a "bomb" that exploded. And it most certainly was not magnesium that was poured onto the lit coals, but a regular household disinfectant.

No one screamed "hysterically." The boys that were injured did not even cry. There were all too shocked.

As a matter of fact no one even realized that an explosion had taken place. Most thought that it was just an attention gimmick (a cannon being fired or other such noise makers).

And when they realized that it was an explosion, the crowds were well in hand. As scouts are well trained to handle any disaster come what may.

You may be wondering why I know the truth and wish to dissolve the rumors you printed?

Well, I was there. I was involved. And I searched for facts.

Everyone always has distorted stories when something goes wrong.

The sad thing is most newspapers never search for the facts. They always take the first story handed to them. Which is usually handed to them by upset onlookers.

Scouts are with it. They are always prepared.

So next time, God forbid, search your story out. Be truthful. Don't listen to rumors and be fair to the public.

Cotati Council Did Not Oppose Arming Police

With reference to your purple banner headline and three-column headline over the story at the bottom of columns 1-3 in your issue of May 5, both of which assert that Cotati's new young city council "opposes armed police": I was at that meeting. No time during it did the members of the council individually or collectively express opposition, in fact or principle, to police carrying arms.

Red roses — a huge bunch — to Dot with whom I've filed our news releases and who has kept me on my toes when I've omitted a "who, what, when, where, why or how!"

Barbara, your women's editor, has been munificent in giving our stories lead placements and in picking up for local publication news releases issued by our state headquarters in Los Angeles.

Both gals have contributed significantly to our movement (now three-fourths of a century old) by Providing The Action (press-wise) to let your readers know of our continuing concern for children and youth as we strive to promote their welfare in homes, schools, churches and communities.

Our sincere appreciation, too, to Bryce Anderson, for having shared with us his expertise in the area of educational legislation when he appeared as one of our guest speakers.

Finally, after tossing the bouquets, I must tell you I hold a small brickbat. I hesitate tossing it . . . maybe I'll just drop it: We're PTA, not P-TA! You're the I-J, not the I.J. or the IJ.

SERVING ALL OF MARIN COUNTY

34 SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA, SATURDAY, MAY 27, 1972

By PAT ANGLE

The Sausalito fashion world was in a state of excitement this week as some of the city's most distinguished citizens were honored for contributions to the city's reputation as costume center of the Bay Area.

After an exhaustive search by a jury of expert Sausalito closet-watchers, 10 persons were selected as the city's best dressed and worst dressed denizens — chosen chiefly for their ability to stand out in a town where being noticed for one's attire is no mean feat.

The distinguished panel, meeting in secret session at an unnamed location this week, deliverated long and hard, drank champagne, fought a great deal, lobbied for favorites and drank more champagne.

It was not an easy task to choose from a list of more than 40 nominees whose sartorial splendor would have made them instant winners in any other city in Marin.

A poignant note was added to the proceedings by the reading of a letter from one of the worst dressed nominees, H. Thomas Rogers, which brought tears to the eyes of several jurors.

"As it happens, I have several rather stunning outfits in my wardrobe," Rogers wrote in a last-ditch effort to swing the vote. "Today, for example, I am wearing a pair of well-pressed brown slacks, a sports short with a restrained brown-on-white floral print, brown, socks, worn but presentable loafers and a Spanish corduroy jacket with a leather collar and an absolutely gorgeous brown and gold lining."

"The effect is subdued rather than glamorous," Rogers continued, "and I would not call attention to it except that today I saw one of your best-dressed nominees in a pair of elderly blue jeans of surpassing crumminess. Charitably, I will assume your committee was unaware that this person (whose name, you may be sure, will never be revealed by me) even possessed such a garment."

When the judging was all over the jury applauded itself loudly and long for its brilliant selections and all agreed that exactly the right choices had been made.

Named winners in the best dressed competition were, in this order: W. Daniel O'Connor, Fire Chief Robert L. Halon, Nicholas Sidjakov, Police Chief James D. Wright and Albert Morse.

Chosen worst dressed in perhaps the most heated competition were: Franklin Anderson, Milton Weiner, James Tichy, H. Eric Borgwardt and Kayla Kahn.

Recognizing the unique quality of Sausalito fashion, the jury went even further afield and named winners in several other categories, which it believed demonstrated other important aspects of the city scene:

Runner-up: Albert St. Cyr.

Most appropriately dressed: Earl F. Dunphy, city councilman.

Most appropriately dressed perennial candidate: Serge Trubach.

Totally unaware: William Remak.

Best undressed: Lyle Tuttle.

Casual but clean: Robert D. Bauerle.

Expensive bad taste: Herb Dubin.

Generally crummy but sometimes glamorous: Robin Sweeny.

The lucky winners will be unveiled and feted at the Sausalito Art Center's May Festival this weekend.

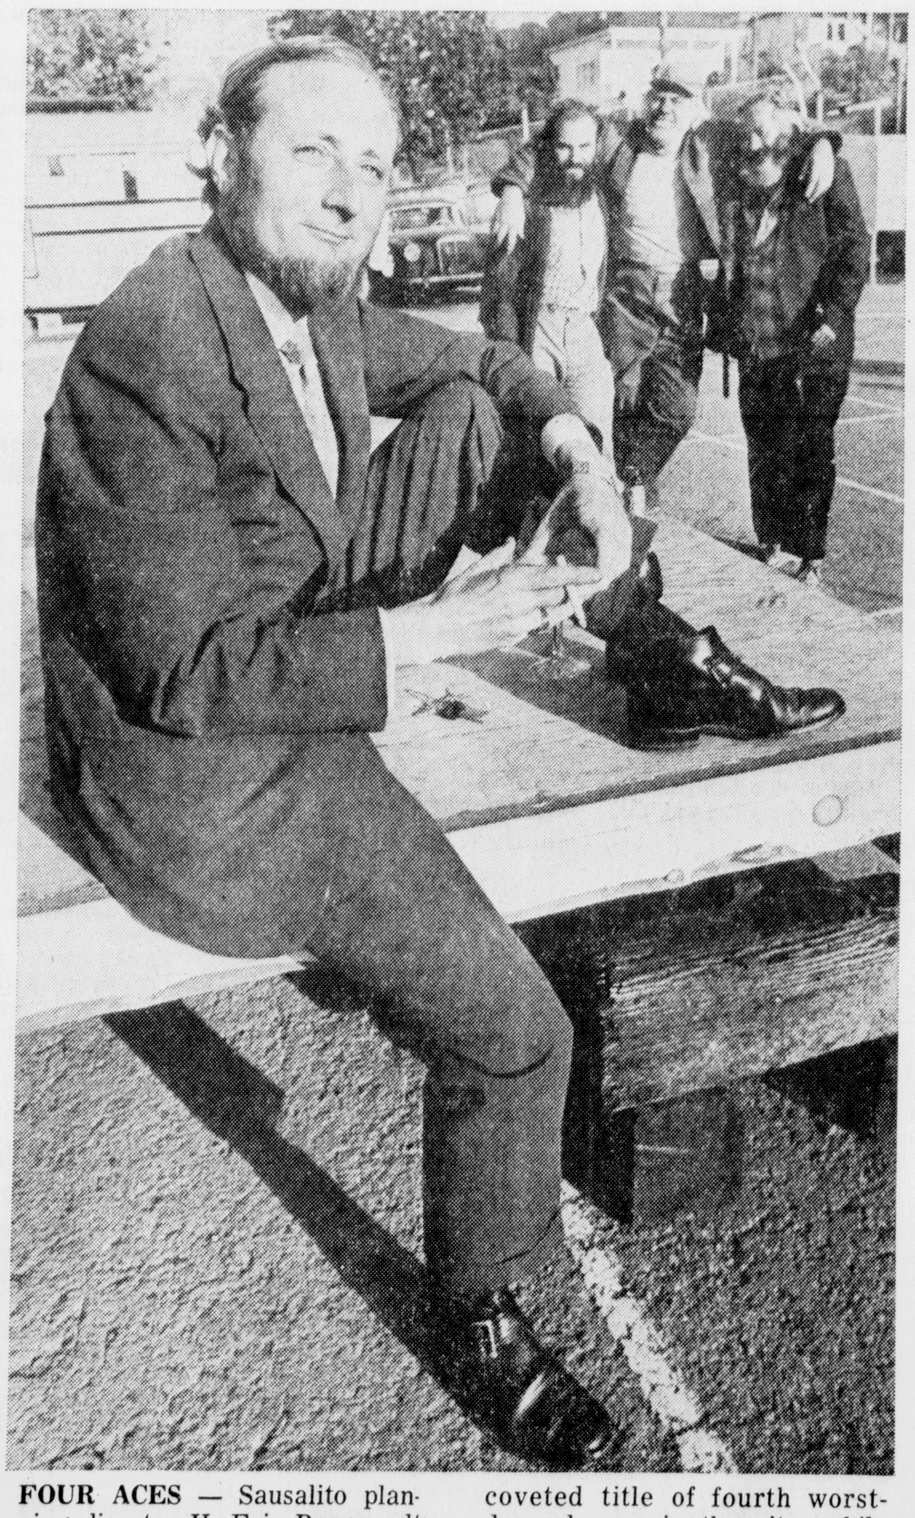

Prizes for the worst-dressed winners will include gift certificates from Susalito's most elegant clothing stores. Those receiving awards in this category seemed shocked and delighted at the prospect. "I've worked very hard for this," said Anderson in a short, but touching acceptance speech as photographs were being taken.

Those judged best dressed will receive such awards as dayglo phosphorescent shoe laces, tie-dyed T-shirts, patched Levis and gift boses of cat and dog hair and lint.

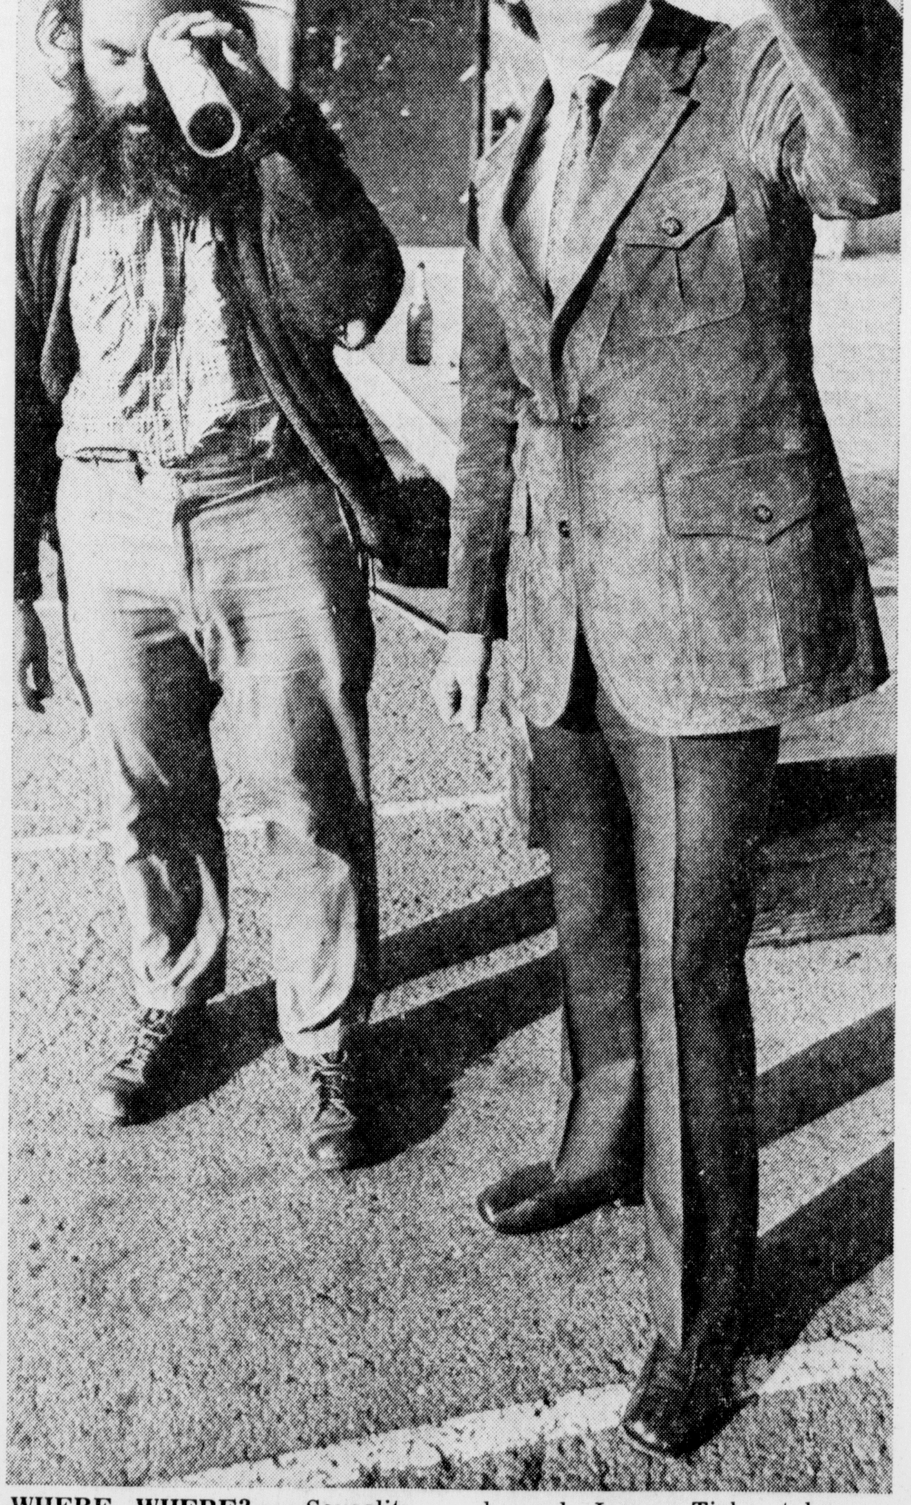

ISN'T IT GRAND? — Kayla Kahn, resplendent in Levis and a coat fashioned from the skins of a now extinct animal, prepares to celebrate her new status as worst-dressed woman in the city.

FOUR ACES — Sausalito planning director H. Eric Borgwardt proudly displays the fashion finesse which captured him the coveted title of fourth worst-dressed man in the city, while three of his companions in the honor cheer him on.

The Golden Gate Bridge In Its Youth

WITH HIS KEEN memory functioning on all cylinders, 70-year-old Hubert Voight of Novato recalls tales from his days as a Hollywood studio publicity director in the late 1920s and 1930s. He left that career to become a fund-raiser and public relations director for service organizations.

(Independent-Journal photo)

Hubert Voight Knew Stars As Studio Publicity Man

By FRANK FARRARA

If Hubert L. Voight hadn't been born, Damon Runyon would have created him.

A brash, dapper, hustling movie publicity chief in Hollywood's so-called golden years, late 1920s and 1930s, Voight carries with him an aura of days past.

He welcomed the then-unknown Greta Garbo to the United States, had a Broadway play written about him, and got into a fist fight with Darryl Zanuck.

His once dark and slicked-down hair is now white and wavy, his waist a little rounder, but his heart still beats to the rhythm of press agentry.

WHERE HE once scurried along Broadway hoping for a plug in Winchell's column or fed stories to Louella Parsons in Hollywood, Voight now scoots about Marin promoting Boys Clubs.

A non-stop talker with a booming voice, Voight flourished in the days when a press agent would consider betraying his mother or risking his sweetheart's life to get national publicity for a new star or a new movie.

Voight, now an energetic, enthusiastic, 70-year-old, believes "raising funds for Boys Clubs is infinitely more satisfying."

SEATED IN the Novato Boys Club office the other day, he reminisced with autographed photos of Joan Crawford, Garbo and the Our Gang comedy kids on the wall.

A native of La Crosse, Wis., Voight worked his way through high school and eventually to Columbia University in New York City where his first publicity stunt was a near-disaster.

"I had the job of publicity director for the varisty show written by Corey Ford, which had Alexander Hamilton and Aaron Burr as college rivals," Voight said.

THEN HE chuckled. "I restaged the duel at Weehawken Heights with real swords. Then I found out the duel had been fought with pistols."

Faced with ridicule, he hurriedly inveigled the mayor of Weehawken to arrive at the scene with "two pistols of the period, stop the fight and give them to the duelists" so it would be done right.

The newsreel cameras whirred and scenes of the mayor correcting the duel were given wide coverage. Voight, with the instinct of a born press agent, had switched disaster to triumph.

AFTER GRADUATION in 1925, "I wanted to get into motion pictures as a publicist," Voight said. "I dropped in at every publicity department in New York City."

He was hired by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and was assigned to "meeting boats and trains." On a hot July afternoon in 1925, he was sent to meet a noted European film director, Mauritz Stiller, who was accompanied by a 19-year-old Swedish actress named Greta Garbo.

"She was unknown and unwanted," Voight said. "She was excess baggage."

THUS, GARBO, destined to be one of the most celebrated film stars in history, was welcomed only by Voight, a studio interpreter and a free-lance photographer Voight had hired to take a few publicity shots.

"Nobody gave her a tumble in New York," and Major Edward Bowes, a renowned judge of amateur talent, was unimpressed, Voight said. "When Major Bowes saw her, he said 'what an awkward peasant girl she is'," Voight said. "He thought Louis B. Mayer had made a great mistake."

As Voight leafed through a book about Garbo to find a picture of her first arrival, he spoke glowingly about her appeal on the screen.

"SHE WAS beautiful beyond belief," he said. "She was a photographic marvel. She had a special chemistry or something."

After a few moments, this reporter was ready to leave and head for the nearest Garbo movie; only to realize upon reflection that she had made her last film about 30 years ago.

There was always a question of whether there "really was a love affair" between Garbo and John Gilbert, her leading man in her early hit movies, Voight said. "I think the love was on his side, unrequited love."

GILBERT, WHO had a high-pitched voice, faded with the advent of "talkies," and Voight believed that present-day sound equipment would have prevented that decline which ended tragically with Gilbert dead of alcoholism.

After a year on the job, Voight was promoted to national publicity manager for MGM and participated in picking a name for a young dancer, Lucille Le Seuer.

"We had a contest and it produced a hell of a lot of names and I picked 10 from big boxes of entries," he said.

LON CHANEY SR., known as Hollywood's "man of a thousand faces," is shown in his title role in the 1923 silent motion picture classic, "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." Hubert L. Voight of Novato can remember back to his early press agency days when he used to accompany the great actor to sessions of night court in New York City where Chaney would study the people before the bar of justice in search of ideas for characters and make-up. Later Chaney's son, Lon Chaney Jr., was also to enjoy a Hollywood career.

FROM THE 10, the studio picked "Jane Arden," but a real Jane Arden threatened a suit, "so we changed the name to Joan Crawford," Voight said.

During his days in New York City, Voight spent many evenings at night court with Lon Chaney Sr. known as the man of a thousand faces.

"He went to night court to study the faces of the people there," Voight explained. "That's the way he got ideas for faces."

IT WAS IN those years that Voight pulled off what the New Yorker magazine described as "as wily a piece of press agentry" as it had seen "in some time."

A rival firm was showing a film, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," and "I thought should gentlemen really prefer blondes? Let's test it," Voight said.

He hired a Columbia University psychology instructor to test the emotional reactions of blondes and brunettes "and find out which had the most violent reaction to a love situation."

NATURALLY, the experiment was conducted at a New York Theater with girls from the Ziegfeld Follies as subjects and torrid love scenes from an MGM film "Love" starring Greta Garbo and John Gilbert as the emotional stimulant.

Press, magazines and radio had a field day, Voight got nationwide publicity for MGM and, almost as though it were planned, a brunette, Patsy O'Day, won the "love meter" test.

There were vicious rumors later that Miss O'Day was a blonde who had dyed her hair, Voight said.

AS THE SILENT movies were fading out and talkies coming in, Voight moved to Burbank to become publicity director for Warner Brothers-First National Studios, which turned out such gangster film classics as "Little Caesar" and "Public Enemy."

"I can't watch those pictures on the late show," Voight said. "They make me feel so old and they're so dated."

It was then that Voight hired Norman Krasna, a bright young man from the New York World as a publicist.

ONE OF THE stunts Voight dreamed up at that time was to stage the sea disappearance of a young actress, "alert the papers, and as days go by have her discovered on San Miquel Island living off goat's milk with her dress torn in the right places to make good pictures."

Mervyn LeRoy, the director, "got cold feet" and the stunt never came off, but Krasna wrote a play about it entitled "Louder Please" with Herbert White, a thinly disguised Hubert Voight, as the central character.

It led to what Voight described as his "comic-opera" fight with Darryl Zanuck, then chief of production for the studio, in Jack Warner's office.

THE YEAR was 1926, and young Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer publicist Hubert Voight, right, visited on the set with the new actress from Sweden, Greta Garbo, who was making her first American picture, "The Temptress," and her director, talented Fred Niblo. It was Voight who had been assigned by the studio to meet Miss Garbo upon her arrival in New York City from Europe the previous summer. MGM, he says, had no idea of her potential. "She was unknown and unaanted," he says. But she did not remain that way for long.

About CARPETS

By Doug Emerson

INDOOR-OUTDOOR CARPETING doesn't sound like a contradiction in terms any more, but it is still a remarkable decorating development. And it is one you can adapt to fit your home's individual needs and problems.

Indoors, the new indoor-outdoor carpets are at home in many areas . . . kitchens, bathrooms, bare floor hallways, stairways, children's rooms, entries, hobby rooms that collect a lot of litter, and many other places where economical, hard-wearing and easily cleanable carpets will make your rooms more livable.

These carpets brighten and beautify, cut down on "noise pollution," and reduce floor care. Instead of waxing and polishing and cleaning, a quick once-over with the vacuum does it.

Outdoors, these new carpets are just as versatile. Cut them to fit your porch or patio. Turn a bare deck into an outdoor "living room" or add color and beauty anywhere. They'll stand up to weather, shed rain, and protect the surfaces they cover.

The right carpet for the area or room, indoors or out, is always the best value. Come in and let us show you our huge selection in every fiber, every popular color range. We have the right carpet for your needs priced right.

Recollections Of A Hollywood Press Agent

Krasna had sold the play to a New York producer rather than the studio, had written a letter accusing the publicity department of "disloyalty."

"As I was about to leave I said 'If he had called me disloyal to my face, I would have socked him in the nose,'" Voight recalled.

Zanuck said, "I'm here now," and punches were thrown, Voight said. "It was over fast, and no one was hurt." But Voight was through at Warner Brothers.

KRASNA'S PLAY ran on Broadway for four months, with Lee Tracy, a fast-talking, breezy actor, in the leading role, but Voight didn't see it until it played the Pasadena Playhouse.

"It isn't everybody that has had a play written about him," he said. "It's also out of real life."

Fired on Saturday, Voight was hired on Sunday by Harry Cohn to become publicity director at Columbia Pictures in Hollywood, and his first picture there was "It Happened One Night."

THE FILM, starring Clark Gable and Claudette Colbert, won a flock of Academy Awards, even though during the making "they didn't figure it to be a great picture," Voight said.

"I contend that great pictures are made sometimes just by chance . . . the right combination of players, script and directors."

Originally, the male lead was planned for Robert Montgomery, who was adept at light comedy, but "he was all tied up," and they "tried to get practically every star in the business before they got Gable," Voight said.

EVEN CLAUDETTE Colbert was a "compromise," since the studio really wanted Constance Bennett for the part, he recalled.

Voight paused for a drink of water to ease his throat and when he resumed, memories of other films and other stars spilled forth.

In a rare coincidence he was working on the set of "Pride of the Yankees," the story of baseball great Lou Gehrig, played by Gary Cooper, when they were filming the scene where the Yankee scouts discovered Gehrig.

Voight, as a sportswriter for the Columbia University Spectator, decades before, had been at the field the day the scouts watched Gehrig.

"I was watching the filming of a scene, I had witnessed," he said.

THEN THE brief comments:

The Memories Of A Hollywood Publicist

"John Barrymore . . . deterioriation was setting in when he made "20th Century," probably the last good picture he made. He was fading away from alcoholism . . . very sad. He collected characters like other people collect old hats."

"Peter Lorre . . . one of the sweetest little guys, my personal client, you'd never find a nicer guy to work for."

"Mickey Rooney . . . He was about 9 or 10 then . . . the most ambitious little guy . . ."

AFTER THREE years at Columbia, Voight switched to Republic Picture Studios.

"The publicity manager never gets credit for good things, but if there's a boo-boo, you get blamed," Voight said. At Republic, producer Herb Yates, looking for someone to succeed Gene Autry, picked the lead tenor from the Sons of the Pioneers, a fellow named Len Slye, Voight recalled.

They gave him the name Roy Rogers and "at that time he had never ridden a horse," Voight said. "I called Fat Jones, who ran a stock farm, and arranged to have him go there and learn how to ride."

IN THOSE days, Voight was a bachelor and "my whole life was movies."

Pressed for juicy tidbits about Hollywood scandals, the old press agent's instinct to protect the industry came forth.

"In all those years, I never saw a Hollywood wild party," he said. "I think the serious actors didn't indulge that way."

Voight's studio career ended just before World War II and except for a short stint on the "Arch of Triumph" in the post-war years, his Hollywood days were over.

"THE BUSINESS had changed," he said. "I knew my time had come and I've hardly been back to Hollywood since.

Just before World War II, Voight drifted away from the movies to become public realtions director for Santa Barbara County where, as fate would have it, he was on hand for a big war story.

Voight handled the press when a Japanese submarine shelled the shore near Goleta. "It was the first time the U.S. had been shelled since 1912," he said.

AFTER A short stint in the Air Force, he was released to manage publicity for the War Chest in California and in 1945 he was married at the Stanford University Chapel.

With his wife, Jan, who had been a job estimator at Marinship during the war, he launched a second successful career as a fund-raiser and campaign and public relations director for hospitals, churches, the Young Men's Christian Assn. and other service organizations.

When he raised $766,171 to construct a 50-bed Valley Memorial Hospital in Livermore in 1958, the Oakland Tribune called it "an incredible accomplishment."

THERE WERE many other hospital campaigns and last year Voight arrived in Novato to bolster the $100,000 fund-raising campaign to build a Boys Club.

"We're almost there," Voight said.

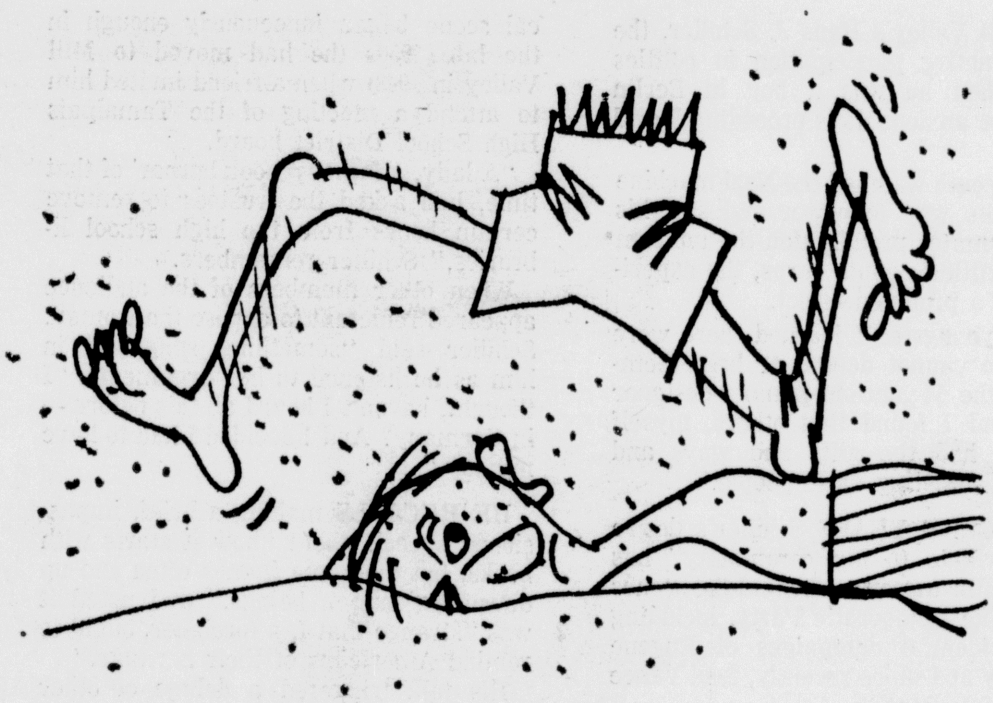

Voight moved to Novato and recently became campaign director for Central Marin Boys Clubs Inc., which plans to build several clubs in the area from Mill Valley to Marinwood.

Now settled at 2627 Center Road with his wife, and two daughters, Katie, a 19-year-old sophomore at Sonoma State College, and Becky, a 15-year-old sophomore at San Marin High School, Voight has virtually shut the door on movies.

"I haven't seen a movie in over two years," he said. "When I was with the studios, I probably saw one or two a day."

GRETA GARBO and leading man John Gilbert emote in a scene in the motion picture "Love." The much ballyhooed Garbo-Gilbert off-screen romance was pretty much a one-party affair, says Hubert Voight who knew and worked with both.

Profile Of A Marinite

"As long as there are people who, for reasons beyond their control, cannot achieve a reasonable life, we have to help them," believes Hans J. Schiller of Mill Valley.

By PAT ANGLE

For Mill Valley's Hans J. Schiller, the road to active participation in politics began when he was a boy in Berlin during the anxious days preceding World War II.

As the youth watched the Nazi machine bulldoze its way to power and saw his own classmates proudly don the uniform of Adolf Hitler's youth corps, the experience had a profound effect.

"As a youngster I learned there were those who cannot defend or help themselves," the 54-year-old planner-designer said. "And I found that others, myself included, had the gifts and ways and means of assisting these people."

IN RECENT YEARS Schiller's desire to "contribute to my community" has brought him to active, behind-the-scenes roles in the Democratic Party, including the Presidential campaigns of Eugene McCarthy and more recently, Sen. Vance Hartke of Indiana.

Currently, he is vice chairman of the California Democratic Commission on Platform and Policy, a group which last month completed a proposed platform for the 1972 campaign, making California the only state which will present a finished platform for consideration at the party's National Convention in July.

Schiller's early conversion to altruistic activism first led him to become a leader of a Zionist group devoted to helping young Jews prepare to leave Germany for Palestine as the net began to close around Central Europe's Jewish community.

IN 1937 HE himself immigrated to Palestine where he developed an interest in building as clerk of works in the Palestine Building Syndicate in Jerusalem, a pursuit interrupted by the war in which he served with the British armed forces in the Western desert.

It was in Jerusalem in 1938 that the young man first encountered famed architect Eric Mendelsohn. "What do you think of my kind of architecture?" Mendelsohn asked the youth, who replied candidly: "I don't like it; it's too plain for me."

That brief exchange began a long, often tempestuous partnership between the two men, a relationship which lasted until 1953 and brought Schiller to San Francisco with his mentor in 1947.

"We were always fighting," the gray-haired Schiller recalled. "I'd yell 'Fire me!' and he'd retort: 'No, I need somebody to fight with.' "

WHEN HE celebrated his 30th birthday in New York harbor "in sight of the Statue of Liberty," planner-designer Schiller was firmly convinced he had had enough of politics to last a lifetime. "I'd been involved in everything from working in the German underground to intelligence operations for the Israelis in Arab countries, dealing in politics in all of this."

"Besides," he quipped, "I had an aversion to American politics; I still do."

During his first years in this country, Schiller forgot politics and devoted his time to building. Among the buildings he designed are the Concord Shopping Center, the chemistry building at the University of California at Berkeley, the Maimonides Health Center in San Francisco and temples and community centers in St. Louis, Cleveland, Washington, D.C., and Baltimore, to name a few.

HIS REINTRODUCTION to the political scene began innocuously enough in the late 1950s (he had moved to Mill Valley in 1948) when a friend invited him to attend a meeting of the Tamalpais High School District board.

"A lady, a famous 'book burner' of that time, had asked the trustees to remove certain books from the high school libraries," Schiller remembers.

When other members of the audience appeared reluctant to oppose the woman, Schiller said "something snapped" in him as he listened to her arguments. "I thought, haven't I heard all this before — in Germany? And I decided I had to have my say."

HE RECALLS making a brief, impassioned speech about "how it starts with books, but the same flames often end up devouring human beings," and noted it was "strange that I, a foreigner, ought to remind Americans of their heritage."

His talk triggered a deluge of other similar objections to the books' removal and, as a result, the trustees voted to keep the volumes in the libraries.

Before he knew what was happening, Schiller was asked to accept the presidency of the Tamalpais High School PTA and from that post grew his involvement with the Democratic Party.

In 1964, the designer was elected a director of the California Democratic Council and in 1967 was named state chairman of the council's resolutions committee.

TODAY, AS vice-chairman of the California party's platform commission, Schiller's goals are electoral reform and creating "a party that is truly responsive to the vast majority of people in this country."

He believes the Democratic Party must produce a program "that is radically different from that of the Republican Party" to give voters "a definite choice" when they go to the polls. And he agrees there is some justification for Gov. George Wallace's recent contention that there is "not a dime's worth of difference" between the Republican and Democratic parties.

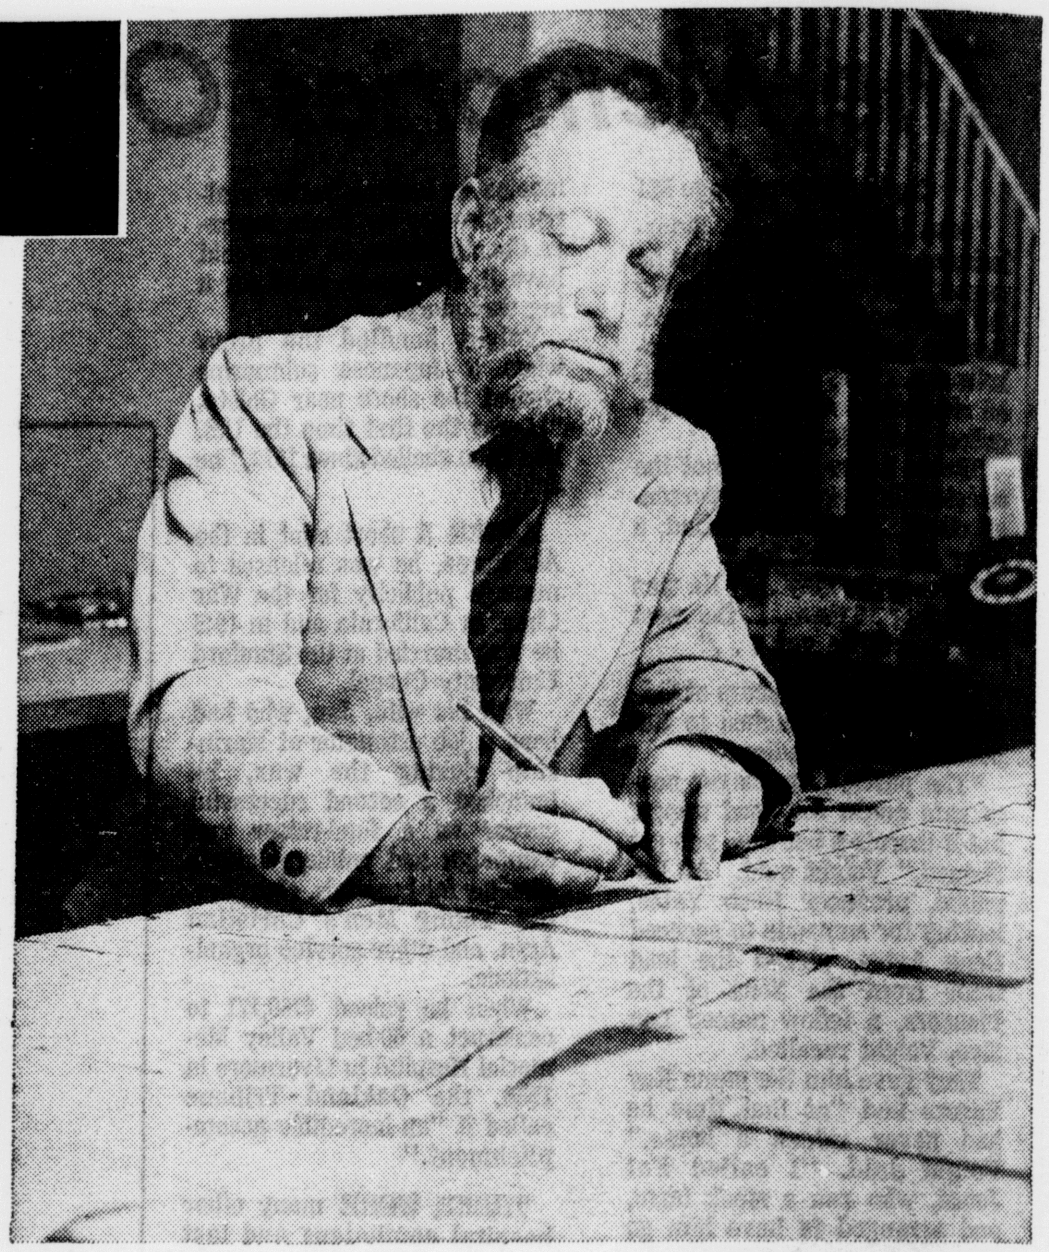

The commission vice chairman also believes that party platforms should be devised the year before a presidential election and the parties should then find a candidate who will stand on the platform, not gear the platform to the candidate.

THE CURRENT system of choosing Presidential candidates leaves much to be desired, according to Schiller, who thinks an election campaign should be "more than a beauty pageant or a contest to see who has the most charisma."

The designer deplored the fact that, under the present system, candidates for President must either have tremendous wealth of their own or "be willing to accept a tremendous amount of money from industry and pressure groups and so become politically beholden to these groups."

A system must be devised, he said, to permit candidates to run for office without depending on "the largesse of private donors."

Schiller said he favors a plan like the one recently vetoed by President Richard M. Nixon, where persons could check a box on their income tax returns to donate $1 of their tax money to the party of their choice. "If the government is truly synonymous with the people, then the people ought to pay election costs," he said, adding that the media — particularly the electronic media which run on public airwaves — ought to donate certain time to give all candidates exposure.

HANS J. SCHILLER of Mill Valley, planner and designer of buildings, has a strong secondary interest, the democratizing of American politics, that has its roots in his boyhood in Adolf Hitler's Nazi Germany. (Independent-Journal photo)

SCHILLER ALSO believes the existing primary system puts "too many demands, financially and physically," on the candidates and that primary results are often misleading or meaningless. Instead of engaging in extensive primary fights, he thinks the presidential candidates ought to appear at the political conventions and "debate, make statements and answer questions, fight it out for the nomination right there."

As a loyal party member, Schiller said he will support any candidate the Democrats nominate, except Wallace or Sam Yorty (mayor of Los Angeles), "whom I would not support under any circumstances."

But, if he could personally choose a candidate for 1972, his choice would be Eugene McCarthy, "the most brilliant political thinker alive," and the man he supported and worked for in 1968.

"McCARTHY, LIKE Adlai Stevenson before him, has an almost visionary understanding of the political process," he said. "You have to be able to resolve issues ahead of your time to be capable of being President and share these issues with the people, but it was probably McCarthy's ability to do just that that led to his defeat."

He added: "How far can a candidate go beyond the accepted political norm of the day without frightening people?"

Schiller sees the chief issues of the campaign as the Vietnam war, foreign policy in general and "an equitable redistribution of wealth and resources to eliminate hunger and deprivation."

"Personally I think a redistribution of wealth is needed; I don't, for example, think it's necessary for Howard Hughes to own billions and billions of dollars," he said.

"AS LONG AS there are people who, for reasons beyond their control, cannot achieve a reasonable life, we have to help them even if we have to redistribute the wealth to do it," he continued. "We must rehabilitate our fellow man who has failed society and whom society has failed."

Schiller would establish a "new land ethic," by which the government would own the "most important" land in the country, then lease it back to citizens.

Calling private ownership of land "undesirable in a free society where land should belong to the people," Schiller said he "doesn't like the idea that an individual can own the most valuable resource we have and exploit it for his own personal gain to the detriment of future generations."

UNDER HIS plan, the government would never relinquish property once it has acquired it and gradually acquire "land of importance," like recreational land.

"If the government was landlord for most of the land in this country, we'd have fewer planning problems, fewer ecology problems," he said.

Schiller said he would even be willing to leave the rambling Madrone Park Circle home where he and his wife Lotte have lived for the past 24 years and raised their three children. "I'd be unhappy, but I'd go along in the interest of preserving the land for future generations," he said.

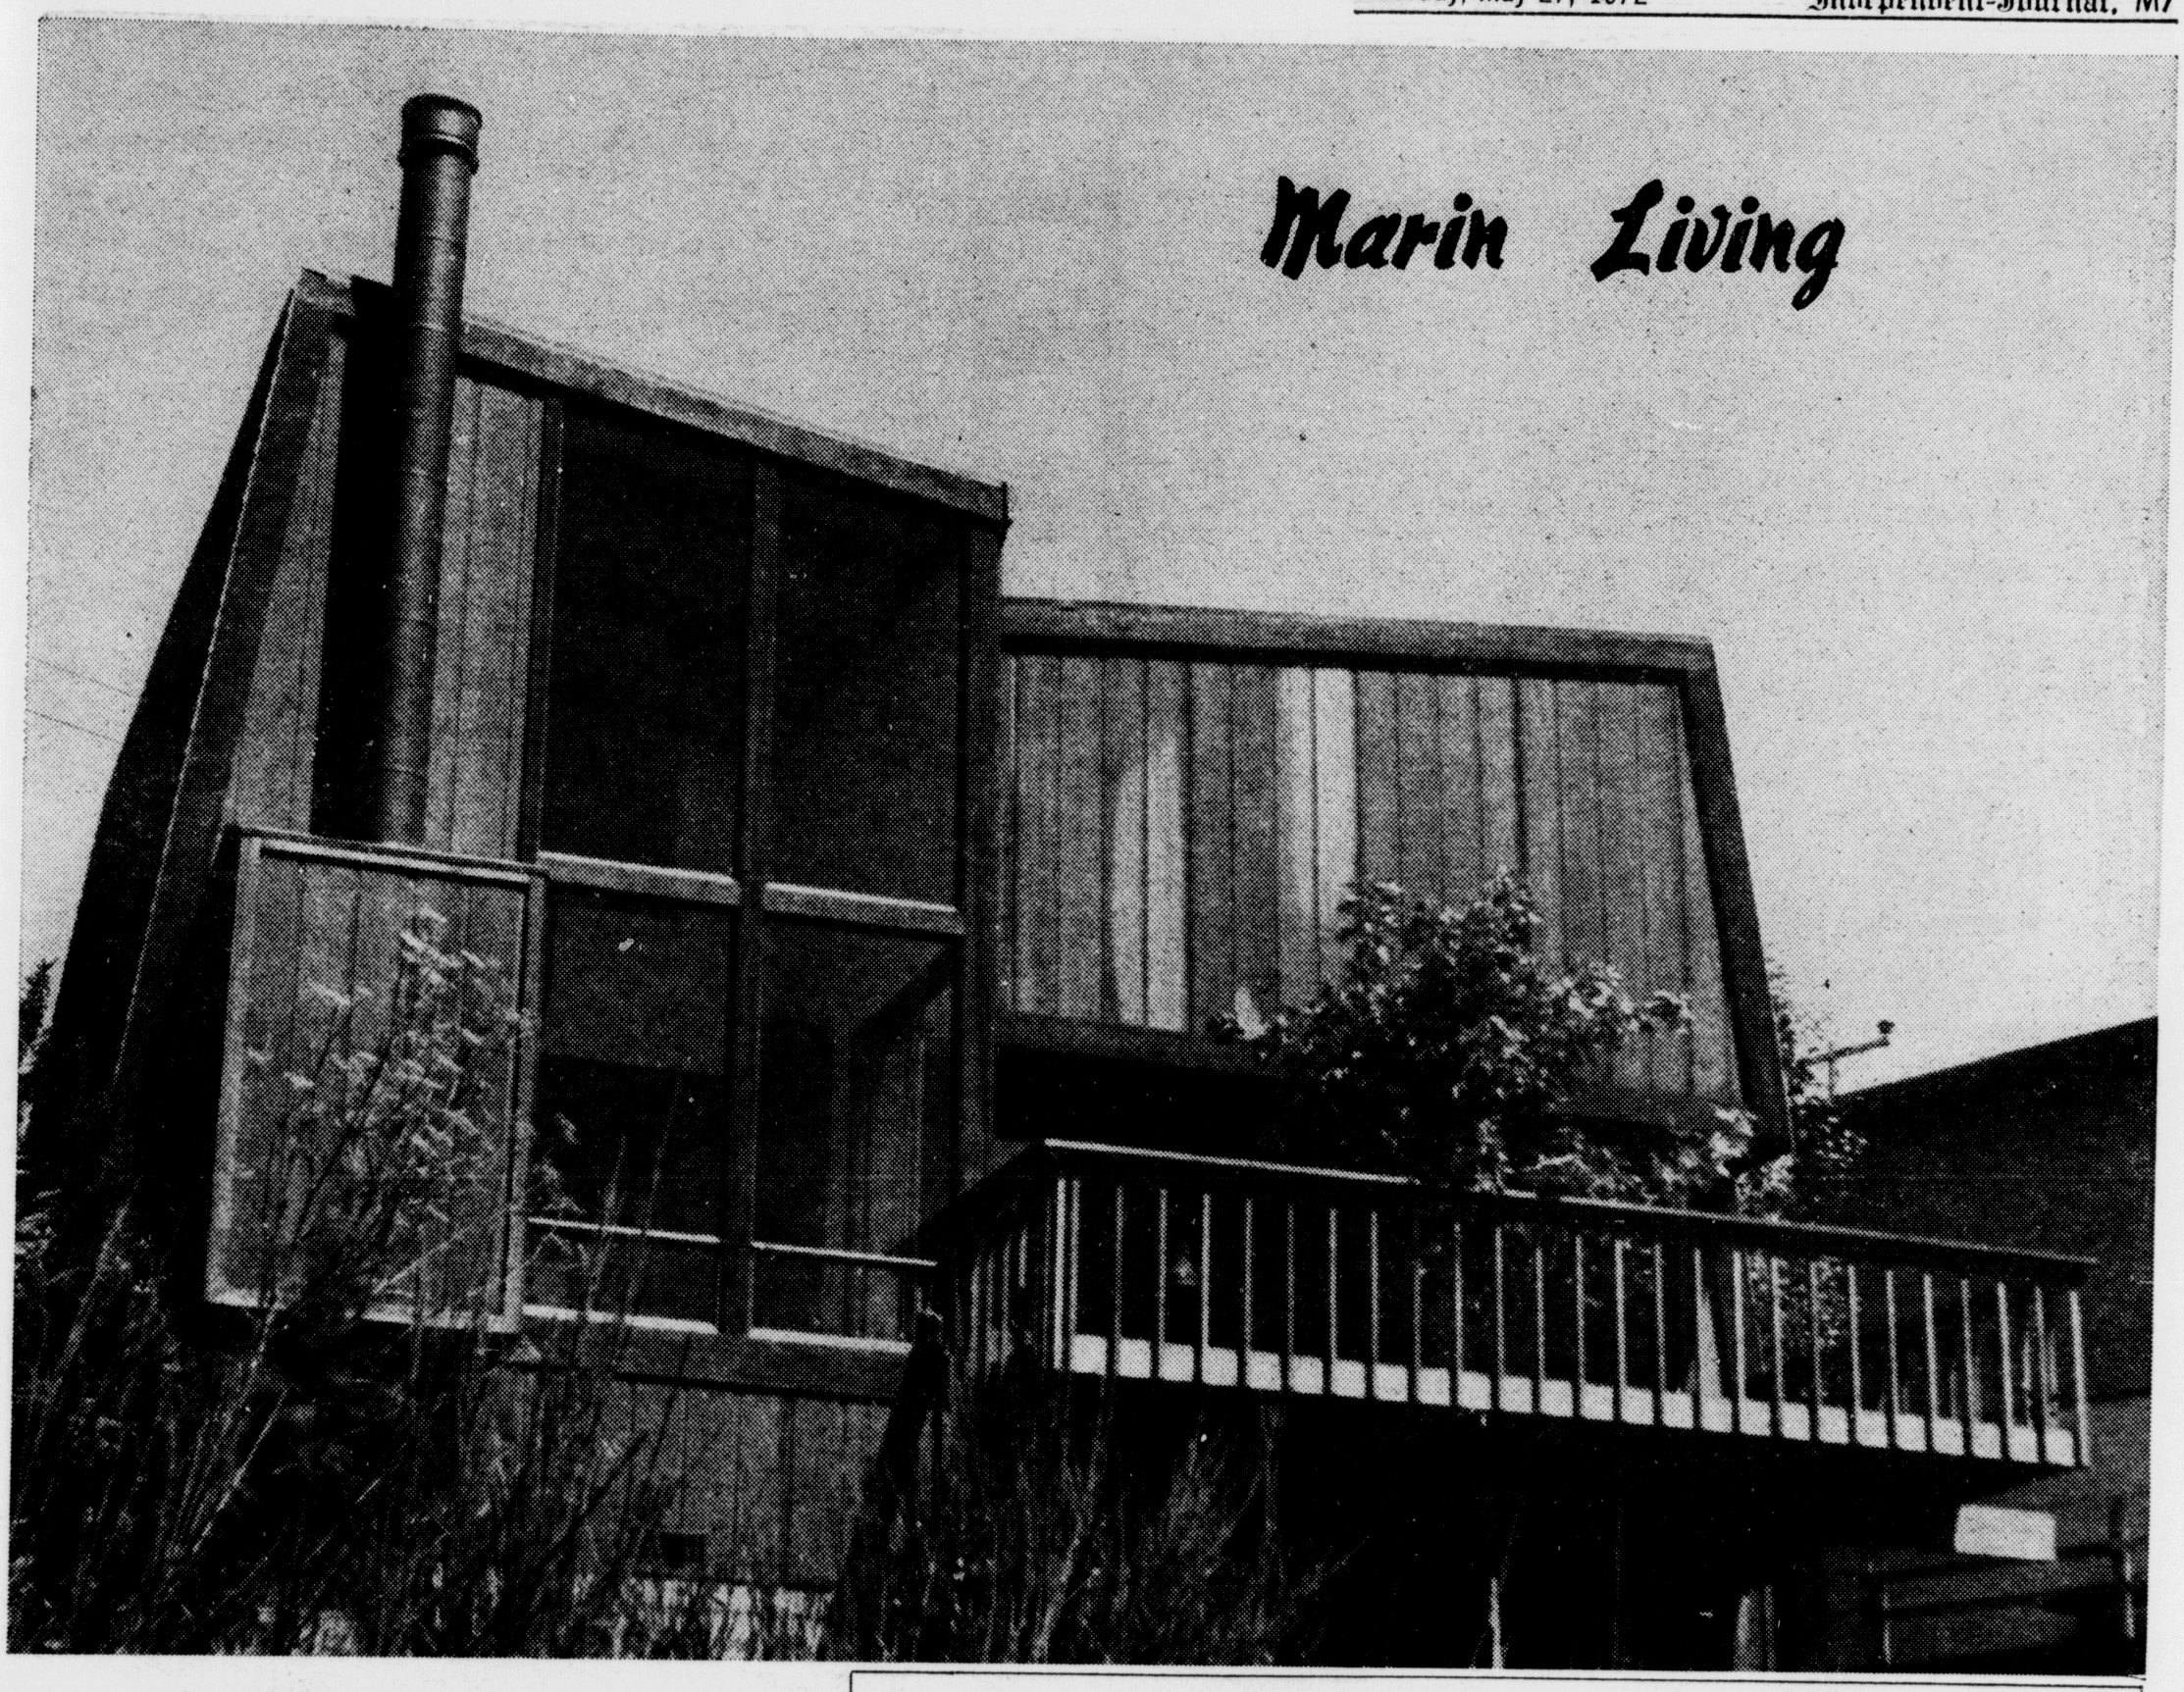

Despite his political activities, Schiller, who sees himself as "a Renaissance man, who does a little of everything" has no ambition to seek political office, although he admits that, at one time, "I came pretty close to running for Congress."

Instead, he is content to wield influence behind-the-scenes, design and plan buildings, and indulge in his many other interests which include photography, electronics and the remodeling of his home.

HE BELIEVES that a "revolution of persuasion, not of bloodshed" is under way in America today, but admits there is a long way to go. "There will never be a perfect country; we'll always have problems and crises," he said.

Hans Schiller will be content to know he has had a share in solving those problems from a rear seat on the political bandwagon.

Marin Living

ONE OF THE SEVERAL unusual features of this attractive two-story home on a narrow, downward-sloping view lot along Mill Valley's Peralta Avenue is the location of its carport — on the roof of the home but on the level with the street. The owner asked of his designer Erwin H. Hille, Novato architect, and builder Koenig Construction Co. of San Anselmo only one bedroom, thus contributing to the flexibility of the design. The main entrance to the home is from the carport at the second floor level, with a switchback stairway then leading down into the principal living area on the ground floor. The exterior is of unfinished redwood plywood and cedar shingles, with the shingled portion sloped so as to be both wall and roof. The flatter areas of the roof are covered with a colored gravel. The photograph was taken from the rear of the home, showing the railed terrace and the generous glass expanse, both of which permit the occupants to enjoy fully the spectacular vista.

THIRTY-FIVE YEARS OLD today, the Golden Gate Bridge remains the vital link between San Francisco and Marin and other North Bay counties. With population and automobile ownership growth, the bridge and its approaches are now sometimes the scenes of monumental traffic jams. The most promising solution: a rapid transit system. The bus shown here entering the bridge from the San Francisco approach is part of the white and green fleet that the Golden Gate Bridge District began operating five months ago across the span, and is a forerunner to a possible future rapid transit system. A Birthday For The Golden Gate Bridge

By DOROTHY GARDINER

Since the opening of the Golden Gate Bridge 35 years ago today, it has been termed: the most graceful man-made structure ever built; an engineering marvel; a wonder, and the most unique span in all the world.

For its first 27 years, the 9,951-foot-long bridge, with its 4,200-foot main span suspended above the rushing waters of the Golden Gate Strait, was the longest single suspension bridge in the world.

Then in 1964 it was nudged to second place by the newly built, 60-foot longer, Verrazano Narrows Bridge in New York Harbor.

But the advent of a longer span did nothing to diminish the Golden Gate's unique position among great structures of the world.

OVER THE YEARS the bright orange painted span (the color was chosen after an intensive study because its visibility would not fade away in the fog) became the front door of Marin and the North Bay; the international gateway to the Pacific, and one of the most famous landmarks in the world.

As with the Statue of Liberty on the Atlantic Seaboard, the Golden Gate has become a national symbol to countless hundreds of thousands of tourists, immigrants and servicemen entering and leaving the United States.

"The bridge was built by the will of the people," a spokesman for the Golden Gate Bridge, Highway and Transportation District recently stated.

IN THE 1920s with federal and state governments reluctant to finance it, the people of Marin, San Francisco, Sonoma, Del Norte and most of Napa and part of Mendocino, through legislative action, formed and later incorporated the Golden Gate Bridge District.

In 1930 voters in the district approved a 35-million-dollar bond issue to build the span and "persons from the northern counties pledged property as collateral," the spokesman added.

During the Depression years these bonds, retired last year, were bought by a syndicate headed by the Bank of America.

The people of the six counties still have a hand shaping the bridge's destiny — one that may include rapid transit by 1980.

SINCE 1968 THE district board has been comprised of supervisors, city councilmen, mayors and laymen appointed by local supervisors for two-year terms. (This system resulted from a law authored by Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael.)

(Directors — with nine from San Francisco; three, each, from Marin and Sonoma and one, each, from Del Norte, Napa and Mendocino — are paid $50 a meeting with a yearly wage maximum set at $3,600. The board president receives $50 a meeting with a $5,000 limit.)

In recent years constantly increasing traffic loads were beginning to jam the span.

DURING ITS first year (1937-38) it carried 9,000 vehicles a day, or 3,226,521 a year. By 1970-71 traffic had increased more than 10-fold, with 91,773 daily crossings and 33,497,080 yearly.

A major factor in bridge use has been the phenomenal growth of Marin Country from a rural community of more than 39,000 in 1940 to a cosmopolitan suburb of more than 200,000 today.

The Golden Gate's "traffic problem is complicated because it involves not only commute problems but more trips for recreation on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays," explained Assemblyman John F. Foran, D-San Francisco.

Foran, longtime member and former chairman of the Assembly Transportation Committee, authored the 1969 bill that put the bridge into all forms of transportation.

AS A RESULT the bridge began operating a ferry between Sausalito and San Francisco two years ago and began running 154 white and green buses across Marin and into San Francisco almost five months ago.

(Ironically it was the opening of the Golden Gate Bridge that put the old ferries and trains operated by Northwestern Pacific Railroad, out of business. The railroad's successor, Greyhound Lines, turned over its chores to the bridge in December.

The bridge district was also

A Bridge That Couldn't Be Built

asked to develop both short and long term transportation plans for the Golden Gate corridor, the thoroughfare running from Santa Rosa to San Francisco.

"Where we go from here depends on population growth and the success or lack of success of the buses and ferries," Foran said.

IF PETALUMA and Santa Rosa were to become boom towns, such as San Jose, "the picture could change," he said.

With a possible 47,000 commuters crossing the bridge by 1980, the district hopes to have no more than 23,500 using cars, with the rest using transit, the district spokesman said.

Reverse lanes for express bus service on the Waldo grade will open this summer and an underground busway running across San Francisco from the bridge is under study.

Long range speculation also includes an underwater tube across the Bay or rail transit for the bridge, with today's ferries and buses acting as feeders and collectors.

THE NEW passenger system has gotten off to a good start with buses carrying some 6,200 persons a day, according to the district spokesman. (One bus with 40 passengers removes 30 cars from the bridge and one ferry with 400 removes 300 cars.)

With "no bonded debt, no interest to pay, no taxes to collect and having four or five million dollars after expenses," the district is in a position to subsidize the new bus and ferry system, explained Director Stephen Leonoudakis of San Francisco.

Deficits from the system, however, have been running higher than expected and threaten to require all or nearly all of the bridge surplus above expenses.

"The project of a bridge across the Golden Gate, heretofore considered a wild flight of the imagination has, through recent advances in engineering and bridge design, become a practical proposition. It is a project . . . that will represent a crowning achievement of American endeavor and will constitute the greatest structure in point of magnitude and span ever erected." From "Bridging the Golden Gate," a booklet issued in the early 1920s by Joseph B. Straus and San Francisco City Engineer M. M. O'Shaughnessy.

Within two years the district expects to have three, 165-foot-long, gas turbined ferries operating between terminals at Larkspur and Sausalito and San Francisco.

This new service should be "fantastically successful," Leonoudakis added, "since 60 per cent of Marin's commuters live within five miles of the proposed terminals.

PRELIMINARY plans for the Larkspur terminal on 25.4 acres near the mouth of the Corte Madera Creek are now under way.

Work is also expected to begin on a permanent bus terminal and facility east of the San Rafael Post Office.

(The new transit system has been aided by the Urban Mass Transportation Administration picking up two-thirds of the nine million dollar cost of the bus system. This federal agency may pay two-thirds of the cost of the new ferries and additional buses.)

On May 27, 1937, more than 200,000 men, women and children flocked to Marin and San Francisco bridge entrances to be among the first to walk across the six lanes of decking.

CERTAINLY THEY gasped as they peered up at the two 746-foot towers (still the tallest in the world); at the two swooping cables and the deceivingly delicate appearing suspender ropes, whose ability to hold 22,900 pounds per lineal foot of decking belied their appearance.

(Replacement of these suspenders, first major reconstruction in 35 years, is expected to start next month. The span should have a life expectancy of at least 200 years, according to a bridge district spokesman.)

Visitors 35 years ago today must have been left speechless by those first spectacular views from the bridge — the green and brown Marin hills; the San Francisco Bay to the east; the Pacific Ocean to the west and the buildings and homes of the East Bay and San Francisco.

THE NEXT DAY the bridge was opened to auto travel for the first time.

From 1918 when world renowned bridge designer Joseph Strauss was called to San Francisco to study the possible spanning of the mile-wide Golden Gate Strait, the idea of a bridge seized the imagination of the world.

Strauss, a soft-spoken genius who believed a bridge should be beautiful as well as sound, reported a bridge could indeed be built, but it would take a main span much longer than ever before attempted.

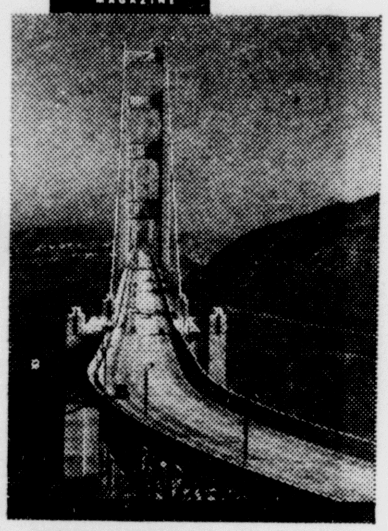

During the 1920s and even into the 30s the building of the Golden Gate Bridge was fought in the courts by opponents including Southern Pacific Railroad, owner of Northwestern Pacific who feared the bridge would threaten ferry service; protestors from northern counties who did not want the auto invading their region; those who believed the bridge was impossible to build, and taxpayer groups.

BUT IN 1933 construction began and the world watched as the Marin tower climbed into the sky and later held its breath when the San Francisco tower was delayed after a trestle built to carry men and equipment was severed by a fogbound ship and later damaged in a storm.

Workmen, happy to be working during the Depression, spun

"NO TRAFFIC delay on the 35-million-dollar Golden Gate Bridge which links by steel and concrete metropolitan San Francisco and the North Bay counties," boasted the Redwood Empire Assn. in the caption that accompanied this photo of the great bridge in its youth. Indeed, traffic was no problem then. But all that has changed. And, at age 35, the bridge is confronted with traffic loads that sometimes test its capacity, and cause increasing talk of rapid transit. (Redwood Empire Assn. photo)

ABOVE, the men who built the Golden Gate Bridge had to be men of stamina, strength and courage, and one of the most hazardous of the many dangerous jobs was the stringing of the cables at dizzying heights. Below, two Roebling Co. workmen, some of the 340 employed by that firm at the bridge site in the assembling and "spinning" of the cables, work at erecting the vital suspender cables on castings. At lower left, the great bridge is shown with the cables in place, stretching across the Gate, and with only the final gap in its roadway remaining to be closed for completion.

AT THIS STAGE, the towers of the Golden Gate Bridge and for the Bay Bridge beyond as well, had been erected but the cables had not yet been spun. And on May 3, 1935, elements of the U.S. Pacific Fleet steamed through the Golden Gate Strait and past the sentinel-like towers.

TO KEEP THE huge structure in proper balance, the steel framework for the roadway of the Golden Gate Bridge had to be built from both sides of each tower at exactly the same rate of progress. So steel stretched outward from both sides of each bridge tower as the roadway was built section by section.

Our Golden Gate Bridge Turns 35-Years-Old Today

New Era Of Transit Lies Ahead

80,000 miles of wire into the 7,650-foot long cables.

The workmen built the bridge well.

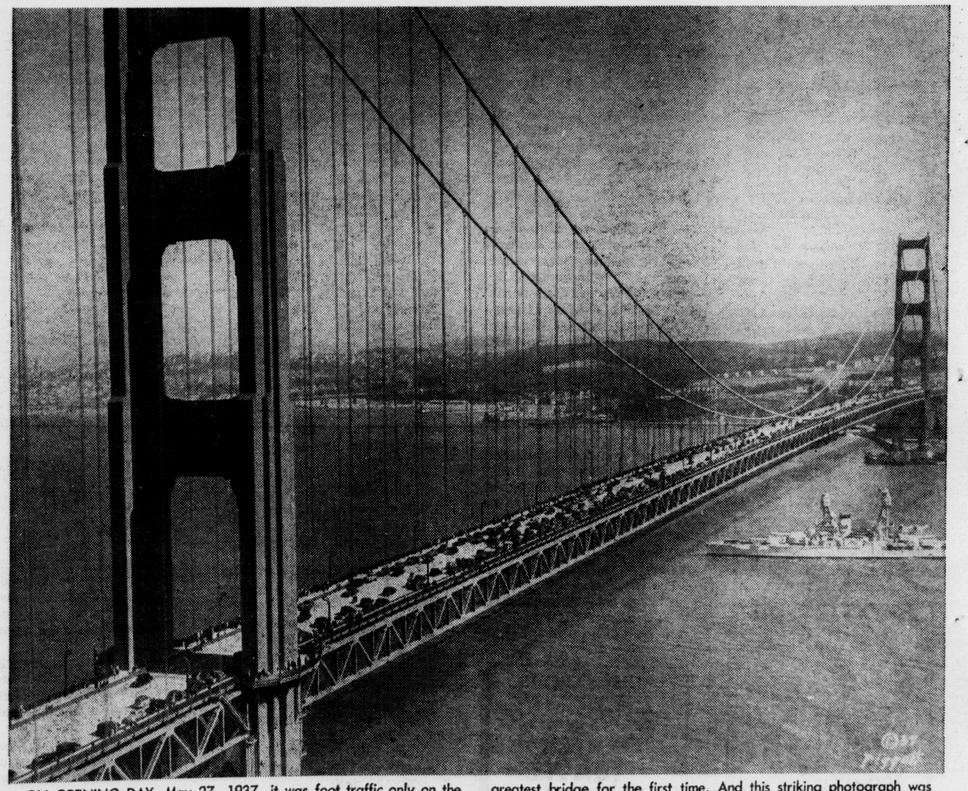

During the last 35 years the crossing has only been closed — for a few hours —to traffic once. That was on Dec. 1, 1951, when, after being lashed by wind gusts up to 69 miles an hour, the roadway began to undulate.

SUFFERING damage in the storm, the span went under repair in 1952 and two years later, following an extensive engineering study, it was strengthened by lateral bracing.

(This new bracing created some of the initial structural framework for a possible lower deck. The idea of a second deck to be used for vehicular traffic was not enthusiastically received by Marin and San Francisco residents during the last decade.

No one has the answers to tomorrow's transportation problems. But if history repeats itself, one thing is certain:

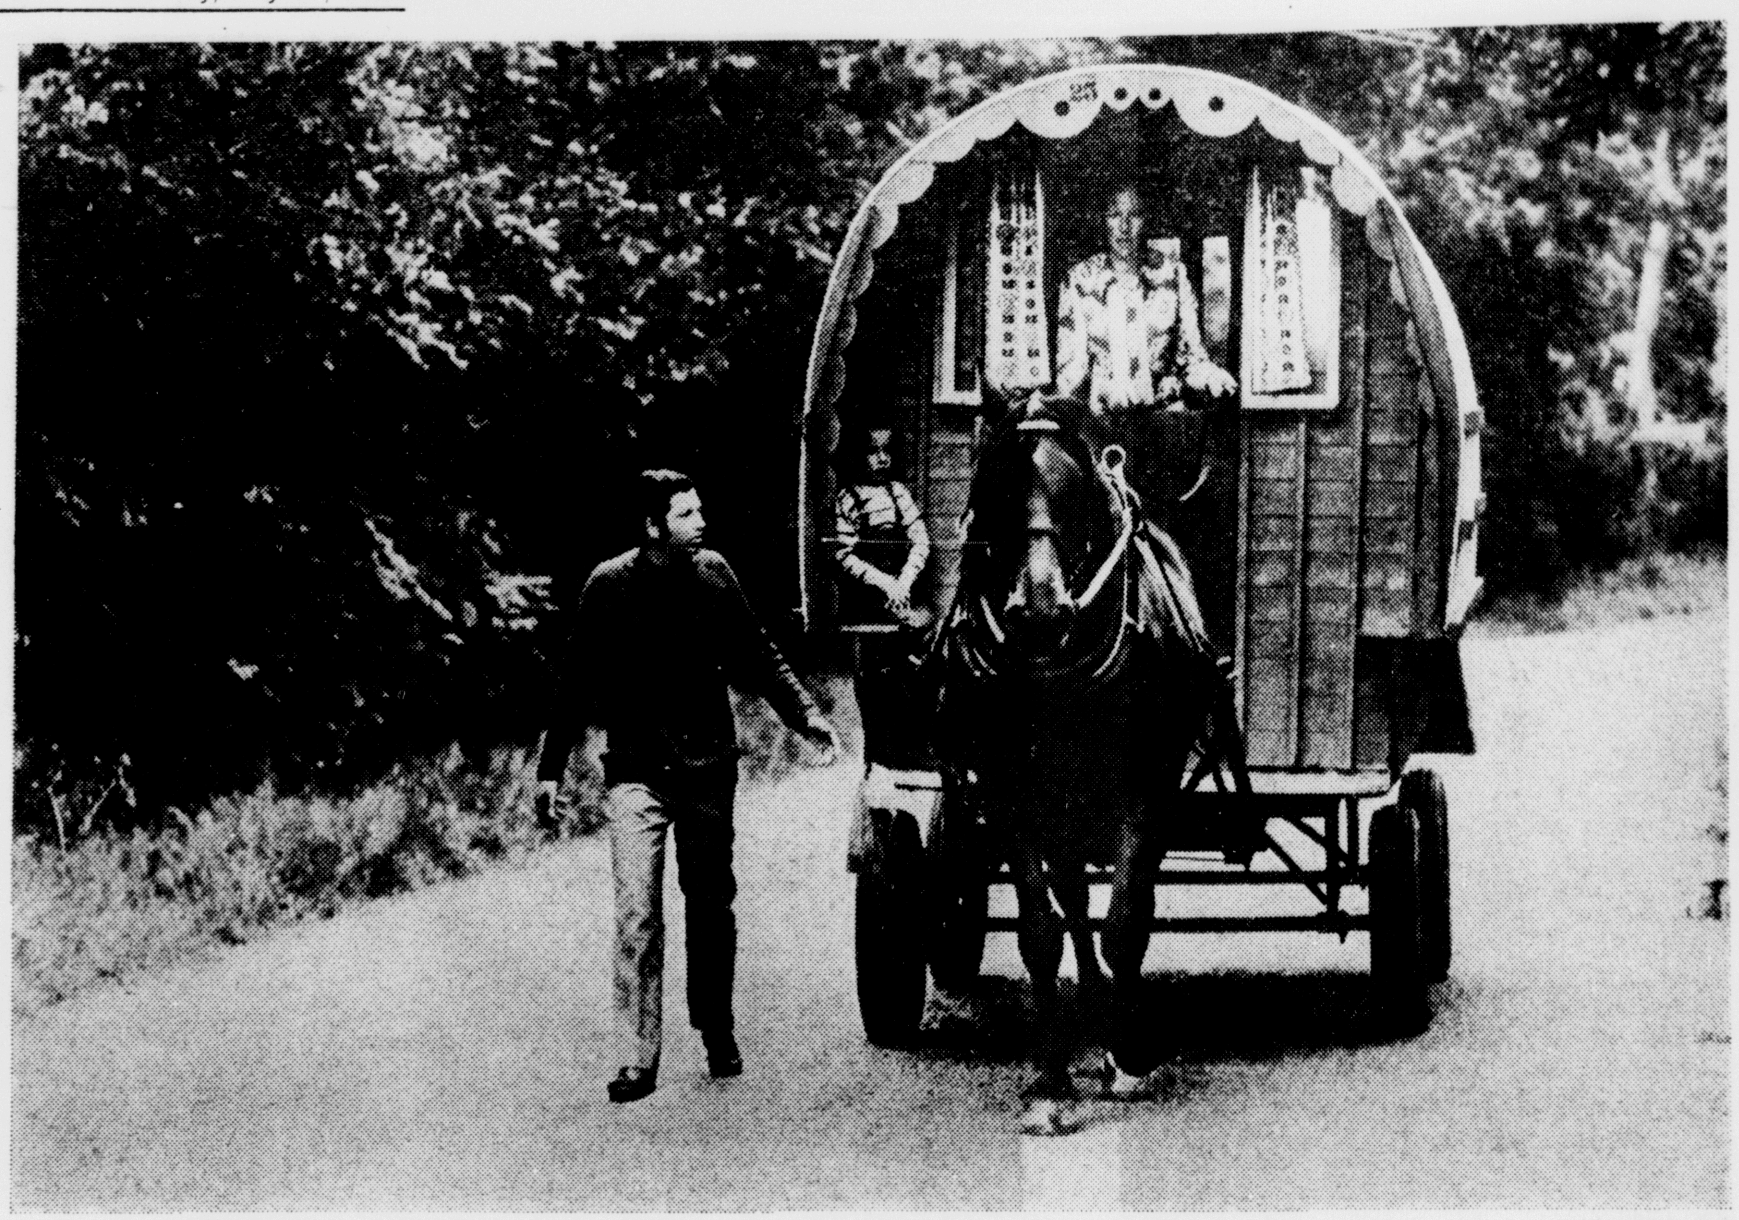

The people will be watching what happens to the Golden Gate Bridge. It will continue to be the key link between Marin and San Francisco.

ON OPENING DAY, May 27, 1937, it was foot traffic only on the just-completed Golden Gate Bridge. But on the following day, May 28, 1937, automobile traffic began moving across the world's greatest bridge for the first time. And this striking photograph was taken.

The Travel Pages

The horses get fan letters from the tenderfeet tourists they have pulled in gypsy-style caravans over Ireland's quiet roads and byways.

EVEN THE NOVICE who has never been closer to horses than the ponies of the merry-go-round need have no worries about traveling through Ireland's green countryside by caravan. Old Dobbin has been taking care of tanglefooted greenhorns for years. He even knows the route. There is one thing: on the long hills, he will expect you to get out and walk. Dobbin's back is strong. But his head isn't so soft, either.

See Ireland With Dobbin As Your Guide

By ALBERT D. HUGHES

Letter to a horse, address Cork, Republic of Ireland.

Dear Dobbin:

You were so good to us when you took us around the caravan route last summer that we told the Smiths, who are going over this year, to ask for you when they get there. They're nice people, too, and will treat you well.

The Joneses.

Now if it wasn't for Joe O'Reilly standing there in front of me telling me this, I'd swear he had kissed the stone in Blarney Castle, which I can see across the fields from his establishment.

Tourists who go a gypsying in horse-drawn caravans over roads in the Irish countryside enjoy the experience so much that they write to the horse, O'Reilly claims. It lets him know that the animal is a good one and that he picked well for his clients.

O'Reilly insists that no one should pass up the fun of horse caravaning because of inexperience. "My horses are trained and docile," he says. "I pick a horse for each client. I believe its the only way, and by doing this I've had an accident-free record."

He heads his own Blarney Romany Caravans. He also is president of the Horse Drawn Caravan Assn. of Ireland, which combines the experience and resources of the numerous operators of horse-drawn caravans, and which has established standards for this business.

O'Reilly has an impressive establishment that is reassuring to first-timers who come there. He has more than 100 horses and his own farriers. He does his own shoeing, harness-making and repairs. His tack room is splendidly shiny with horse gear neatly hung up.

The caravans are large, barrel-shaped wagons capable of accommodating five people in bunks and are drawn by a single animal. They come equipped with bedding, kitchen gear, dishes, pots, pans, bowls, silverware and items for cleaning up dishes and the caravan itself. There are a gas stove and gas lamp, buckets to feed the horse, a horse brush and halter.

The caravaners are instructed in harnessing and unharnessing the animals. One of the staff goes along with the caravan for a few miles just to make sure that everything is all right and that the patrons are happy.

Caravan holidays are usually for one week, and O'Reilly provides a suggested route plus a set of instructions for the care of the horse and caravan. Because of the international business he does, the instructions come in French, German and Jutch as well as English.

The longest day's trek in one itinerary is 15 miles, the shortest six miles. Most stops are at farmhouses, where, by arrangement with O'Reilly, the horse is cared for and the caravan has a place to park.

No one is obliged to take the route suggested by O'Reilly. He does point out that in general, like in the old milk and bakery route days now past, "the horse knows the way." Also, the designated stops are helpful in case of emergency.

The directions are quite explicit and not only indicate where supplies may be acquired but also where fishing, swimming, golf and even entertainment are available.

Let's suppose you have gotten the family and all the personal gear aboard the caravan, your food distributed in the lockers and ice chest, the animal harnessed, and instructions duly noted. You cluck to the horse, and off you go. Here's how the first day's instructions read:

First Day — To Killumney — 10.5 miles (17 km).

From caravan site go straight through to Tower Village (1¾ miles). Pass the Huntsman's pub, then turn left (Macroom signpost). At "T" Junction at Cloghoe Church turn right. After one mile turn left at Macroom/Killarney signpost. At Canon's Cross "T" Junction turn left toward Cork (signpost Cork 9). At Inniscarra Bar (1½ miles) turn right (signpost Ballincollig 1½ miles). Over bridge, then veer left for Ballincollig. At "T" Junction (signpost Macroom 17¾ miles) turn right (Macroom/Killarney road). Keep on main road to Owens Bar (2 miles), then turn left (signpost Ovens). Through Ovens to Killumney (Bandon Road).

Second Day — to Bandon, via Crossbarry — 12.2 miles (19.6 km).

From Killumney follow Bandon signposts to Crossbarry (5½ miles) — long drawn-out hill, PLEASE WALK. Turn right and continue on main road to Bandon. At entrance to town, turn right at "Caravan" signpost and continue to Kilbrogan Farm and Caravan Park.

Amenities available in Bandon: golf (nine-hole course) and tennis; dancing and ballads in Devonshire Arms (Orchid Ballroom).

Explicit enough? Hard to get lost with these directions. Even if you do, don't worry, almost anyone you stop to ask questions or directions will cheerfully answer. By now, most of the villagers know where you're headed for, and can steer you in the right direction.

As for conduct on the highways, O'Reilly has some 30 suggestions and they include:

"Hold the horse by the bridle at all times when standing still. Always walk up and down long hills, one person leading horse by bridle uphill, and another person sitting on the caravan with the brake going downhill. Never get off caravan while it's in motion. Never approach horse from rear without warning — speak animal's name first. Horse should be walking, never trotting or galloping. Never tie horse by reins; caravaners walking should do so at rear; be sure gate is closed when horse is put in field for night."

A walking horse, you learn, does four miles an hour, which permits caravaners to plan their day. Caravans are bound to catch up with each other, but the rule suggests that they stay 50 yards apart.

Thus, instructions cover almost all contingencies. And there's a telephone number available in case of emergency.

They're Off And Walking

By PAT McCLOSKEY

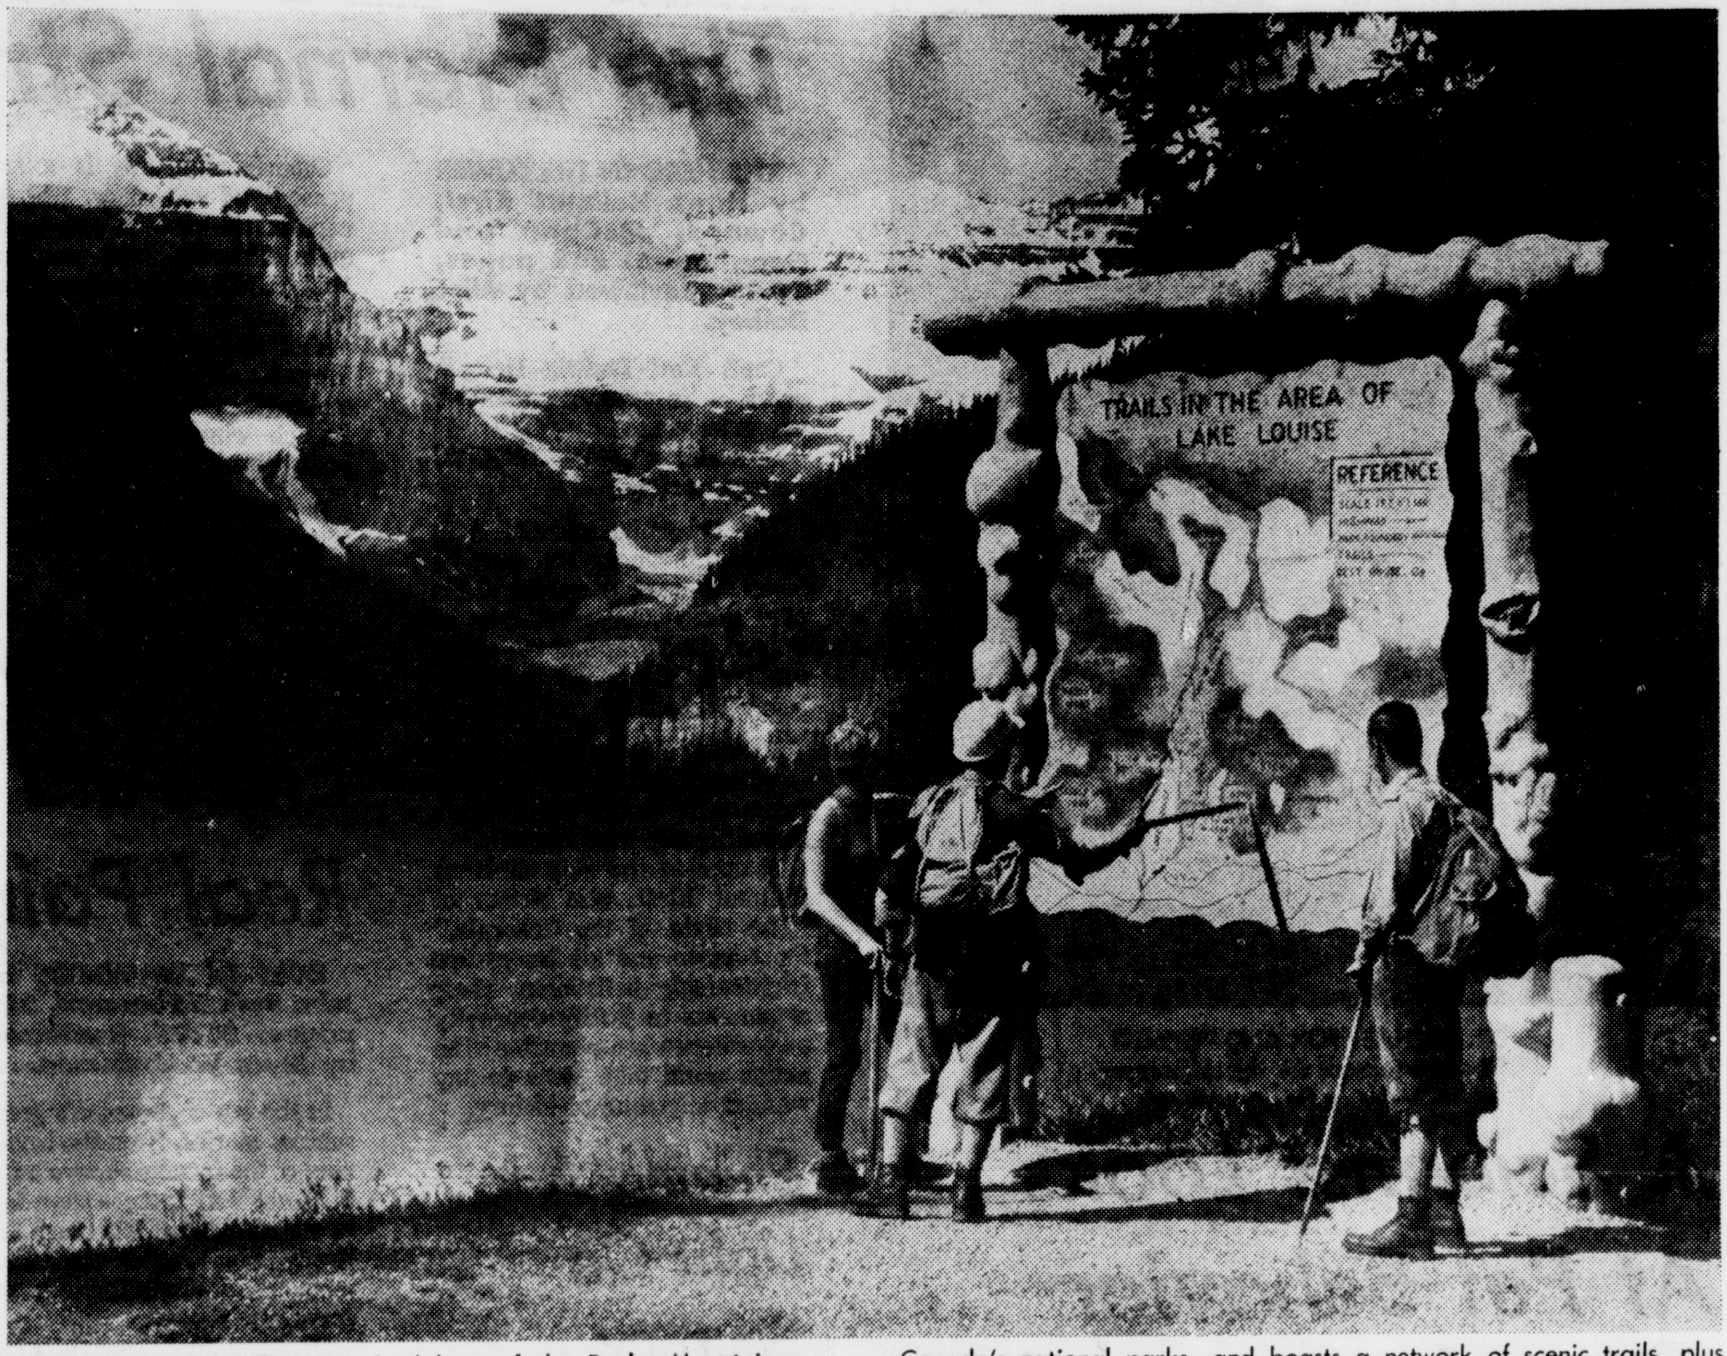

There's a world-wide outdoor revival underway and people everywhere are taking a closer look at nature.

Canada, however, has always been a popular hiking country, with paths such as the 435-mile Bruce Trail in Ontario. It will eventually link up with the New York State Finger Lakes Trail and the Appalachian Trail forming a hiking path from Georgia to Georgian Bay.

There are also trail networks in nearly all of the 24 Canadian national parks. They also offer free programs where experienced naturalists help visitors understand the parks' complex natural environment and the roles played by its plants, animals and land formations.

And in the past two years, hundreds of miles of new trails have been carved out of forest and mountain, with more slated for development.

Some of the better new trails are the Centennial, the Chilkoot, the Rideau, the Laurentide and the Laurentian network.

AGAINST A BREATHTAKING backdrop of the Rocky Mountains, a party of hikers map out their route for a walk around beautiful Lake Louise in Banff National Park, Alberta. Banff is the third largest of Canada's national parks, and boasts a network of scenic trails, plus expert naturalists to explain the flora, fauna and geology.

IN BRITISH Columbia, students working on a grant from the federal government's Opportunities for Youth Program completed the final sections of the Centennial Trail. It stretches from the Simon Fraser University campus in the mountains ringing the coastal city of Vancouver to Manning Provincial Park, 130 miles away.

The trail snakes through scenery ranging from mountain, forest, and rushing stream to the quiet beauty of lakes such as Cultus and Chilliwack. Enroute there's historic Fort Langley, where the reconstructed palisades and interior reveal life in a 19th Century colonial outpost used by fur traders.

Much of the Centennial Trail lies in valleys, but the approach to Manning Park climbs to over 5,000 feet. Some stretches require the company of an experienced hiker, but most of the trail can be taken at a leisurely pace.

The students marked and widened it, built bridges and erected walls to counteract erosion and corduroy log sections in swampy areas. For variety, trails divert from several logging roads along the way.

Because much of the trail lies close to the Trans-Canada Highway, sections can be used for an afternoon or weekend jaunt. Topographical maps of the areas covered by the Centennial Trail are available from the Queen's Printer at the Parliament Buildings in Victoria, B.C.

TO THE NORTH, the U.S. and Canadian governments have joined forces to re-open the historic Chilkoot and White Pass trails for hikers.

Describing the Chilkoot as "the worst trail this side of hell," the gold-crazed prospectors of 1898 pack-sacked their possessions over the pass to the shores of Lake Bennett, enroute to the fortunes and lost dreams of the Klondike gold fields. Today's 35-mile trail is a lot easier and has overnight cabins at strategic points along the way.

The Chilkoot and White Pass are two of the attractions of the Klondike Gold Rush International Historic Park, currently being developed by the two governments.

IN ONTARIO, the newly-completed Rideau Trail is now rivaling the Bruce for popularity.

The Rideau links Canada's capital of Ottawa with Kingston, where the St. Lawrence River flows out of Lake Ontario. It is the key to a 180-mile hiking adventure through country rich with lakes, forests, streams, interesting rock formations and a wide variety of plant and animal life. Several old mica and apatite mines lie along the route, and there's even the odd osprey's nest. This summer, side trails are being added and permanent camp sites developed.

Although the route is open to anybody, the Rideau Trail Assn. (Box 2111, Station D, Ottawa, K1P 5W3) maintains it, organizes outings and supplies, maps and background information with a membership ($2 student, $4 single, $6 family).

LINKING THE 70 miles of trails in the hills of Ottawa's popular Gatineau Park with the rolling Laurentian mountains, north of Montreal, is the new 120-mile Laurentide Trail.

The Laurentide passes near many Quebec hamlets on its long Wakefield-to-Lachute run, with Highway 8 affording easy access to the trail for short hikes. The Canadian Youth Hostel Assn. at 270 Maclaren St., Ottawa, or 1324 Sherbrooke West, Montreal, Quebec, will have maps available by summer.

IN THE LAURENTIANS, more than 100 miles of trails in Mont Tremblant Provincial Park, and 250 miles of trails from Shawbridge to Ste. Agathe were cleared, marked and mapped last summer through the Opportunities for Youth Program. Coupled with already existing trails, this vast network represents one of the most comprehensive hiking systems in Canada.

The trails wander through forests to scenic outlooks, around lakes and past abandoned huts. Many trails intersect, and several have short, alternate routes joining up again with the main trail. Most lie within 10 miles of the Laurentian Autoroute and Laurentian Route 11, making the many towns and villages along the way convenient jumping-off points and centers for accommodation and food.

There are also several resorts providing accommodation, meals, and entertainment.

Maps of the Laurentian trails are available from the Laurentian Ski Zone, 300 Place d'Youville, Montreal, at $1.50 for individuals and $1 for group members.

GUIDED HOLIDAY hikes are available in Canada. The Skyline Trail Hikers of the Canadian Rockies at Post Office Box 5905, Stalion A, Calgary 9, Alberta, operate five-day camps near Egypt Lake, 30 miles southwest of Banff, from July 22-26, July 27-31, and Aug. 1-5. The $85 fee covers breakfast, dinner, a pack lunch, equipment and transportation to and from Banff and the campsite.

The hikes start daily at the fixed base camp.

DR. MICHAEL FOX AND FRIENDS
There are reasons for the differences

A Scientist Looks At Pet Behavior

UNDERSTANDING YOUR DOG by Dr. Michael Fox; Coward, McCann and Geoghegan, 240 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Jeff Greer.

Every dog owner or would-be dog owner, no matter how experienced or novice, can learn much from Dr. Michael Fox's book.

Slightly more technically written than his popular monthly columns in a nationwide dog magazine, Fox's book is nevertheless a clear message about dogs' physical and emotional processes and needs.

More than most dog writers, he drives home the point that all the many breeds of dogs were made different from each other for specific reasons, and that their breeders may have spent generations emphasizing the differences. Therefore, it is reasonable to expect a houseful of beagles or dachshunds — essentially pack hunting animals —to get along well with each other, while a houseful of terriers can be pandemonium.

Fox carefully reviews the need for socialization of puppies at various critical ages — a concept first described many years ago in articles by the late Clarence Pfaffenberger of Guide Dogs in San Rafael. The scientist-dog fancier also outlines researchers latest conclusions about dogs' behavior toward each other, and to a lesser extent, behavior towards people.

He offers excellent advice on testing puppies' temperament and learning abilities.

Based on my own experience with breeding and showing dogs, I suspect Fox's findings are colored a tiny bit by the clinical situation of research. The individual dog owner, watching a dog grow up on more or less a one-dog-one-person basis, may detect some differences in the dog's behavior.

Young Marinite's Book Of Verse

DRAWINGS OF DREAMS by Deborah Weiner; Milagra, 28 pages, $1.50. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

Not all the poetry of the new generation is being heard on radio and albums, set to music. Here is such verse in book format, attractively designed, and embellished by cover art by 23-year-old Deborah Weiner of Sausalito, who is its graphic artist as well as poet. Her poetry follows no single theme nor adopts no single tone, but rather is ever-changing, sensitive to the elements of present or remembered past. And even when their impact is a saddening one, there is something hopeful and challenging, something defiant in the well-chosen phrases of this young wordsmith. "Follow the directions carefully; and you'll be sure to find your way back home," the postscript to "Therapy Piece" assures us.

THE HERO IN THE TOWER by Hans Hellmut Kirst; Coward, McCann and Geoghegan, 348 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

Capt. Karl Ludwig Hein is crazy — in several grandiose, perverted ways.

He's also a hero — 1940-Nazi vintage variety.

The tower he inhabits is in occupied France. The men he looks down on, members of his elite gun battery, veterans of Poland, Dunkirk, and the Maginot Line, are honed to battle-ready perfection.

Most of them are crazy, too — though in more common, pragmatic ways than their magnificently mad captain.

Thanks to the skill of Hans Hellmut Kirst, also author of "The Night of the Generals," the captain and his troops are frighteningly believable. Their arguments to justify depravity and violence are plausible. The action could take place in any war, at any time of history.

Superficially, this is a suspense-filled war story. Will the captain continue to get away, quite literally, with murder? Will his NCOs continue to cover for him, in exchange for his willful ignorance of their own illegal activities? (They are making fortunes merchandising French wines and lingerie to back-home Germans.)

But the underlying conflict is between good — primarily in the shape of the captain's handsome orderly — and evil.

This is saved from being just another war story by the author's deft combination of slapstick, humor and irony. His soldiers (thanks to a good translator, they speak pure GI) enjoy the benefits of a battery brothel, engage in baiting the local citizenry, and try to thwart an archeological research team. And they are all very funny.

Some of the wittiest but most chilling scenes involve a seemingly meek, actually vicious professor. He leads Captain Hein down a trail strewn with medieval heroes, fake legends, creaking caskets and velvet cloaks to a denouement right out of Wagner — with touches by Lerner and Lowe.

This is a big, fast-moving novel. Its main themes are the eternal battle beween the weak forces of good and the terrible strengths of perversion, deception and destruction.

Who wins? Read about this triple-plated Siegfried-Satan, Captain Hein, and find out.

Shining A Light On Secrecy

THE PAPERS AND THE PAPERS by Sanford J. Ungar; Dutton, 307 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

When Daniel Ellsberg decided to try to make public the secret history of the Vietnam war that he had helped prepare for the Defense Department, he thought the disclosures would bring the war to an end.

They didn't. Instead, the furor over whether they should have been published, and who was guilty of what in publishing them, soon eclipsed the sordid tale of American involvement in Vietnam which had been prepared for Robert S. McNamara and not completed until he was long out of office.

"The Papers and the Papers" tells the absorbing story. Sanford J. Ungar, New York Post reporter, has done a thorough job, and presents it in highly readable reportorial style.

The papers wrote new legal history with "the Papers." What will happen to Ellsberg is yet to be seen. But more recent disclosures by columnist Jack Anderson and Sen. Mike Gravel of "secret" government documents show that the trail blazed with the Pentagon papers will let more light hereafter into the dark jungle of government secrecy.

A Gaudy Era And Real Pair

DUET IN DIAMONDS by John Burke; Putnam's, 257 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

In the era of America's great success stories, from the beginning of the industrial revolution to World War I, there were few to match those of Diamond Jim Brady, the King of the Salesmen, and Lillian Russell, the American Beauty.

Diamond Jim's story was one to shame Horatio Alger. Born and reared above a New York waterfront saloon, with the most meager of educations, he rose by his own ability to become tycoon and millionaire.

Lillian Russell's rise was equally spectacular. Born Helen Leonard in a small town in Iowa, she became the toast of Broadway, the "most desirable woman in America," the top attraction of the musical stage, and (accolade of accolades!) had her name on a cigar.

That the paths of these two should meet added a rare fillip to their stories. And they were made for each other. Lillian of the hourglass figure could eat steak for steak, oyster for oyster with the gourmandizing fat man whose appetite was the wonder of New York restaurateurs. Both, also, were "real people," despite the aura of wealth and conspicuous consumption that surrounded Brady and the glamor of the theater that enveloped Miss Russell.

Yet, although Lillian Russell married four times, she spurned the hand of Diamond Jim, even though he laid a million dollars in her lap as a proffered wedding present. And stranger still, they remained friends.

John Burke, a former newspaper reporter turned book writer, follows their twin careers in "Duet in Diamonds," appropriately subtitled: "The flamboyant sage of Lillian Russell and Diamond Jim Brady in America's Gilded Age."

Flamboyant they were, and flamboyant the story is. Burke recaptures in lively and incisive prose a gaudy era that ended with Prohibition and the income tax, never to return. And he brings to life two individualistic and likeable personalities who epitomized that era.

True Story Of Life In Monterrey

MY HEART LIES SOUTH by Elizabeth Borton de Trevino; Crowell, 252 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Karen Hunter.

More than 35 years ago Elizabeth Borton, a graduate of Stanford University, a student of the violin and a reporter on the Boston Herald, married Luis Trevino, a public relations man from Monterrey, Mexico.

"My Heart Lies South" is a charming true story about her life as an American trying to adjust to her Mexican husband and his way of life in Monterrey. She learns to love deeply her adopted country and wonderful new family, especially Mamacita and Popacito, her beloved mother and father-in-law. Mrs. Trevino writes with tender feelings and understanding of the people and customs of Old Mexico.

Originally published almost 20 years ago, this new edition includes an epilogue which brings the reader up to date on the people and the tremendous changes that have occurred in Mexico since the events of this book took place.

Yet even with all the changes the book is still up to date because it was written to show the strong love and devotion of the Mexican people for their families. That is one thing that has resisted change and hopefully always will.

MORE MARX THAN GRIMM

"But what intrigues us most — since we know that soon we will have those clear and definite movies — is to observe the red faces of the scientific community when the Loch Ness Investigation Bureau and its associates present the final evidence and identification. We even know what will be the response: 'Oh, we thought there was something there — just not enough earlier proof.' " — Robert H. Rines, Academy of Applied Science, in foreword to "Monster Hunt"

Is Nessie A Hoax, A Product Of Hysteria Or Relic Of Past?

By DON KEOWN

MONSTER HUNT by Tim Dinsdale; Acropolis, 295 pages, $6.95.

Is there a monster in Loch Ness?

All we know is that we rode in a bus alongside that almost legendary Scottish lake for several hours a few years back coming down from Inverness to Glasgow, staring all the while at its waters. And nary a monster did we see.

On the other hand, we didn't see any fish either. And would not want to be so dogmatic as to declare the loch fishless simply on the basis of that experience.

After all, Tim Dinsdale has been watching and probing Loch Ness for 14 years, having given up careers as an aeronautics engineer and an insurance broker to become a full-time pursuer of the monster. And he is, indeed, convinced of the existence of "Nessie." In fact, he says he has experienced several personal sightings and near-sightings, the most convincing having occurred June 23, 1971, when "there arose in Urquhart Bay a large hump, somewhat triangular in shape and void of any detectable fin. . .Nessie, 20 feet long and about four to six feet out of the water at her apex, slowly moved toward us into the bay, turned and then submerged. . .And so I can tell you, not just intellectually from sonar studies or mere research of the reports of others, that I have seen an amazingly large animate object in Loch Ness. . ."

The quote is from Dinsdale's new book, "Monster Hunt."

In 1961, the year after his first sighting of Nessie from a distance and through binoculars, Dinsdale wrote "Loch Ness Monster" to add new fuel to the controversy as to whether Nessie is for real —a relic from prehistory or some weird mutation —or the twin product of deliberate continuing hoax plus human hysteria and imagination.

Dinsdale continued to return to Loch Ness' shores periodically to seek conclusive proof of the monster's existence, sometimes working alone, sometimes in cooperation with others.

In 1968 he became a full-time monster-hunter, and eventually he went to work for the Loch Ness Phenomena Investigation Bureau, partly funded in America.

He and his colleagues have pressed their program with a persistence that has produced some evidence, but unhappily not enough, particularly of the photographic kind, to convince the skeptics. Thus the campaign continues.

"Monster Hunt" as a progress report on that campaign is a disappointment. To begin with, Dinsdale is not a skilled writer. His material is poorly organized. But more distressing is his failure to focus his book upon the subject with which he is best equipped to deal, and in which the reader is most interested.

Instead of concentrating on Loch Ness, Nessie and his work there, Dinsdale devotes a very large proportion of his book to monster and serpent stories generally, from all corners of the globe, and from past history as well as contemporary times. These stories are of widely varying degrees of believability and interest, and are usually told verbatim through the accounts of the eye-witnesses and thus tend to run too long.

Dinsmore's analyses of these reports are often enlightening: For instance, most of the huge, rotting carcasses of monsters and serpents that wash ashore from the sea prove to be the remains of basking sharks.

But Dinsdale is most entertaining and most intriguing when he stays with Loch Ness and its neighbor Loch Morar, discussing the increasingly sophisticated efforts — underwater and long-distance photography, sonar, an autogyro, etc. — that have been employed to produce the proof that will convince the doubters. Sometimes persuasive, too, are his coverage of the reports of others who claim to have seen Nessie. It isn't easy, for instance, to discount the wife of the retired wing commander who has lived along the loch for most of her life and says she has sighted on five occasions "a great black hump crossing the loch from north to south. . ."

Why Tim Dinsdale failed to devote "Monster Hunt" in its totality to the most fascinating of these searches and the one with which he is personally involved may trigger speculation. The more dubious will suspect that with all his observing and his probing Dinsdale has simply failed to produce enough evidence of substance to fill a book. In all truth, the several pages of illustrations in the book include only a few directly connected with Loch Ness and its mysterious inhabitant, and only a couple of these are photos that show what might be taken for the outline of a monster. (Motion picture film shown by Dinsdale on a television show was even less conclusive.)

But there is probably another reason Dinsdale has been so sparing in the use of his material. He reveals on Page 244 that he plans yet another book, "Project Water Horse," in which "I hope to record something of the human story and details of the more bizarre experiments conducted over some 14 years of fieldwork." The assertion causes one to wonder if "Monster Hunt" is really necessary.

Indeed, is the human effort and money being expended in the Loch Ness search for a monster that may not be there at all justifiable? What is the reason for such a project?

Perhaps it is sufficient answer to say simply that the Loch Ness investigation, unlike so many other scientific programs, at its worst will do no harm to mankind. It is unlikely to damage our environment, to increase external pressures or to drain really vast sums of money from critical social needs.

But one of Dinsdale's coworkers with the Loch Ness Phenomena Investigation Bureau provided a better answer:

"Someone recently asked me why we hunt these creatures. It is easy to answer, but difficult to explain. We believe in them — not only the individuals themselves but what they in the large sense represent. They are a not-so-impossible dream and an enigma almost answered. On this world bound by technological complexities they are a return to nature, and a subtle reminder to man that he is not a master of all creation. It is a quixotic search for truth in a scornful world. . .And when we do place the final piece of the puzzle in position perhaps men will stop momentarily to gaze at inscrutable nature, and wonder about the deeper natural truths. . ."

In other words, an opportunity for nature to gain a laugh on man and his sciences. It is revealing that in the past, when man sighted what he thought to be a serpent, his first reaction was to shoot or harpoon it, even before he determined if it meant him harm. No wonder the Loch Ness monster, if, indeed, there is one, so rarely shows himself to man. Smart guy (or gal), that Nessie!

FOR THE MYCOLOGY-MINDED

IN CASE you hadn't noticed, mushrooms are "in." Not only in the kitchen, but artistically as well. Artists are painting tem, potters and candlemakers are copying them. And the old and honored hobby-science of mycology is stronger than ever. For all of these interests, "Exotic Mushrooms," edited by Henri Romagnesi and published by Sterling, is certain to whet appetites and or appreciation for these tasty, eye-pleasing fungi. The book is loaded with marvelous full-color, full-page paintings of the various mushrooms including the one above shedding its veil. Originally published in Paris, the book is largely a triumph of outstanding continental artists whose color work invites framing and whose black and white drawings dissect vividly the anatomy of the mushroom. Naturalist-editor Romagnesi has done a brief introduction, and provides the names and defines the edibility of the many species, plus helpful information to be used in making identifications. Sterling quite frankly labels the $12.95 volume a "coffee table book." But it is a safe bet that the book won't lie ignored and unopened upon the table. There is too much to see and admire inside its covers.

Sleuths & Suspense

FREER'S COVE by Ethel Gordon; Coward, McCann and Geoghegan, 249 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

This is another of those modern Gothic novels aimed at women readers — one part suspense, one part romance and one part atmosphere. Critics continue to disparage them, and publishers continue to issue them. And apparently readers continue to buy them.

This is Ethel Gordon's first novel, but she has the formula well in hand, handling it adeptly. She also falls into the most common trap of the genre — trite, mechanical dialogue: "In a way, I was responsible," I said. "If I hadn't promised. . ." "Don't ever think that, Daisy." How many times have these novels so concluded?

Nevertheless, "Freer's Cove" is entertaining escapism.

Young Daisy Holland, expecting a child and her marriage in tatters, accepts a rather unlikely offer of a position as companion to another pregnant woman in an isolated house on Maine's fogbound coast where strange and terrible things happen — especially to children. Daisy finds herself caught up in old griefs and current hatreds, and finally in peril of her own life. The New England setting is excellent, the characters less satisfactory, but acceptable.

When Grass Refuses To Grow, Look To The Groundcovers

There Is Something For Every Kind Of Problem Area In Your Yard

For the hard-to-reach areas of the garden, consider groundcovers as an answer.

With a minimum of attention, you can enjoy them every day of the week — and not have to contend with weekly mowing and edging.

Groud covers include some plants that will tolerate some foot traffic and others that take none at all. Some thrive in the hottest conditions, while others want part shade; most offer bloom, fruit or uniquely distinctive foliage.

From the many types available, your nurseryman can advise you as to the best varieties for your need.

A FAMILIAR cover for areas without foot traffic is Carpet Bugle (Ajuga). It provides a beautiful setting with rosettes of dark green leaves and spkes topped with blue flowers. There is a bronze-leaf variety whose popularity increases year-after-year. Plant Ajuga in sun or shade; it grows in a low, thick carpet.

Another carpet-like grower is Potentilla. Small, divided leaves create a handsome texture — crisp green foliage and yellow flowers in spring and summer are lovely bonuses. It takes some shade, yet thrives in sunny locations, too.

For hot, sunny, dry areas try the durable Trailing Gazanias. They're as colorful as they are functional. Silver-gray foliage fills in quickly and yellow or orange daisy-like flowers are to be enjoyed for most of the year.

THE TRAILING types are ideal for sunny slopes, where blankets of flowers will thrill all who view them.

Another modern quick fill-in type groundcover is the Trailing African Daisy (Osteospermum). Green, shrubby foliage is highlighted by large lavender-pink or white daisies. They provide an abundance of color from mid-winter into summer.

Dichondra lawns continue to retain their popularity as a substitute for grass, and new developments have made them easier to care for.

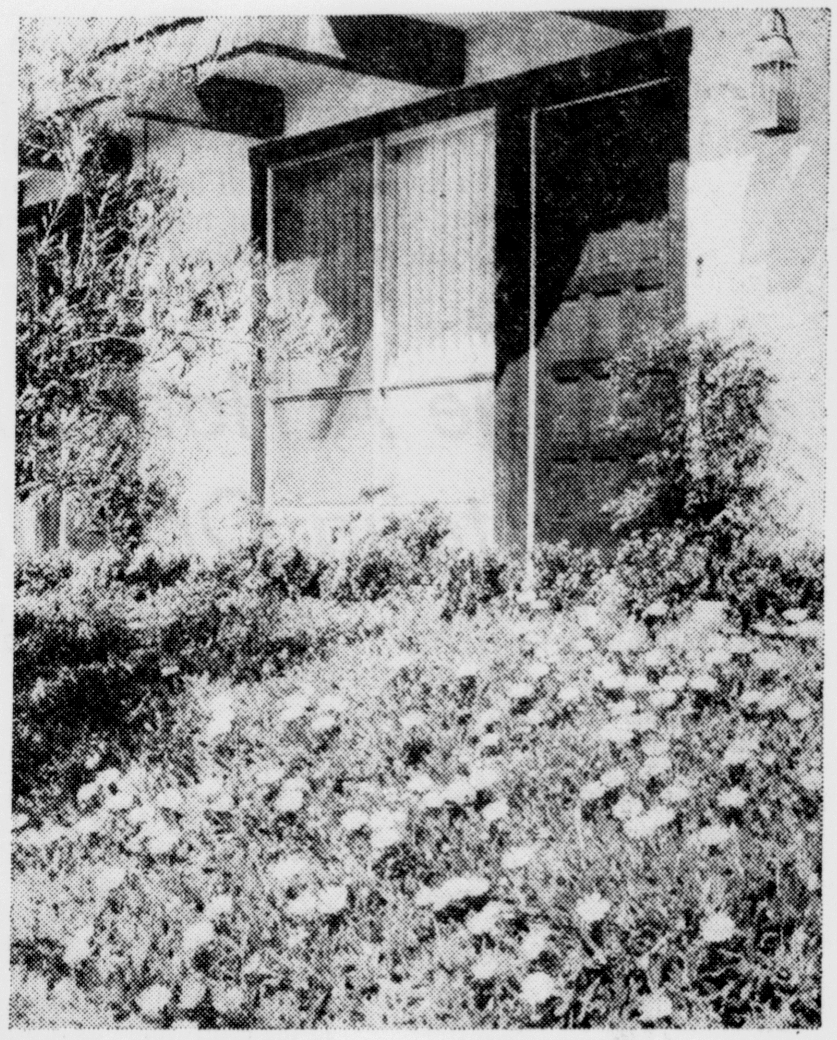

On the market now are special dichondra products that combine weed-killers, grass-killers, insecticides and fertilizers into a single application.

ON THE MARKET now, too, are special plant foods intended for dichondra's specific needs. These are much less likely to burn the leaves of the dichondra than were the fertilizers of the past.

Spot-treating spray cans make it possible to destroy individual pests such as dandelions and plantain without harming the dichondra.

Thus dichondra can truly be included today in any list of groundcovers that qualify as "low maintenance" choices. For a drouth-resistant cover, however, look elsewhere.

For problem garden areas, Marin nurseries have groundcover varieties that thrive under our local conditions. Whether the planting job is for shaded areas, seemingly impossible dry areas, poor soil, or hard-to-water spots, chances are good that your nurseryman can show you a selection of groundcovers to use to create the beauty and effect you desire.

TRAILING GAZANIA is one of the many groundcovers that will thrive under adverse conditions grass cannot endure. It is an excellent choice for slopes or other locations that are hard to reach with a mower, as well. In addition to a seemingly constant display of orange or yellow daisy-like flowers, the Trailing Gazania provides a textured, gray-green foliage that makes its own eye-catching contribution to your landscape. Breakthroughs To Bloom In Gardens Of Future

What will gardens of the future be like?

We have some ideas — and they're not something out of science fiction. For one thing, there will be sensors in the earth. They will tell how dry the plant roots are. When the sensors reach a certain degree of dryness, the garden will be automatically watered.

Along with the water, plant food will be fed to the roots. People of the future will probably use their gardens to better advantage than we do. Privacy walls will have plastic roofs for weather control. The roof will open or close by button . . . or by automatic response to the weather.

WHOLE yards will be flooded by light for evening enjoyment. Evening temperature control in the garden will give extra outdoor play hours for children.

With our renewed appreciation of nature, more and more home gardens will include vegetables and herbs and fruit trees. New hybrid plants will have a toughness to plant diseases and pests.

We are just beginning these breakthroughs. Plant genetics will bring all of us hardy new flowers and vegetables. Students now begin their study of plant genetics in the seventh grade. Their breakthroughs will make future gardens sunny . . .

Ryegrasses To Fore

Ryegrass has long been regarded as something of a second class component in the realm of classy lawnsweed mixtures.

Bluegrasses, fine fescues and bentgrasses still resent annual ryegrass, even if the latter is used only in small portion as a nursegrass. Annual ryegrass have been just too aggressive, usurping space and nutrients meant for the permanent turf, then copping out a season or so later.

Not so with the new breed of fine-leaf perennial ryegrasses, selected for good looks and improved durability. Names you will be running across this year include Compas, NK-100, and Pelo.

Perhaps most distinctive of all is Manhattan, a creation of Rutgers University deliberately blended from a dozen select strains (many of which were discovered in Central Park, New York). Manhattan is about as dense as is a bluegrass, low-growing and dark green.

Of course no ryegrass, even the improved perennial types, can match the traditional fine turf species for neat mowing, restrained growth, or ability to colonize bare soil by spreading. On the other hand, perennial ryegrasses are great for getting a stand of good-looking grass quickly.

Take The Guessing Out Of Gardening

Copyright ©1972 Ortho Garden News Service

By FRANK J. TAYLOR

"The roses looked like they needed feeding, so I gave them some 8-8-8 today," said The Flower Committee, who is my spouse.

"Great, I fed them yesterday," I said. "They're well fed this month."

"Are you sure you fed them yesterday?"

"Come out to the toolshed and I'll tell you," I said.

ON THE DOOR of our garden medicine cabinet is pinned a piece of paper, one of the most important implements in our garden arsenal. It is a simple calendar made by folding up some lined tablet sheets, each divided by a heavy line.

On the left of the line I jot down the dates on which I spray the fuchsias, the roses or trees in the family orchard, with the kind of spray I use. In the right hand space I note the dates of plant feeding of the lawn, vetetables or any other plantings and what plant food I use. There is a page for each month.

Thumbing back, I quickly check the spraying and feeding record for the year.

LIKE MOST home gardeners, we used to spray and feed and water by-guess-and by-gosh, meaning whenever we thought about it.

My first venture in "no-guess gardening" was an orchard watering chart — a sheet of bookkeeper's ledger paper, with the weeks marked at the top of the column, and the rows of trees indicated at the left margin. All I had to do was make a blue check when I watered, a red one when I fed the trees.

The automatic rain system put that chart out of business. The Rainclox did the remembering and the watering. But not the spraying and feeding.

THAT'S WHEN I devised the monthly spraying and plant feeding chart. It is such a simple way of keeping a record that I wonder why I didn't start it years ago. It could have saved us many headaches when bug populations were exploding without our noticing them until we had a real battle on our hands. And it would have kept the lawn green and healthy when we were bemoaning brown spots.

Of course, it doesn't take a chart on the toolshed wall to practice "no-guess" gardening. A little pocket notebook will keep the record. Or a calendar with large enough spaces to make notes in the squares.

But for a forgetful gardener like me, the chart on the door of the toolshed cabinet, in plain sight whenever I use the 8-8-8, is the best bet because it's right there smacking me in the eye.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✔Keep after those snails and slugs with bait or pellets put out at regular intervals.

✔Don't overlook the importance of mulching around shrubs and plants as summer approaches. It is vital for retaining moisture in the earth during the warm, dry weather ahead.

✔Feed your roses if you haven't already done so in May.

✔A summer flower garden of petunias, marigolds, zinnias, alyssum, etc., is an excellent way to provide a meaningful summertime hobby for your youngsters while they are out of school.

✔Shop for hanging baskets with cascading foliage and blooming plants at your nursery. They will provide instant beauty for the patio.

✔For that sloping bank that is difficult to mow or for any spot where grass refuses to grow, consider one of the many fine groundcovers that are available.

✔Include in your summer reading some of the many fine gardening books that have recently been published.

The Aphids Are Here— So Get Out The Spray

Aphids, perhaps the most troublesome insect pest for Bay Area gardeners, are on the prowl again. Warm, dry weather has helped produce a bumper crop here.

These soft-bodied creatures are usually green, but can also be brown, yellow, pink or black, and about an eighth of an inch long when fully grown.

Although aphids are most often found on roses, few plants or trees are absolutely immune to one or more aphid species. They feed by sucking the sap from plant cells.

The wooly apple aphid, one of the less common species, has been especially troublesome on pyracantha this spring.

You'll notice aphid damage as a loss of color or vigor in garden plants. Sometimes curled and crinkled leaves indicate their presence, or malformation of buds, flowers or fruit.

And aphids themselves are only part of the problem. They secrete a sweet, colorless honeydew that attracts ants and can serve as a medium for the growth of black, sooty mold.

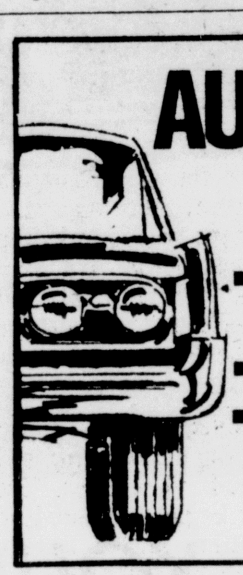

For best results in controlling aphids, apply insecticides before insect populations are too large. Apply a spray like Spectracide (dizainon) or a systemic like Cygon (dimethoate). Spectracide gives excellent control of the wooly apple aphid and will also control ants if they become a problem.

Aphids also facilitate nonchemical controls.

When populations are small, some gardeners attempt to wash them off foliage. This can be effective but too much water can damage blossoms and encourage mildew on roses.

Ladybugs will also control aphids. The probem with biological control in the home garden is getting enough predator insects to control the rapid reproduction of pest insects. Aphids are among the most prolific garden pests.

INSIDE YOUR HOME: Walls and Doors

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY

Thirteen. That's how many doors I counted the day I bought my two-bedroom, one-bath bungalow. Seemed unbelievable.

So far, two of those doors have been removed as unnecessary; another one has been blocked out. But three more remain that serve no useful function, not even privacy; so why do I let them remain?

There are some walls that aren't needed either. And I'm about ready for a break-out session!

Uninterrupted space is rarely enjoyed in today's private homes and apartments, even those the builders label "open-plan" interiors. We seem to box ourselves into cells within cells — breakfast nooks separated from cooking rooms, dressing rooms isolated from sleeping areas, laundry rooms, playrooms, garages with their own four walls and doors.

Sounds like a box fixation, doesn't it? Even some ceilings fall into my classification of box-making non-essentials.

IF YOU HAVE ever watched a new home being constructed you'll remember the delightful stage when the structural framework is up, but not the interior walls and ceiling panels. It's the most striking period in the construction process — especially if the roof is peaked or hipped. There's an airy quality and a basic honesty because everything that is exposed is essential to the existence of the house.

Then someone starts partitioning that delightful space into a series of neat boxes. It's like cutting the cake for a brithday party — everyone or everything must get a fair share.

But you can break the rules. I found this out on a recent visit to a San Francisco Bay Area house.

In what was basically a one-room home, all the bare bones of construction were left exposed for everyone to enjoy. Unusual storage concepts had been devised such as one storage wall that housed rollaway beds, a doorless mini-pantry of shelves created between the wall studs, hanging baskets for storing smaller items, and even a few things actually resting upon the structural beams overhead.

THE ONLY DOORS in this vacation home were those to the bathroom and the main entry, and the only really isolated space was the bath-dressing room. The experience of sitting in this one integrated sapce was supersatisfying.

How can you visualize your house without all this partitioning?

It might be fun to draw a floor plan of the way it looks now. Then start tampering. Erase the wall between kitchen and back porch or dinette. Think of it as a low divider or perhaps a breakfast bar.

Could one wall of the garage be removed to reveal a view of the garden? Or be replaced with glass? How nice to drive into a view.

Who uses the master bedbath? Do you really need excessive privacy? Maybe some opening up there would make the bedroom more expansive.

It's worth the time. Even if you don't make a major change now, you might learn a few space tricks for a later box-breaking program.

WHAT IS MISSING from this room? The usual ceiling. And it is all for the better. The high, arching, exposed beams create an air of spaciousness that avoids the "boxy" look. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Boxenbaum received a Burlington House Award for this revamping of their Brentwood, Calif., home.

Vegetables For The Walls —

Vegetables are for eating — but not always. Instead of tossing them all into the cooking kettle, why not save out a few and make a clever wall plaque for your kitchen?

"Pressed vegetable plaque" is the name for this unusual idea from Better Homes and Gardens' new book, "Kitchen Planning and Decorating" (hardbound, $2.95, Meredith Corp.).

Pressing vegetables resembles the popular craft of flower pressing. But instead of flower petals, thin slices of firm-meated vegetables such as carrots, eggplants, cauliflowers, beets or mushrooms are used.

The vegetable slices are pressed and dried for several weeks. Then they are arranged and glued to pieces of wood that have been tinted with washes of acrylic paints. The vegetable slices may be left their natural colors or lightly tinted.

Let imagination, available wall space, and color scheme guide you in planning the arrangement.

TO MAKE A pressed vegetable plaque, first remove the foliage from firm-meated vegetables. Using very sharp knife, cut center slices about an eighth of an inch thick from them.

Place the slices between paper towels for about an hour to blot up the moisture. Then arrange them without overlapping between pads of newspapers. Cover these pads with a board weighted with bricks or other heavy objects. Press the foliage separately in large books, or under a weight.

Every two days for a week or 10 days, remove the damp newspapers and replace them with dry ones to prevent mildew; then allow the materials to dry undisturbed for a minimum of two weeks.

CUT THE PLAQUES from plywood, pressed hardboard, or balsa shingles in the size and shape you want. Tint them with washes of acrylic paints and allow them to dry.

Spread a thin coat of glue on the backs of the vegetables and press them onto the plaques. Place them under a lightweight until the glue is dry. Paint the entire plaque with a coat of matte acrylic medium. Next, arrange the leaves and smooth them down to eliminate air bubbles. Allow them to dry before brushing them with three or four coats of matte acrylic medium.

Putting Wasted Space To Use

No one ever seems to have enough storage space for kitchen utensils.

You can turn wasted space on the inside of cupboard or closet doors into useful storage area with perforated hardboard (pegboard) and specially designed hooks. It's an inexpensive way to store a variety of kitchen tools and utensils.

Several kinds of perforated hardboard are available, usually an eighth or quarter inch thick. One popular type is dark brown in color and can be painted to match your kitchen. Perforated hardboard is also available in other colors.

Although perforated hardboard comes in various sheet sizes, the most common is four-by-eight feet. You can have the panels cut to smaller sizes at most building supply stores.

These tips are from Better Homes and Gardens new book, "Kitchen Planning and Decorating."

A Kitchen Desk Has Many Uses

A kitchen desk or message center has many uses, say the editors of Better Homes and Gardens new book, "Kitchen Planning and Decorating."

It's an excellent place to store clipped recipes, bills, letters, and instruction booklets. When equipped with a chair, it's also a relaxing spot for phoning, writing letters, or browsing through a cook book.

The message center can be a complete desk with many "nooks and crannies," or simply an extension of a work counter with drawers nearby for storage. Cookbooks can be stored easily on the counter surface, and a bulletin board will keep messages handy.

Doc Likes His Role After 17 Years

By VERNON STONE

Humor and irascibility lurk in the eyes of Milburn Stone as he begins his 18th year playing gruff old Doc Adams in "Gunsmoke."

"Tired of playing the same role after 17 years?" he asked. "Hell, no. I love every minute of it."

AN ACTOR since 1922, and well enough established as a character man in the theater, motion pictures and early television, Stone was a dependable journeyman. But Doc Adams has made him a star.

"Every tick of the clock brings me closer to what I'd really have been if I'd been born Dr. Galen Adams. I'm getting closer to his age all the time."

Stone very nearly missed aging at all last year. He underwent open heart surgery and for a while every tick of his heart could have been the last. But he is robust now. His color is good. He weighs 150 pounds, just as he did when he was a kid in high school.

ANYONE FACING heart surgery can gain courage talking to Milburn, a name he detests.

"There's a story of how Doc Adams got his first name," the actor said. "On the show his shingle reads 'Dr. G. Adams.' The producers and writers have never given him a first name.

"Then along came an episode where an old friend visits Dodge City. Naturally he had to call Doc by his first name. So they called me and asked me to think up a fitting given name for Doc.

"Well I didn't think George fitted the character, or any other of the common names beginning with the letter G.

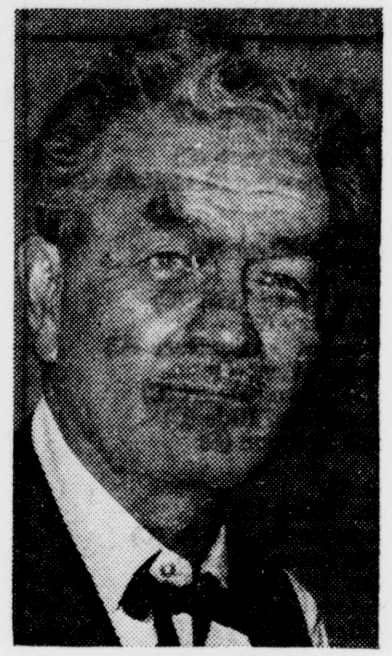

"FINALLY I thought of a name that I hated more than Milburn. That's Galen. And because Doc would hate it too, he only used his initial on the shingle outside his office."

Milburn is so much into the character is as genuine as it might be for a close friend.

Every year he is asked by someone to account for the astonishingly long success story of "Gunsmoke" on the tube. Each year he scratches his head and pulls on an ear lobe in the manner of Doc and splays his fingers, palms up, in a gesture of dismay.

"WHO CAN say?" he asked.

"There are many reasons. But I've concluded the biggest single explanation is that the cast and crew get along so well together. I think the audience feels that. We often hear people say we look like we're having a good time on the show. And we are.

MILBURN STONE
Humor and irascibility

"I've seen many series break up because of petty differences and jealousies.

"There's another thing, too. We're the world's leading authorities on characters. None of us ever questions what the other is doing if he changes the dialogue or some of his moves.

"Dillon, Kitty, Festus and Doc all have their little ways of doing things. Directors know this and leave us alone.

"All this is nonsense. The real reason for our success is that we have a damned good show."

Four Million Viewers For Electric Company

More than four million youngsters are watching the experimental new television program, "The Electric Company."

An in-school audience survey conducted by the Research Triangle Institute found an estimated two million viewers watching the show in classrooms across the United States. Another two million youngsters watch repeat showings of the show later in the day at home, according to A.C. Nielsen studies.

The daily half-hour series is designed to teach basic reading skills and is aimed at a target audience of second-through fourth graders.

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

CBS will try to give some relief from the routine of summer reruns by broadcasting a five-part dramatic series, "The Life of Leonardo da Vinci." The Italian-made series stars Philippe Leroy as the adult da Vinci.

NBC's one-hour "Take a Giant Step" program for youngsters on Saturdays will become a half-hour weekly known as "Talking with a Giant" in the fall.

"NFL Monday Night Football" returns to the ABC air in the fall for its third season. First broadcast is Sept. 18 from Bloomington, Minn., where Washington plays Minnesota. The Frank Gifford, Don Meredith, Howard Cosell unit again will handle the telecasts.

NBC's "Ironside" series has started production in Hollywood on episodes for the 1972-73 season, its sixth. Elizabeth Baur, who made her debut this season as the distaff member of Ironside's police unit is again playing Officer Fran Belding.

NBC's 1972 football schedule consists of a record 93 games including the climactic Super Bowl after the regular season of American Football Conference telecasts.

The ninth season of "Summer Semester" on the CBS network offers two study courses. "The Evolution of Cities" and "East against West; The Cold War and Beyond."

The next three post-season Sugar Bowl college football games in New Orleans will be telecast on Dec. 31 instead of on New Year's Day as in the past. Also, they will be aired in prime night time instead of during the daytime.

The National Cowboy Hall of Fame voted its 1972 Wrangler Award for the year's outstanding motion picture to "The Cowboys," which stars John Wayne.

Nick Vanoff, former co-producer of "The Hollywood Palace," will produce next season's "The Julie Andrew's Show" at ABC.

Joan Blondell will be a regular cast member of the new Quinn Martin television series, "Banyon" starring Robert Forster in the title role.

Character actor Edward Andrews will be featured in a two-part episode of "The Dick Van Dyke Show" next fall.

PHIL SILVERS, winner of a 1972 Tony Award, will be seen as a guest star in an encore colorcast of the "Dean Martin Show" Thursday at 10 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4. Silvers appears in sketches and does a solo comedy routine.

WILLIAM WINDOM is seen in his role as John Monroe, the imaginative cartoonist-writer, that won him an Emmy Award when the "My World and Welcome to It" begins a series of repeat showings Thursday at 8 p.m. on Channels 5 and 10 as one of the CBS summer replacement shows. Windom was also a star of "The Farmer's Daughter" series.

On The Stereo Scene

Yma Sumac Is Back On Records And She Hasn't Lost An Octave

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER

Yma Sumac is back.

The fantastic vocal range of Miss Sumac, which covers five octaves, has not been narrowed in the 22 years since she first appeared on the scene.

In today's era of electronic sounds it would seem that Miss Sumac's voice is an exotic relic of the past. But this is not true.

On "Miracles" (London XPS 608), Miss Sumac blends her voice into a surging of rock music. And the voice is an instrument which Miss Sumac uses to perfection

Its low-register notes slide neatly into the rhythms of Chuck Cowan's guitar and Roger Cowan's bass. Richard Person on organ and Skippy Switzer on drums complete the rock group.

Lex Baxter, the orchestra leader who introduced Miss Sumac as a recording artist with "The Voice of Xtabay" in 1950, has returned to preside over this session. All the compostions with the exception of "El Condor Pasa," were written by Baxter.

"Miracles" is more than just a rock album. It is an unusual experiment in the sound of the 1970s.

TWO OTHER significant rock albums are "Burgers" by Hot Tuna Grunt (FTR-1004) and "Smokin" by Humble Pie (A&M SP 4342).

The Pie has become one of the hottest of the rock bands and Steve Marriott turns in outstanding performances with the help of Clem Clempson, Jerry Shirley and Greg Ridley. Papa John Creach lends real class to the Hot Tuna session with his violin and vocals.

"THE HISTORY of Eric Clapton" (Atco SD2-803) is an anthology of this hero guitarist's best work. It takes him through his participation with assorted groups, including Yardbirds, John Mayall, Cream, Blind Faith and Delaney and Bonnie.

Clapton has been one of the most innovative of the rock musicians, always subjecting himself to change and never allowing himself to fall into a rut. Among the selections in this two-LP set are "I Ain't Got You," "Sunshine of Your Love," "Crossroads," "Spoonful," "Only You and I Know," "Blues Power" and "Tell the Truth."

CHALLENGE OF LIFE

For what you might have been,
Or what you may have possessed
Is but a pipedream,
Clouding the reality of life
Your life, to be pursued,
To be lived as it was meant,
With emphasis on challenge
Of achievements that are Within your reach;
Sample life freely,
But be best
At what you choose . . . forever.

NOVATO — JOHN W. GATES

WILDFLOWERS

Wildflowers bloom in the open fields
Sun-kissed, rain-watered, blown by wind,
Away from roofs and other shields
Wildflowers bloom in the open fields.
Put in flower boxes, their life yields —
If you transplant them you have sinned,
Wildflowers bloom in the open fields —
